APPEASE DAUGHTERS-IN-LAW

No Two Women Can Run the Same House Without Clashing Over Issues

A woman who has made a success of being a mother-in-law gives the following advice about how to get along without friction with a daughter-in-law. "To begin with," she says, "never live with your son's wife. Keep your own house, if you have one. If you haven't, park yourself in a hotel or boarding house, or settle down for the duration in an Old Ladies' Home. Just remember that no two women can try to run the same house without getting in each other's hair.

"Be the appeaser. Be the one to hold out the olive branch and give the glad hand of welcome to the new arrival in the family circle. For some unknown reason the mother-in-law always feels that the daughter-in-law should make all the overtures in friendliness and do everything possible to conciliate her husband's mother. This is wrong. The mother should take the initiative because she is older, has seen more of the world and should know more about how to handle young girls diplomatically.

"Make a friend of your daughter-in-law. That is the only way you can keep your son. If his wife doesn't like you, she will separate him from you. There is nothing that men dread so much as quarrels between their wives and mothers, and if John's wife always is running to him with complants about you and if there is a scene every time he wants to come to see you, in time you will lose him.

Take Back Seat Gracefully

"Don't be a jealous cat. Take the back seat in your son's life gracefully. Don't try to be the main influence in his life any longer. That is his wife's prerogative. Don't resent his loving his wife better than he does you. His marriage will be a failure if he still stays tied to Mother's apron strings and you don't want that to happen to him.

"Never call your son's attention to his wife's faults. He has got to live with her so build her up in his eyes so that he will always think he was a grand picker and got a world's wonder, and will go to his grave without finding out what a poor manager she is and that she gads too much.

"Never offer your daughter-in-law advice, or tell her how you do things. You may have to bite your tongue off to keep from making suggestions when you see her doing the things blunderingly that you know how to do so well, but great will be your reward. For when she finds out that you are not going to try to boss her or interfere with her in any way, she will drop her attitude of always being ready to start a fight.

"As soon as your baby boy is born begin preparing yourself for his wedding. Don't think of him as belonging to you for life. He is just loaned to you for a few years. Then he will leave you, so build up interests for yourself. Make friends. Develop hobbies. Be ready to live alone and like it when he is gone, instead of being one of the miserable old women who are lost themselves when they lose their children.

"And finally, don't always be under foot. Make your visits short. So you always will be welcome in your son's house.

Young Lady Hero Of Soviet Drive

In the Soviet Union one of the heroes of the Red Army's present offensive is a woman, Lt.-Col. Evdokia Bershanskaya. She is the commander of an Air Regiment, which in recent weeks made 10,539 sorties and blew up some 800 German military objectives, 83 oil dumps, nine military trains, three railway stations, and other objectives.

This gallant Russian woman is only 31 years old. She wear four decorations, one of which was awarded her before the war. Born of a Cossack family in the Caucasus, she lost her parents in childhood and at the age of nine was placed in a children's home.

After graduating from secondary school she prepared to become a teacher. Instead she became interested in aviation and obtained permission to enter the flying school of the Civil Air Fleet. After several years she became a pilot instructor and was later appointed Flight Commander. It was at this time she met and married Pilot Peter Bershanskaya.

When war broke out in 1941, Bershanskaya was an air navigator with the rank of major. Leaving their four-year-old son in the care of an uncle, the parents went to the front, the husband being sent to the North and his wife to the South where she and her regiment have hammered so successfully at the Germans.

Grace Comstock Pledges Vows

Standards of pink and white gladioli formed a lovely floral background in St. Paul's Presbyterian church, Monday afternoon, for the wedding of Grace Isabel Comstock, daughter of Mrs. Manson Comstock. 219 Sherbrooke street, to Writer Donald T. McIntyre, R.C.N. V.R., son of Mr. and Mrs. John McIntyre. Rev. Dr. J D Smart officiated, with Mr. Martin B. Chenhall at the organ.

Given in marriage by her brother-in-law, Mr. Stewart K. Widdess, the bride was charming in a floor-length period gown of white faille taffeta. A finger-tip veil of white net fell in soft folds from a Mary Queen of Scots headdress, and she carried a shower bouquet of roses and bouvardia. She was attended by her sister, Mrs. Stewart K. Widdess, as matron of honor. She was frocked in white silk marquisette with white Venice lace bonnet, and carried an old-fashioned bouquet of pink roses, bouvardia and cornflowers. John McIntyre, brother of the groom, was best man.

Accuses Friend as Husband-snatcher

SHE BLAMED her best friend for her husband's growing indifference . . . but it was really the fault of her own "one neglect"—carelessness about feminine hygiene. Switchgear Wins From Plazas Taking First Game By 7-5 Score

The Switchgear took the first game of the City League finals on Monday night at Riverside when they defeated the Plazas 7 to 5 before one of the largest crowds of the season. Leading up until the eighth Wilson for the Plazas weakened after Playford had hit a home run and Brockley and Nicholls had singled to tie the score. Stokoe went in to pitch, but lacked control and walked the first two batters and a single by Padget scored the two winning runs.

Up until the break in the eighth the Plazas had had the best of the game, but the winners were playing good consistent ball. Both teams started off strong, with Holmes the first batter up for the Switchgear hitting a home run into deep left field. Tompkins was safe on a nice single behind second, and Playford hit into left field. Wilson held the Switchgear scoreless until the 7th when Nicholls doubled, Akers was safe on a bingo at short and Nicholls scored on Padgett's single. In the second, fifth and sixth innings the Switchgear only put up nine men, with Heal and Ellis pulling a nice double in the fifth.

Heal for the Plazas started off with a single over third. Pryde singled through short and Blewett doubled to score Heal. Plazas scored two more in the second with Tucker singling. Wilson was safe on Mowry's bad peg to first and Tucker scored. Plazas went out in order in the third, sixth, and eighth but scored twice in the seventh. Wilson was safe on a drive over third, Heal walked, Burton singled to left field, but Wilson was caught going home on a perfect peg from Carpenter to Mowry. Blewett singled scoring Heal, and Starr hit to score Burton. The best play of the evening with a catch by Blewett in centre field when he ran back to take Mowry's high fly spearing it with a jump into the air as it appeared to go over his head.

Both teams meet again this evening as the series is the best four out of seven games.

With The Armed Forces

The editor of this column will welcome extracts from letters from boys serving or any other information concerning them.

By JEAN STENTON

Movies, writing rooms, and sports activities, just a short distance back of the front lines in France is the magnificent service operated by the Auxiliary Services for the benefit of Canadian soldiers. One of the most active leaders there in this work is Capt. Al B. Clark, who represents the Y.M.C.A. His wife lives at 272 Prince Street.

Trenches play a most important part in the life of Capt. Clark. He writes they practically live in trenches 4 by 4 by 2, and every time they move, everyone has to pitch in and dig. This is one of the hardest jobs they have.

Many flash impressions have etched themselves in a series of pictures across his mind. He finds it most confusing after two years overseas to be driving on the right side of the road again and is frequently getting into trouble by forgetting.

Aboard an L.T.C. the Auxiliary Services officer slept peacefully during the crossing to France and only awakened when the craft gently nudged the shore. For two days prior to reaching France, the men had worked diligently on a Y.M.C.A. tea wagon, waterproofing it, so that when it had to be wheeled through the water to shore it would not be damaged. The shore staff had worked so well with an improvised pier that the tea wagon did not even get its tires wet and it took the disgusted workers half a day to peel off the waterproofing.

Wreckage Everywhere.

Capt. Clark wrote that the villages he passed through had been terribly wrecked and declared that it is pitiful to see the old people sitting beside the ruins of their homes—perhaps only a corner of a building.

Th most prized souvenir for the Canadian soldiers no is a spring belt which German machine-gunneds wear to help carry their guns. The men are always searching for them.

In one section as Capt. Clark and his unit advanced the R.C.A.F. boys fixed up an old barn for the movies and a concert, and they were in fine spirits. In another spot he fixed up a screen on the back of a wagon to show pictures.

Expensive Work.

The experts have figured out that it costs more to kill one German soldier than to shoot down an enemy plane. To kill one army man costs the Allies $55,000, and to bring down one enemy plane costs $44,000.

One American statistician asserts that what is used to kill one man to-day would have exterminated 66,000 men in the time of Julius Caesar, when men could be killed for 70 cents each. During the last war it is believed that the United States spent $22,000 for every Hun shot.

Since the beginning of the war in 1939, it has been roughly estimated that 10,000,000 soldiers have lost their lives in all theatres of operation. This has been calculated to show that the direct expense so far in World War II. at five hundred million dollars, but the "indirect" figures would dwarf this sum.

A marine sergeant who hadn't received a letter for ten years, thought it was something of a record. He told a newspaper correspondent and the news was printed all over the country. The next morning he received 641 letters, and ever since, the post office has had to assign him a special bag.

Grateful For Smokes

Gnr. Albert Budd, who is serving with the R.C.A. in Italy wrote recently thanking the Workers' Unemployed Association for cigarettes which he had received. He said that not only were the smokes themselves useful, but they made the men feel satisfied that the people at home had not forgotten them. Gnr. Budd declared that he was not only writing for himself to say thank you, but for the men who were too busy or no longer able to.

PTE. MARIE S. DOIG

Pte. Marie S. Doig daughter of Mrs. Henry Jones, 227 Princess street, is serving overseas with the C.W.A.C. She enlisted in June, 1943 and was a driver in Sussex, N.B. for several months when she went overseas, she relinquished her rank of corporal and reverted to private. Pte. Doig was formerly employed at the John Inglis Company, Toronto.

Lucky Break

German war material is showing a steady deterioration in France, writes Lieut. Gordon Clarke, who has been wounded for the second time. He is the grandson of Mrs. J. E. Emerson, 297 Park Street.

The young soldier was engaged in street fighting when a stick grenade burst behind him, only five feet away. Ordinarily, this would have meant certain death, but due to the poor material he was only wounded in the hip and back. He expressed the opinion that the Nazis must be running low on ammunition when a smaller amount of explosive powder was being used. Lieut. Clarke said that his wounds were no more serious than the first time when he was back in action within about two weeks, and he expressed the hope that he would be in the lins shortly with the S. D. and G. Highlanders.

Doing Nicely

Cpl. R. B. Harvey, whose wife lives at 182 Dufferin street, and who was recently reported seriously wounded, is doing nicely. His nurse wrote that the shrapnel had been removed from his hip and that his progress was good. Cpl. Harvey was with the S.D. and G. Highlanders.

Two Daughters Now

A week after Petty Officer Jerry Creighton R.C.N.V.R., returned to Eastern Canada to train as an E. R. A., he became the father of twin daughters, born in Toronto. The young sailor is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Creighton, Romaine street, and was interested in rugby and hockey before he enlisted. He was formerly employed at the C.G.E. and a brother, C.P.O Emmett Creighton, E.R.A., is at present home on furlough.

SGT. W. A. WALLACE

Although they are pretty tough the Nazis are not backing their troops like the British, writes Sgt. W. Wallace, R.R. 7, Peterborough, who is fighting in France with the Glengarrians. At one time an employee of the Rehill Fuel and Builders Supply company, Sgt. Wallace spent seven years on an Otonabee farm before enlisting in 1940.

The action which won Lieut. William Angus Paul Smith the Military Cross, is told very casually in a letter he wrote to his parents before he knew of his decoration. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Smith, King Street, Linday.

"I went out with some infantry to clean out a spot that has been bothering them, supposed to be just a few Germans in a slit trench. I went to the spot in my tank and couldn't see anything, but there was a hedge around the field which looked suspicious.

"I started to machine gun it with my turret gun and heard over the radio set that some enemy armor was moving in. That showed it was no place to hang around so I tried to speed the job up. Then I started to use my other gun which was on top of the tank and was having a swell time when—twang, I got it in the arm. When I went to get back into my turret, the Jerries slashed another one through my tin hat. Then a third got my radio set. I managed to finish the job and then return."

May Be Safe

Mrs. Sidney Pellow, Lansdowne street, is feeling hopeful that she may be hearing of her son, Pte. Donald Pllow, who was reported missing in the early part of the invasion. Her hopes were raised by a letter from his commanding officer, Major Archie MacDonald, which said that he thought circumstances indicated he might have been picked up by German medical corps men.

Pte. Pellow was one of a group chosen to go on patrol on the night of June 22 and when the men reached their objective heavy enemy fire was noted. His Captain was injured and got back to headquarters and a search party was sent out. When he had not been located at dawn, a second one covered the area thoroughly where the patrol had been and there was no sign of him. His officers believe he was wounded and probably picked up by the enemy.

Westclox Beats Aircraft By 6-3 Count

Crossing five runs in the eighth inning almost exclusively on errors, Westclox built up a 3-run edge over the Aircraft team, and took a 6-3 decision, after nine furious innings in a Ladies' League softball game Monday evening at Ashburnham Bowl. This gives the Westclox top spot in the semi-final play-off series and sets the stage for the playoffs, which will be a four out of seven affair, the first game being played Wednesday evening.

Monday night's game developed into a pitching duel from the very start, and an interesting feature of the tilt was that both teams ran up their scores almost totally on errors. Aircraft started the scoring in the fifth frame, the previous innings being marked by little hitting and no scoring.

Score 3 Times

Marg. Selkirk singled through short, and Audrey Patterson was safe on an error at first base. Pat Wilson retired via the strike-out path, and Rose Redpath singled heftily into right field. Isobel Bullock nabbed the ball after a few bounces, and threw it wildly in the direction of first base. Nona Whetung was unable to grab it, and Miss Selkirk came down the home stretch to score the first run of the game. Miss Patterson took advantage of the confusion to dash to third base, and again a wild throw advanced the runner home. Miss Redpath, who was also doing considerable base-hopping in the meantime, finally scored on the play that put Helen Hunt out at first base. This gave the swing-skirted Aircrafters a 3-run lead.

Westclox Scores Once

Westclox started the ball rolling in their half of the same inning. It didn't start any too favorably for them, with Isobel Bullock shooting an easy roller to Eleanor Craig, and Verna Patterson scarcely making first on an error by her sister, Audrey Patterson, at second. Then Joyce Withers whipped one clean through Pat Wilson's short stop post, but Aircraft recovered the ball to throw Miss Patterson out at second base. Aggie Anderson, up next, beat out the most powerful blow Westclox mustered during the evening, sending a whizzing ball out into deep left field, where Rose Redpath made a gallant try for it but missed. Before the ball was brought back into sight of the Aircrafters, Joyce Withers raced home, and Miss Anderson had reached third base.

In the seventh frame, Aircraft went down in order.

Westclox' attempt in the seventh was similar; two flies to Pat Wilson, and a strike-out, Aircraft went down in order in the eighth frame too, but it was a different story on the Westclox bench.

5 Runs by Westclox

It started with Joyce Withers surrendering to first base. Aggie Anderson shot one that bounced out of Norma Strickland's hands, reached first, then dashed to second when Pat Wilson threw a wild one to first base. Viola McLean shot one through short, and Aggie Anderson scored. Nona Whetung struck out and Marjorie Hawthorne hit over second base, stealing second soon after. It was all-out for the runs now, and the Westclockers were taking chances. Barbara Rome bunted cleverly, sending the ball towards first base edging the foul line, and while Aircraft waited hoping for the umpire to call "foul" Miss McLean scored. When the ball was out of control momentarily, Miss Hawthorne decided the time was ripe, and scored. Up next, Beryl Dobbin was walked. Isobel Bullock hit a powerful blow that was low, and intercepted by Norma Strickland, who quickly threw it in the direction of third base. But the throw was too high and Helen Hunt missed it, sending Rome in to score, and also scoring Dobbin.

Ready For Playoffs

This win for Westclox sends the two teams into the play-off series and both are powerful, and strong in all departments. The fact that Monday's game was won on errors, makes it clear the play-offs are going to be sizzling affairs. They get underway Wednesday evening, with Westclox and Aircraft playing the first game in their four out of seven schedule.

Fans 10

Pitching for Aircraft, Norma Strickland was easily the star of the game. Fanning no fewer than 10, she walked 2, and held the opposition to 8 blows. Two of the Westclox batters were fanned three times each out of four walks to the plate.

Joyce Withers hurled a good game for the Westclox team. Although marked by fewer strike-outs, she played a steady brand of ball, that helped when the going became tough. On the statistics, she fanned three, walked none, and kept the Aircraft players under control with 4 hits.

Aggie Anderson was the hitting star for the Westclox team, getting 3 hits out of four trips to bat. Annette De Carlo, Norma Strickland, Eleanor Craig and Margaret Selkirk paced the hitting for Aircraft, donating one blow each.

In nine innings of play Aircraft had 3 batters left on bases, Westclox had four.

A humorous sidelight of the game was during the third inning; sisters Audrey and Verna Patterson, each playing second base for the Arcraft and Westclox teams respectively, bumped into each other as Audrey raced down from second in an attempt to oust Verna at first. Verna made it, but the two sisters did the same thing all over again when Verna dashed to second, and Audrey attempted to even the score then.

Classy Girls' Softball Team To Play Peterborough All-Stars

Toronto Sunday Morning Class, the classiest girls' softball team in Canada, is scheduled to play the Peterborough All-Stars on Saturday evening at Riverside Park at 6.45. All proceeds of the game are going to the Milk for Britain Fund, and this team from Toronto is paying its own way to the city.

The Toronto girls in the past few weeks have been doing nobly in helping war charities and the Red Cross. On August 7 they played in Belleville when over $800 was raised for the Red Cross. Last week they played in Guelph to help the Memorial Fund and on August 13 4,000 people jammed the Sunnyside Park to see them play a team of girls from Flint, Michigan.

Thelma Golden Fidler, Canada's outstanding girl pitcher, is going to accompany the team. The Toronto girls play a fine brand of ball which is said to be just as sparkling as the uniforms they wear.

Ab Delahaye, who is coaching the All-Stars, has lined up a team of heavy-hitting, fast fielding players. Peterborough girls have been playing good ball all season and they should be able to give a good account of themselves against this classy outfit. Norma Strickland of Aircraft will pitch and Isobel Bullock of Westclox will do the catching. The infield will be composed of Nona Whetung of Westclox on first, Eleanor Craig of Aircraft on second; Viola McLean of Westclox at short, and Marg. Hawthorne of Westclox at third. The tournament's premier rinks event the Eaton Gold Trophy —had narrowed down to the quarter-finals by the time play got underway this morning with play for the Henry Trophy in the same round. A new sprint champion loomed from Trinidad when, at an intercolonial Olympiad at Georgetown, British Guiana, yesterday, George Lewis, a policeman from that colony, dashed the 100 yards in a reported 8 2-5 seconds, equalling the world record.

Former N. B. A. world's featherweight cahmpion, Phil Terranova, of New York, took a 10-round beating last night at Providence at the hands of Vince Dell 'Orto of Philadelphia. After the official engagement, a fistic display developed when Bobby Gleason, Terranova's manager, punched Referee Tim Ferrick and was suspended.

Brintons Defeat De Laval 12 to 5

The Brintons defeated the De Laval 12 to 5 in an Industrial Softball League fixture Monday evening at the Brinton field. Art Philipps, who received good support from his team-mates, pitched steady ball and also helped the cause along by banging out a homer and a triple. V. Rose and R. Dorrell collected three hits apiece, doubles by E. Jones and L. McGarrity, a triple and a nice running catch by S. Craig, a double play unassisted by C. Corbett were the highlights of the Brinton boys.

Joe Gatfield went the distance on the slab for the De Laval team. He was nicked for 17 hits but his support was shaky at times. Double play unassisted by De Laval shortstop and steady receiving by Catcher I. Pearson were features of the game.

Pirates And Reds Battle For Second Place

By JACK HAND,
Associated Press Sport Writer.

Lost in the shuffle of St. Louis Cardinals victory sweep toward a Labor Day flag clinching, Pittsburgh Pirates and Cincinnati Reds to-day were locked in a second-place scrap that had all the earmarks of a battle.

Tied for runner-up spot and second dough in the World Series split, the Pirates and Reds had the field all to themselves, running from first place St. Louis to fourth place Chicago.

Pittsburgh took two decisions from Boston Braves yesterday, a regularly scheduled game behind Preacher Roe's two -hit chucking, 7-0, after Rip Sewell had hurled them to 12-inning 7-6 win in a "suspended" game held over from a 5-5 8th inning tie on July 2, Red Barrett was charged with both defeats.

Cincinnati could not help themselves from being tied for second as they won on their only chance, stopping New York, 6-3 as Bucky Walters became the first National Leaguer to notch win No. 17.

Cooper Wins.

Mort Cooper protected the Cards' 17½ game lead by scattering nine Brooklyn hits for a 4-2 St. Louis triumph over Hal Gregg. The Phils continued to take the wind out of Chicago's second-place aspirations with Ken Raffensberger outpitching Les Fleming, 6-1.

Young Emmet O'Neill continued to do his best to ease the pain of Tex Hughson's departure by tossing Boston Red Six to a four-hit, 5-1, edge over St. Louis Browns.

New York pulled one out of the bag to trim Chicago, 2-1, in 13 innings. Nick Etten saved the champs from a shutout with a ninth-inning homer and Johnny Lindell's double and a Chicago error gave Ernie Bonham the overtime verdict. Bobo Newsom spoiled Detroit's visit by pitching the A's to a 7-5 night game verdict and Washington nosed out Cleveland for the third successive time, 8-5 with Al Carrasquel winning and Steve Cromek losing.

Yesterday's Stars

Tony Lupien, Phils—Paced 11-hit attack on three Chicago hurlers with triple and two singles, driving in two runs and stealing one base in 6-1 Philadelphia victory.

Bucky Walters, Reds — Became first National League pitcher to win 17 games and chipped in with two singles, driving in two runs in Cincinnati's drubbing of New York.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By SYD THOMAS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO, August 15—(CP). — Johnny Longden, tough little Alberta-born jockey, will have to be practically nailed down in the coffin before he gives up th chance to ride a winner in an important stake race.

Commenting on Longden's winning ride on First Fiddle in the Butler Handicap with a broken foot Harry (Calgary Albertan) Scott recalled he did nearly the same thing in the 1934 Alberta Derby. That time Johnny rode Peachstone to victory even though he had broken his leg the day before the race.

These Westerners are hard to keep down apparently.

The outdoors life:

Jim Railton, Vancouver sportsman and outdoor lover, has plans to popularize the outdoors life in British Columbia after the war. He wants to take hold of the youngsters and conduct regular classes in handling firearms, looking after fishing paraphernalia, and the lore of woodcraft.

Here and there:

Truly a ball umpire's lot is none too happy nowadays, with always the danger he may lose his job to non-union scab labor. That Winnipeg ump who dared an obstreperous fan to come down and do a better job if he could, learned the hard way when the fan actually came down on the field to take over the play-calling duties. Only the vigilance of league officials saved the day for his umps and deprived the fans of some rare sport.... Jote Johansen of Calgary laid one buck on the line for the handicap mare Calla Donna three years ago when she was an uninspiring three-year-old. She's been a consistent winner in the three seasons since then, and this summer won over $1,000 in purses— a rather neat interest return on Johansen's investment.

Mess Room Chatter

By LOUIS V. HUNTER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

SOMEWHERE IN NORMANDY, Aug. 15.—(CP).—When Mustangs on a Normandy bombing mission took time out to attack a superior formation of enemy aircraft, two Canadians were among those who marked up victories. PO. H. H. Cush, of Calgary, destroyed an ME 109, while PO. R. B. Benoit, of Montreal, assisted an R.A.F. wing cmdr. to down another 109, and was credited with "half a destroyed." The primary object of the Mustang's mission was to bomb German troops, railway trains and transports.

A JU. 88 fighter was blown up in the air over Normandy by an R.C.A.F. Nighthawk squadron Mosquito piloted by Wing Cmdr. J. W. Reid, of Sydney, N.S., the squadron commander.

"He was zooming around," said Reid. "I hit him with one short burst, and the port motor exploded and he finally crashed just south of the Seine River and blew up." Reid's navigator was Flt. Lt. John Peacock, of Westmount, Que., 67 De Casson street, who just managed to squeeze his six feet, five inches, into the cockpit of the Mosquito.

In the Canadian Bomber Group in England, Wing Cmdr. Eric Hamber, D.F.C., Hamilton, Ont., 17 Chilton place, has relinquished command of the Thunberbird squadron on completion of his tour of operations. Behind Hamber, who is also from Winnipeg, 550 Stradbrook avenue are three years of instructional experience at Camp Borden, Ont., a tour as a ferry pilot on the South Atlantic route, and 15 trips with the Moose squadron last year, before being posted to command the Thunderbirds in succession to Wing Cmdr. W. H. Swetman, D.S.O., D.F.C., and now a group captain.

Squadrons of R.C.A.F. Typhoon fighter-bombers, based at a forward airfield in Normandy, attacked three sets of buildings southeast of Caen which were believed to house German headquarters, and hammered them flat with bombs.

Aircraft from the "Nomad" squadron, commanded by Sqdn. Ldr. Hugh Norseworthy, of Westmount, Que., dive bombed a German army headquarters at St. Martin le Fontenay. The attack was led by Flt. Lt. Kenneth Fisot, whse home is at Outremont, Que.

FO. Charles Burgess, of Fredericton, N.B., reported "the army indicated their target. It was this group of buildings, and they were splattered."

At the same time Flt. Lt. Jack Beirnes, of Tofield, Alta., was leading the "Wildcat" City of Montreal squadron against what was believed to be a German battery headquarters near Fontenay le Marmion. He said: "We clobbered it."

The third target was an enemy stronghold at Rocquancourt, southeast of Caen, which was attacked by the "City of Ottawa" Beaver squadron led by Sqdn. Ldr. William Pentland, of Calgary, 311 37th avenue W. Pentland was forced down by engine trouble en route to the target and the attack was completed under the leadership of FO. James Beattie, of St. Catharines, Ont.

Rugby League For Military

TORONTO, Aug. 15—(CP).—Jim Coleman says today in the Toronto Globe and Mail that although there has been no official announcement from Ottawa an armed services football league has been forced in Ontario. He said five teams will enter the loop—Toronto Navy and R.C.A.F. teams from Toronto, Trenton, St. Thomas and Hagersville.

Coleman added that the withdrawal of Toronto Navy from the Ontario Rugby Football Union senior series came on "instruction from Ottawa" and that the O.R.F.U. "has been 'scuppered' by the brass hats in Ottawa."

Newark Hurlers Bevens Wins 10 In Row

(By The Associated Press).

Floyd Bevens won one game and then lost five at the start of the International League season. Then the right-handed Newark pitcher decided to hit the comeback rail. He's now won 10 straight.

In beating Rochester last night, 5-3, Floyd accounted for his 11th victory as the Beears kept pace with the league-leading Baltimore Orioles in the red hot International League race.

Montreal Royals all but had a game won until Baltimore, seven runs behind, scored eight runs in the last three innings and pulled the game out of the fire, 9-8.

Buffalo exploded 16 runs on 18 hits to smother Syracuse Chiefs, who pushed over all of their six runs in the seventh inning. Mayo Smith, league's leading bater, Otto Denning, and Jim Levy all clouted home runs in the 16-6 slaughter.

Ken Brondell strengthened his position of league leading winning percentage as he pitched Jersey City to 4-2 decision over Toronto on the first game of two. Red Kress went all the way for the Leafs. Alec Mustaikis, ace Leaf pitcher, broke his own losing streak in the final as the Leafs backed up a 2-1 decision to gain an even split.

Canadian Troops Did Not Press First Advantage

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press War Correspondent

WITH THE 1ST CANADIAN ARMY ON THE FALAISE ROAD, Aug. 15 —(CP-Cable) — Continuing southward through the heavily wooded valley of the Laize River, Western Canada troops have taken Clare Tizon, 6½ miles northwest of Falaise, and captured two bridges over the Laize River intact.

Clair Tizon is about two miles west of Potigby, which is on the main Caen-Falaise highway, and is situated on a twisting road which also leads into that important road junction town.

The neighboring town of Tourneu, 1½ miles miles northwest of Tizon, also has been captured by Canadian forces.

However, the nearer Canadian forces get to Falaise the stiffer becomes the opposition.

In the attack through the Laize Valley Canadians crossed to the west side of the river, advanced south, and then at Tizon grabbed the bridges and established a bridgehead back on the east side again.

Gained 8 Miles

Since Saturday night when the advance southward up the Laize began the Canadians have pushed about eight miles south on this right flank of the Canadian Army.

The Germans caught in the Mortain pocket are trying to move back troops to keep open the top of the pocket between Falaise and Argentan and give their armed forces a chance to withdraw through this gap, but R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. planes with cannon, machine-guns and rockets are beating up one convoy after another

Speaking of last week's Canadian operation which began brilliantly and then was blocked by the Germans five miles from Falaise army headquarters said the reason the offensive did not get on as planned was because the troops involved were new to battle.

The troops did not realize the initial success they achieved and did not push on to exploit their gains before the Germans had time to recover from the shock assault which penetrated their defence lines, it was said. It was emphasized that this was not a criticism of the troops involved. They were then in the first action and now are seasoned fighting men.

Premier Urges Tax-Free MP Indemnities

OTTAWA, Aug. 15 (CP)— Prime Minister Mackenzie King announced last night in the Commons that in the next Parliament he will support any move to make the indemnity of members of Parliament free of taxes.

Just before the Commons adjurned Mr. King referred to a question debated earlier in the session, the incidence of income tax which cuts members' $4,000 indemnity down to about $2,800.

"I look on the indemnity as something that is provided to secure the independence of members of Parliament," he said, "and if part of it is taken away by taxation there is less assurance of independence."

He said he agreed with Finance Minister Isley that no change should be made during the life of the present Parliament, but as an election approached, he was concerned about the independence of members and the calibre of representation in Parliament. The House was in danger of losing some of its ablest and most experienced members, not because they would be defeated, but because they would not be candidates since they could not afford to do so.

In Favor Regardless.

Mr. King said he could not say whether he would be in the next Parliament or not. If he was in it, whether on the Government side or on the Opposition, he would support the move to make indemnities taxfree, and if he was not in Parliament he would support it as a citizen.

It was of the utmost importance that the House of Commons be as representative as possible. He quoted Lloyd George on a measure to pay members of the British Parliament many years ago as saying that the absence of proper payment made for a House comprised of members of privileged classes.

"I feel," he added, "that in these times of all times we should seek to broaden the base of representation and have members from all sections of the population, from the ranks of labour, from agriculture from the men now in the armed forces and a larger number of women."

Effect Analyzed.

Unless the indemnity was sufficient the members would be largely those who were so independent financially that they were very wealthy, men who could not earn a fair income in any other way or men who accepted financial assistance from and so were obligated to some corporation or association or individual.

"In other words,' 'said Mr. King, "we will have a privileged class here at a time when the world, probably in the worst possible ways, is trying to get rid of privilege."

The problems confronting the Canadian Parliament from now on would be greater than ever before. They would be world problems as well as domestic problems. This would call for the highest possible calibre of men representing the people.

Would Disband War-Created Committees

By J. E. HOLDSWORTH
Canadian Press Correspondent

SYDNEY, AUSTRALIA, Aug. 15 —The question of to what extent war-created bodies should carry on in peacetime is getting an airing following the suggestion by Army Minister Francis Forde that the Allied Works Council, established to handle war projects, turn to civil public works after the war.

The Sydney Morning Herald said the Council should devote itself only to war works and recommended that "as soon as war conditions permit there should be a clean break with a body which was created on the basis of conscription and of getting work done regardless of cost."

"The way back to efficiency and a high level of free employment must be sought by the progressive restoration of private industry," the paper added. "Public Works must be held in readiness to take up any slack in employment but they must not be allowed to dominate our economic system through rigid long-range programs. The traditions of the A.W.C. are not those of the flexible efficient administration required to expand or contract public works according to fluctuating peacetime needs."

Australia Lays

Establishment of a permanent film-producing unit under government sponsorship is advocated by Professor Stout of Sydney University, chairman of the Documentary Films Committee of New South Wales.

In a newspaper article he said that Australia's "record in the making of documentary films compares unfavorably with the rest of the Empire both in quantity and (with few exceptions) in quality."

As a favorable example of government-sponsored film development he cited Canada's National Film Board. Australian camermen he said, "can hold their own with the best," but instead of working under a skilled director to make a planned documentary, "their work is thrown into a common pool on which the two commercial newsreel firms can draw."

Ola McLean and Alice House, girl radio operators who signed on an Allied tanker after studying at Vancouver, arrived in Australia after their first sea voyage and said that although they had signed on for only six months, they haven't the slightest intention of leaving the sea then.

The two share a cabin with its own bathroom. Most of the time during the voyage they wore slacks or cotton dresses and playsuits.

Miss McLean said her work was far more exciting than she had dreamed it would be and "I've only one worry—I eat so much I'm afraid I'll get too fat."

Hedgerow Fights Peculiar To Normandy

ON THE WESTERN FRONT—(By Wireless).—I know that all of us correspondents have tried time and again to describe to you what this weird hedgerow fighting in northwestern France has been like.

But I'm going to go over it once more, for we've been in it two months and some of us feel that this is the two months that broke the German army in the west.

This type of fighting is always in small groups, so let's take as an example one company of men. Let's say they are working forward on both sides of a country lane, and this company is responsible for clearing the two fields on either side of the road as it advances.

That means you have only about one platoon to a field. And with the company's understrength from casualties, you might have no more than 25 or 30 men in a field.

Over here the fields are usually not more than 50 yards across and a couple of hundred yards long. They may have grain in them, or apple trees, but mostly they are just pastures of green grass, full of beautiful cows.

The fields are surrounded on all sides by immense hedgerows which consist of an ancient earthen bank, waist high, all matted with roots, and out of which grow weeds, bushes, and trees up to 20 feet high.

The Germans have used these barriers well. They put snipers in the trees. They dig deep trenches behind the hedgerows and cover them with timber, so that it is almost impossible for artillery to get at them.

Someimes they will prop up machine guns with strings attached, so they can fire over the hedge without getting out of their holes. They even cut out a section of the hedgerow and hide a big gun or a tank in it, covering it with brush.

Also they tunnel under the hedgerows from the back and make the opening on the forward side just large enough to stick a machine gun through.

But mostly the hedgerow pattern is this: a heavy machine gun hidden at each end of the field and infantrymen hidden all along the hedgerow with rifles and machine pistols.

Now it's up to us to dig them out of there. It's a slow and cautious business, and there is nothing very dashing about it. Our men don't go across the open fields in dramatic charges such as you see in the movies. They did at first, but they learned better.

In Tiny Groups.

They go in tiny groups, a squad or less, moving yards apart and sticking close to the hedgerows on either end of the field. They creep a few yards, squat, wait, then creep again.

If you could be right up there between the Germans and the Americans you wouldn't see very many men at any one time—just a few here and there, always trying to keep hidden. But you would hear an awful lot of noise.

Our men are taught in training not to fire until they saw something to fire at. But that hasn't worked in this country, because you see so little. So the alternative is to keep shooting constantly at the hedgerows. That pins the Germans in their holes while we sneak up on them.

The attacking squads sneak up the sides of the hedgerows while the rest of the platoon stay back in their own hedgerow and keep the forward hedge saturated with bullets. They shoot rifle grenades too, and a mortar squad a little farther back keeps lobbing mortar shells over on the Germans.

The little advance groups get up to the far ends of the hedgerows at the corners of the field. They first try to knock out the machine guns at each corner. They do this with hand grenades, rifle grenades and machine guns.

Leave Snipers Behind.

Usually, when the pressure gets on, the German defenders of the hedgerow start pulling back. They'll take their heavier guns and most of the men back a couple of fields and start digging in for a new line.

They leave about two machine guns and a few riflemen scattered through the hedge, to do a lot of shooting and hold up the Americans as long as they can.

Our men now sneak along the front side of the hedgerow, throwing grenades over on to the other side and spraying the hedges with their guns. The fighting is very close—only a few yards apart—but it is seldom actual hand-to-hand stuff.

Sometimes the remaining Germans come out of their holes with their hands up. Sometimes they try to run for it and are mowed down. Sometimes they won't come out at all, and a hand grenade, thrown into their hole, finishes them off.

And so we've taken another hedgerow and are ready to start on the one beyond.

This hedgerow business is a series of little skirmishes like that clear across the front, thousands and thousands of little skirmishes. No single one of them is very big. But add them up over the days and weeks and you've got a man-sized war, with thousands on both sides being killed.

3 Face Charges

KITCHENER, Aug. 15 —(CP) — Sheriff G. H. Gillies said to-day charges of jail breaking and destruction of jail property are being laid against three youths now held in Waterloo county jail. The three are Jack Gerald Hicks and Jack Walter Hicks, both from Preston but no relation, and Stanely Stapley of Trenton.

The sheriff said investigation disclosed that the three "intended using violence on the jail staff" and that a "formidable weapon" was found by the jail staff last week.

A Hazardous Plan

GUELPH, Aug. 15 (CP).— A Guelph district farmer has learned that fighting bees with fire may prove hazardous. His horses became frightened by bees the other day while he was raking hay. He set fire to the area where the bees clustered but the fire spread through the hay and raced toward a barn in the field. Neighbors formed a bucket brigade and saved the buildings.

Crown Company To Work On Jet Propulsion

OTTAWA, August 15— (CP) — Munitions Minister Howe to-day announced the organization of a new Crown company, Turbo Research Ltd., to carry out design and other development work on jet propulsion for aircraft and on gas turbines.

The company will take over plant and equipment which has been established in Canada in connection with jet propulsion since the Government first became interested in the development in the latter part of 1942. Head offices and the main research works will be located at Leaside, Ont., adjoining the plant of Research Enterprises Ltd., another Government company.

Turbo Research Ltd. will be a permanent organization and will work in close relationship ith a similar company recently formed in Great Britain, Mr. Howe's announcement said. To facilitate a full exchange of information between the two companies representatives of the Canadian company will be located in London.

Officers and directors of the new company include: President, H. J. Carmichael, Munitions Department Co-ordinator of Production; vice-president and general manager, Brig. F. C. Wallace, Research Enterprises Ltd.

Reds Develop Perennial Wheat

TORONTO, Aug. 15 (CP) — The Russians have developed a perennial wheat, according to a Moscow cable to the CBC from Raymond Davies, a Canadian correspondent.

Davies said the wheat is described as one of the most important developments in agriculture in many centuries and that "it may alter the methods of earning a living for many millions of people, including, perhaps, Canadian farmers."

The correspondent said the wheat yields our harvests within two years from the one sowing and under Russian conditions similar to those in Saskatchewan an Alberta has produced 30 to 40 bushels an acre. He added that it is rust and drought resistant and of high quality.

Premier Drew Denies Report

TORONTO, Aug. 15 (CP) — Premier Drew said today his government is not planning a general provincial election in the near future. "Absolutely nothing in it at all," he said of reports in parliamentary circles in Ottawa Saturday he would call an election with the Federal Family Allowances legislation as an issue.

But the Premier hinted at the possibility of a special session of the legislature this fall when he recalled in an interview that he had indicated at the regular session early this year that matters might arise calling for a special session.

"It is most unlikely that the Baby Bonus Bill would call for it but there are other matters that may," he said.

The Toronto Telegram said Queen's Park reports are that housing and possible demobilization problems are among these matters. The same paper said that it is expected at Queen's Park that the government will take the Family Allowances issue to the courts, contending that under the British North America Act the Provinces have full jurisdiction over social services.

BLOOD DONORS

Sixty-seven blood donors attended the first clinic of the week, Monday, and 19 represented the C.G.E.-Genelco, with other employees coming from Quaker Oats, Canada Packers, Westclox, Canadian Raybestos and the Canadian Flag Manufacturing Co. Out-out-town donors were from Buckhorn, Campbellford, Lakefield and Havelock. A returned serviceman, Don. R. Mann, gave his 12th donation: George Eason made a 10th contribution, and 9th donations were made by Norman Hayes, Harold E. Lang and William Sharpe.

TINY VISITOR

City council's only visitor Monday night was a cricket. And how it found its way up to the second storey was beyond mere man's conjecture. He was a silent cricket and not full grown, and he must be a foolish fellow to stray into such arid quarters. These evening people think of crickets in the metallic monotones of the grasshoppers and others of the cicada family.

FACILITIES FOR PLAY

"Municipalities throughout Canada and the United States are giving more and more attention to the development of recreational facilities and programs," says The Listening Post, a publication of the Canadian Association of Mayors. "One city has recently created a recreation commission of twenty-five members, which will survey recreational facilities and programs and will act as a co-ordinating agency to advise municipal authorities on recreational needs of the community. Another city will have a year-round commission to be maintained by the city and school board."

AN IRONIC NOTE

Mayor Hamilton distributed among members of the council Monday night copies of "When the Boys Come Home," received from their former associate, G. N. Gordon, K.C. A little later Alderman Glover moved the inscription in the minutes of the meeting the names of four Peterborough men "who have made the supreme sacrifice," and that letters of sympathy be written to their next of kin. This Peterborough list of boys who are "not coming home" extends with additions at nearly every meeting of the council.

LEAVE EXTENDED

Alderman Cotton's leave of absence was extended by the council three months Monday night. Mayor Hamilton said that the chairman of the finance committee had not made the progress that had been hoped for since June.

GOOD NEWS

Mrs. M. T. Paquette, Pottinger street, Lindsay, has been informed that her husband is now recovering in a hospital, after being wounded in the fighting in the Cherbourg peninsula in France. Previously, Mrs. Paquette had received a letter from an officer of her husband's regiment, stating he had died of wounds.

CITY'S CONGRATULATIONS

Peterborough's community congratulations to Captain R. T. F. Brain on winning the Military Cross and to Regimental Sergeant Major Fred Lockhart for his distinction in winning the Military Medal was expressed by the city council Monday in a resolution by Alderman Glover and Sullivan. The resolution was inscribed in the minutes and City Clerk Outram was instructed to forward letters of congratulation to both these citizens who enlisted from Peterborough.

FLORAL NOTE.

Hollyhocks have fallen behind the season's floral procession. They are looking tired and seedy, and their tall slimness around which their bloom spiralled during July is slumping with the passing of their vitality and the brilliance of a few weeks ago, a long age in the brief span of the hollyhocks.

THREE FIRES

The alarm was rung three times for firemen Monday afternoon. At 2 p.m. the rear trunk of the automobile of Clinton Reid, parked on Simcoe street, was found on fire. Twenty minutes later firemen rushed to 512 Weller, residence of D. T. Diplock, where a garage fire had been reported, but on arrival it was discovered that the flames were from a grass fire back of the house which had been started by some children. It was extinguished without damage. Burning rubbish at 291 Louis street, the residence of R. Foster at 7:32 p.m. brought the day's total of alarms to three.

LINDSAY BOY WINGED

C. M. Fulton, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Fulton, of Lindsay, has received his wings at Jarvis Air School, it was announced recently, after spending some time attached to the R.C.A.F. at Calgary and Lachine. The young airman, who is now enjoying a brief vacation at Long Point, Balsam Lake, will be stationed at London, Ontario.

Craftsman Patrick O'Hara, whose wife lives at 179 Hunter street, is now serving in France. He enlisted in 1940 with the R.C.O.C. and is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis O'Hara, of Port Hope.

Pte. Floyd Alton Missing Fought Under No Retreat Orders

While fighting with the Black Watch Regiment (Royal Highlanders of Canada) from Montreal, the outfit now famous for its July 25 stand against the Nazis on the ridge above May-Sur-Orne, Pte. Floyd Alton, son of Mrs. H. Alton, 448 Mark street, has been officially reported missing in action, according to word reaching his mother.

An Examiner carrier-boy since he was nine years old, the 29-year-old soldier had written his mother 19 letters since he arrived in England in June of this year, and subsequently landed in France. One of his letters, dated in July, said, "It's only by God's mercy that I've been spared this long." Foreseeing the heavy action to come, Pte. Alton wrote his mother, in a letter dated just five days before he was reported missing, that "I guess I won't be able to write any more letters for a while."

Born and educated in Peterborough, Floyd Alton had worked his way up through the merchandise and retail business to his post of manager of Mason's store, corner of George and Antrim streets, which he held before enlisting. He went into the army in April, 1942, with the Prince of Wales Rangers, and became a sergeant before long. Later, in an effort to go overseas, he reverted to a corporal in the Fusiliers, and finally gave up his stripes to go overseas in the early part of June, 1944. He had taken military training in many parts of British Columbia, including Prince George, Terrace and Vernon. A brother, Gnr. Keith Alton, is stationed at Petawawa.

War correspondents despatches in telling of the Black Watch stand, said, "platoon by platoon, section by section, and man by man the gallant spearhead of the regiment was swallowed up." An officer of the regiment was quoted as saying, "Only a handful of men who crossed the ridge ever came back," illustrating the fury of the battle, and the courage of the famous Highland regiment.

Council Authorizes Barn Payment

A bill for $350 from the Eastwood Construction Company for increasing the depth of the foundation of the horse barn on the incinerator was passed by the council Monday.

When the company was making the excavation for the footing of the building, following the specifications, it was found that the bottom of the trench at seven feet was not firm enough to warrant the pouring of cement. With the approval of City Engineer Parsons and the property committee it was decided to continue the excavation to eleven feet and the width of the wall was extended from 2 feet 1 inch to 3 feet 2 inches.

Most of that property was reclaimed from the widened creek in years gone by. It was filled in and levelled off, and eventually came into use as the city yard. City engineer Parsons told the council that the test holes which were dug for the preparing of specifications were made in water that seeped in, and the indications at seven feet seemed, in the somewhat uncertain conditions, to be satisfactory. An additional thirty cubic yards of cement were poured by the contractor.

$100 Gift Goes To Rugby Team

In making a grant of $100 Monday night to the Junior Rugby Club which played a few games last season, and is planning a broader program for the fall, the council last night decided to suggest to the Board of Education that an effort be made to encourage baseball (not mush) and hockey in addition to rugby.

"I know many boys are playing softball, but it would be a lot better if they were back to hardball," said Alderman Bradburn. "I would like to see the boys get back to the games we used to have here, and the schools are the place to start. I think we should approach the Board of Education. We don't want them to think we are interfering with their affairs, and we can only make a suggestion to them that they consider the encouragement of these games."

Members of the council realize that in baseball and hockey there has been a lapse during the war years, and some special effort should be made to restore these games.

Good Investment

"I am in favor of Alderman Sands' grant of $100 to the junior rugby team, but these are boys of eighteen or more, and what I would like to see is something more done to encourage the boys from 12 to 16. It is one of the best investments we could make, physically, morally and in making our men of the future," said Alderman Glover.

Alderman Sullivan said the suggestion could be made to both school boards, and he also supported Alderman Sands, "if $100 is acceptable to the rugby team."

"I think we should do anything in reason to revive sports in Peterborough especially at this time." Alderman Sullivan said. He moved the $100 grant to the rugby club and Alderman Glover seconded it.

Mayor Hamilton said he would convey the council's suggestion to G. W. Craw, chairman of the Board of Education.

City Will Assist Financing Memorial Centre

In the proposed financing of the Peterborough Memorial Community Centre, the council Monday night assented to several recommendations received from the committee of citizens in charge of the present preliminaries of the project.

The council agreed to assist in the financing of the sports centre to the extent of $50,000 or $75,000 by issuing debentures for the actual amount to be determined later, and the annual charges for interest and sinking fund will be included in the operating costs of the arena.

Financial responsibility for the operation, equipment and maintenance of the building are also undertaken by the city through its council.

Managed by Commission

Ownership of the community sports centre will be vested in the corporation of the city, and its management will be entrusted to a commission of six men, two of whom shall be appointed annually for three years. This commission will be appointed by the city council, and nominations for its six members will be received from the citizens generally, service clubs, labor groups and so on, in the hope of securing a broad basis of representation of the whole community.

Alderman Bradburn who, as a member of the council, has been actively interested in the community desire to obtain for Peterborough an artificial ice arena, outlined the progress accomplished by the citizens' committee.

The city is being asked to assist in the financing, and the suggested amount is somewhere in the $50,000 to $75,000 brackets. Plans are going ahead for a canvass for other funds, and an appeal is to be made at once to the heads of local industries and others for contributions toward the Memorial Community Centre.

It was stated that all such contribution would be made payable to the treasury of the city corporation.

"In this stage of the progress the question arose as to what would be the attitude of the council," Alderman Bradburn said, "and it was hoped that some definite assurance would be available before the committee went ahead with its approach to the manufacturing industries and others."

"How is the money going to be raised?" Alderman Sands asked.

Alderman Bradburn explained that in regard to the city's contribution that money would be raised by the issue of debentures. The annual payment of interest and sinking fund would become a charge against the operating expense of the building. It would be paid out of the revenues of the Community Centre and not out of the city treasury.

Charitable Donations

Alderman Bradburn quoted a letter from the Department of Finance stating that contributions to the Community Centre would be classed as charitable donations within the effects of the income tax law, and are thereby exempt from that tax because the building would be of an outstanding benefit to the community.

"The Commission to manage the Memorial Community Centre is so that it cannot fall into the hands of private individuals," Alderman Glover commented.

"That is the idea," Alderman Bradburn replied. "There would be no danger of any person obtaining control of it."

The Commission would be appointed under the Parks Commission Act.

Alderman Swanston — "If the council assists to the extent proposed and assumes annual operating responsibility the ratepayers should have something to say."

Alderman Bradburn—"They will have everything to say through the city council."

He added that everybody hoped the revenues from the sports centre would be sufficient to meet all annual costs, and leave a surplus which could be accumulated and used for the development of recreational facilities, playgrounds and so on, as had been done in St. Catharines.

Alderman Glover remarked that the $50,000 from the city would be a loan, but if annual revenue did not meet the annual costs, the community would have to make up the difference by the council assuming responsibility for operation.

The resolution covering these undertakings was moved by Alderman Bradburn, and was unanimously Ovens and seconded by Alderman adopted.

The text of the Ovens-Bradburn resolution follows:

"That, whereas the Citizens' Committee of the Peterborough Memorial Community Centre, which is engaged in the organization and erection of the Recreation Centre, desire the ownership of this Centre to be vested in the Corporation of the City of Peterborough, therefore this Council goes on record as being willing to accept ownership of the property and building, and to assume full financial responsibility on behalf of the citizens for the continued operation and maintenance of the building, its equipment and furnishings, and the City Council further agrees to appoint a Commission in whose composition and tenure of office the Council will give consideration to the recommendations of the Citizens Committee of the Peterborough Memorial Community Centre, which Commission shall be responsible to the Council for the manaement and operation of the building in order that it may best serve the citizens of Peterborough."

THREE BROTHERS SERVING — Three Smedmor brothers, all sons of Mrs. D. Smedmor, 148 Murray street, are serving in the Canadian forces. PO. Grant Smedmor (Left) graduated last week from Uplands. He enlisted in 1940 with Major John Harstone's battery and went overseas in 1941. After some time in England, he transferred to the R.C.A.F., and had five months' training with the R.A.F. before returning to Canada last year. Capt. Arnold Smedmor (Centre) is the first Peterborough man to return from France. He is an officer with the Cameron Highlanders and is home for a course at the R.M.C. PO. George Smedmor (Right), R.C.A.F., enlisted at the same time as his brother Grant and went overseas in the Army. He transferred to the Air Force and returned to Canada, graduating as a navigator. He is now back overseas. A fourth brother Donald was discharged following an injury received in manoeuvres.

Cameron Officer Arrives Home From France

Cheering news for parents with boys serving on the active fighting fronts is that brought by Capt. Arnold Smedmor who has just returned from France, and who praised in the highest terms the work being done by the medical corps.

Capt. Smedmor, who has been overseas 2½ years, and whose wife and two children live at 606 Rubidge street, is the first Peterborough man back from France. He is a member of the Cameron Highlanders and was attached to a Headquarters staff. The unit went into France when the invasion began, but he followed it later.

"I have seen the air evacuation working and it is wonderful for our casualties," he said. "Speed has been the watchword and a man who has been wounded within hours is in many cases, back at a base air landing strip, and within a short time on the way to a hospital in England. The morale of the wounded I have seen is excellent and the personnel of the medical corps has done a magnificent job."

Same Old Story

Although the 1944 soldiers have only been in France a little more than two months, already they have one course in common with their 1914-1918 brothers. They never want to see a tin of bully beef or stew again. It's not that the food isn't all right, but until just recently the men were living on compo rations, which include bully beef, biscuits and stew. After eating this three times a day, weeks on end, they become "slightly monotonous." Capt. Smedmor said, however, that when he left some fresh rations were beginning to come in. Little was bought from French civilians, one reason being the excessive cost.

In this connection he told an anecdote about a chaplain whom he knew. One of the soldiers found out that an old French woman had some honey for sale. The chaplain went out to try and make a deal. He couldn't speak French, but he knew the word for honey and after many frantic gesticulations, the French woman made him understand he would have to bring a container, so he returned to his post and got the required article. When he got back to camp and began thinking about the more than 200 francs he had paid for three pounds of honey, he felt that even for that treat, $5 was a little exhorbitant.

Capt. Smedmor had invasion currency, paper notes which had been issued to the troops. He also had some pre-war Franch coins and German-made coins both of which are accepted in buying and selling deals. The pre-war coin is heavy silver, and in contrast the equivalent German money scarcely seems like metal at all it seems so thin.

Trenches Popular

In one section of France where he was stationed, Capt. Smedmor said he could set his watch by the way the German planes came over every night. They were not in large numbers, and constituted more of a nuisance value, but they could be counted on. They dropped hundreds of flares, making everything for miles as bright as daylight, and that plus the intense barrage, made it better than any July 1st celebration he had ever seen.

"One thing I learned in France was the value of a slit trench. During a dogfight, I was standing out in the open, an interested spectator and an officer near me called warningly 'You'll soon have more sense.' It wasn't long before I did. Suddenly there was a swoosh and a piece of flak landed six inches from me. That cured me of standing out star gazing. From then on I made for a trench in a hurry. At night we all slept in trenches and you had to keep your helmet over your face as as protection against our own flak."

Robot bombs have a definitely eerie effect on people, the officer said. While overseas he encountered a few and said that at night you could hear the drone of their engines and suddenly they would cut off, apparently right overhead. Then everyone would count to five and wait for the whoosh as it came down and the bang when it hit.

Although he was unable to visit Capt. Harry Marsh also an officer with the Camerons, he said that he heard he was coming along well.

Good Fighters

Capt. Smedmor is not home as a casualty, but has been sent back to take a course at the Royal Military College at Kingston. A brother, Pilot Officer George Smedmor is overseas with the R.C.A.F. and another brother, P.O. Grant Smedmor graduated last week at Uplands. A fourth brother, Donald, who was overseas, has been discharged. Prior to enlisting, Capt. Smedmor was employed at the Outram company and he is the son of Mrs. D. Smedmor, Murray Street.

In closing Capt. Smedmor stressed the fine spirit and morale of the Canadians who are fighting it out in France. The newspapers which have described the fighting as tough have not been mistaken in the way the men are reacting and halting the German assaults, he asserted.

Leonard Nelson Badly Injured At Camp Borden

INJURED IN TRUCK CRASH—Caught between two trucks, Pte. Leonard Nelson, son of Mrs. A. E. Nelson, 735 Water street, has been seriously injured while training at Camp Borden. The accident occurred while part of the R.C.A.S.C. were on manoeuvres.

Pte. Leonard Nelson, son of Mrs. A. E. Nelson, 735 Water street, is in hospital at Camp Borden seriously injured, after being crushed between two trucks while on manoeuvres, his mother was informed today.

The young soldier who enlisted last fall has his left leg broken in four or five places, the knee cap is broken, three ribs and the pelvis are also broken. In addition he lost a great deal of blood and the nurse reports that he is very weak.

The truck section with which Pte. Nelson worked were out on manouevres and he had stopped his machine and was standing on the bumper. The brakes on another truck didn't work and the machine crushed him against his own.

This is the third boy in the Nelson family to have been injured while serving in the forces. Keith and Dalton Nelson were both wounded in Italy and two other brothers, Leslie and Milton are stationed overseas. Prior to joining the Army, Pte. Nelson was employed at the radium plant in Port Hope.

Air Cadet Group Has Anniversary

Peterborough's 164th Air Cadet Squadron celebrated its second anniversary at a Rotary Club luncheon Monday at which Wing Commander Arthur (Bunt) Waddell, D. F. C., was a guest. Representatives of squadrons from Port Hope and Montreal also attended the dinner and gave descriptions of the training activities of their Air Cadet groups.

In a resume of what the local squadron has accomplished in the two years since it was formed, Flt. Lieut. A. Ward Smith, officer commanding, stated that present Air Cadet strength here now numbered 98 with five officers and five instructors. He said that 27 boys have completed the full two years' syllabus of training and that 35 have finished one year of training. "We believe that very few squadrons can improve on this record," Flt. Lieut. Smith remarked, giving large credit for the 164th's achievements to FO. Briggs, the training officer.

Its band of 22 pieces is regarded by high officers of the R.C.A.F. as the best single Air Cadet trumpet band in No. 1 Training Command, which comprises the area of Ontario, Flt. Lieut. Smith revealed. The band this spring has assisted at inspections at Havelock and Lindsay. The 164th Squadron's commanding officer also made mention of the latest R.C.A.F. enlistment regulations, in which it is ordered that only Air Cadets, 18½ years of age or over and members of a squadron for a year and a half or longer, can be taken on strength of the R.C.A.F. at the present time. They will go into training as air gunners.

Sgt. Ernest Lee, of Peterborough, gave assembled Rotarians, who sponsor the local squadron, a lively description of activities at this summer's camp at Brantford, and spoke of the thrill an Air Cadet experiences in taking his first "flip" in a plane. Flt. Sgt. Don Bissett of the Port Hope Squadron and Sgt. Hugh Hamilton of No. 72 Squadron, Montreal High, also addressed the dinner gathering.

War—4 Years Ago

(By The Canadian Press)

AUGUST 15, 1940—Germany threw 1,000 planes against Britain in the mightiest aerial offensive of war so far and 180 German planes were destroyed. Sqdn. Ldr. Ernest McNab, commander of an R.C.A.F. fighter squadron, shot down Dornier, first member of R.C.A.F. to bag Nazi plane.

400 Enjoy Pictures At Ashburnham Bowl

The program of talking pictures presented by the National Film Board attracted an audience of four hundred persons after the ball games at the Ashburnham Bowl last night. The crowd liked the pictures in the outdoor setting, and joined heartily in the choral features. Incidentally the youngsters apparently knew all the soldiers' songs of the last war.

A "complete change of films" will be shown Thursday night with a concert by the Salvation Army Band, following two ball games, an attractive program that should bring out a big crowd.

Savings Clubs Continue Aid To War Victims

Many a person have reason to be thankful that they practiced the habit of thrift in their younger days, a number of whom have no doubt given credit to it for supplying their latter days with a certain independence and freedom from want, even if it did not always lead to a state of real affluence.

No better opportunity for saving has been found during the war period, than that of the steady purchase of war saving's stamps, and locally quite some credit goes to Bob Everitt for promoting the sale of such primarily in the interest of the war effort, and secondly on behalf of the sufferers from the bombs that have crashed on the civilian population in Britain, through the local and district fund operating for that purpose.

Bob has been the human spark plug generating the interest in these worthy efforts, forming what now are known as the "Stamp Out Hitler Clubs," through whom a total of $1,248 worth of war saving stamps have peen purchased to date, besides raising the splendid sum of $312.00 for the fund.

He is quite up on the bit, when it comes to forming new clubs for this dual purpose, the latest addition to which are the "James Clubs" headed by Mr. and Mrs. Morley James, who interested their friends in this venture, and their first winners happen to be J. Ellis and Steve Pritchuk, which might be suggestive to others in forming new clubs to give a helping hand in the same good work.

The two foremost supporters of this movement, the Canada Packers and Kiwanis Club, are both represented in the gift of $20.00 to-day by seven winners in each, the former returning F. Storey, Mrs. Wagar, Nurse Yelland, E. Holland, M. McFee and H. Martin as the lucky ones, while the latter had Ed. Ryan, Miss Bailey (a guest), John Troke, Dick Raine, L. Witchell, M. White and Milf Hardill as winners.

Others returns show G. E. West of Montreal the winner in the Empress Hotel Club, Bob Everitt himself in the new Bomb Victims Club, Miss Eva Williamson in the Ackerman's Club, and Vern Selkirk in the Selkirk Men's Shop Club.

Any person or group who would like to form a club may obtain the suitably prepared cards from Bob Everett at the Empress Hotel, who will also gladly give all information necessary as to their form of operation.

The fund now is getting within sight of completing another donation of $500; the amount needed at the close of to-day's report standing at the sum of $272.00 to complete that amount.

WRITES FROM FAR EAST — Pte. Herman (Mac) McGregor, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward McGregor of 1942 Wolsley street, has gotten word to his parents for the first time in two years, from his prison camp in the Far East. He was captured by the Japanese at Hong Kong.

News From Son First In 2 Years

Pte. Herman (Mac) McGregor, a Japanese prisoner of war since the fall of Hong Kong, has been heard from by his family for the first time in two years. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward McGregor, 192 Wolsley street, and his wife lives in Lindsay. The soldier, who is 22, enlisted with the Midland Regiment and prior to joining up worked at the Brinton Corpet Co. Two years ago this month Pte. McGregor's family received a letter from him, but no other news had come through until this week.

Writing from "Hong Kong Prisoner of War Camp," and circumscribed by the rigidities of Japanese censorship, Pte. McGregor states that he is feeling fine and has received a letter from home and some snapshots. He adds: "All day long we sit around and play cards and read books." A brother of this soldier, AB. Danny McGregor, is serving with the R.C.N.V.R.

Council Plans Weekly Sessions

Beginning in September with the passing of an authorized bylaw, the city council will meet every Monday night.

"We have had more than 100 committee meetings and fourteen meetings of the council," said Alderman Sands, proposing the change. "The committee meetings are called in many cases only a day ahead and often conflict with other appointments we make. If we had fixed times for these meetings we would be free to make engagements outside the city affairs."

By the new schedule, committee meetings will be held immediately after the Monday night council meetings. Alderman Swanston seconded the motion.

Returns To Base . .

MARMORA, Aug. 15.—(ENS). — Rapid strides have been made by Donald Neal, son of Mrs. Lindsay Neal and the late Lindsay Neal of Marmora, since enlisting in the Air Force at Kingston on January 20 of this year. On July 28 he received his commission at Mont Joli, Que., as a pilot officer and recently spent a few days at his home here, his leave being interrupted through the death of an uncle. He is at present stationed in the Eastern Air Command.

Conference Must Follow Next Election

OTTAWA, Aug. 15. — (CP).— Prime Minister Mackenzie King in the closing minutes of Parliament before it adjourned until next January, announced in the Commons early this morning that the proposed Dominion - Provincial conference will not be held until after a Federal general election.

He declared that correspondence between himself and Premier George Drew of Ontario and a radio statement by Mr. Drew indicated that a conference before the country went to the polls "would have little or no hope of success."

Mr. King quoted Mr. Drew as having said in a radio speech that his one political ambition outside of Ontario was to see an end "as soon as possible of the weak and incompetent" government of Mr. King.

The Prime Minister also tabled correspondence in which Mr. Drew made the observation:

"It seems necessary for me to remind you that this is a conference between governments, not merely a meeting at Ottawa to suit the convenience of the Dominion government."

Mr. Drew's last communication—a telegram sent yesterday—disclosed that two officials of the Ontario Treasury Department were arriving in Ottawa to-day to discuss conference plans.

Mr. King said that what was needed above all else to make the conference a success "is a co-operative attitude on the part of all governments concerned."

He referred to Premier Drew's radio statement and said by his declared aim it must be apparent that any conference held before an election would have little or no hope of success "and would certainly prejudice the success of a subsequent conference."

No Co-operation

He said the correspondence between himself and Premier Drew also showed little evidence that co-operation would be forthcoming.

Having said the conference would be held after a general election, he repeated his previously announced intention that the election would come "at any time" once the war was over, but that it would not be delayed beyond the legal term of the present parliament, which expires in April.

Saying the purpose of the conference was to work out solutions of many difficult problems, he declared the nation could not afford a repetition of the unsuccessful conference of January, 1940, when Premiers of Ontario, Alberta and British Columbia refused to accept the Sirois Commission report as a basis of discussion.

"It is obviously desirable," said Mr. King, "that the conference should, if possible, be held between the governments that may be in office during the next few years, the governments that will be living together and will have to work together." Thus it was necessary to await a general election.

The tabled letters disclosed that Mr. King wrote Mr. Drew July 27 that Ontario Treasury accounts forwarded to Ottawa needed interpretation and suggested a treasury official be sent to Ottawa.

Dr. Drew replied it was difficult to understand Mr. King's statement that the material required interpretation. He added that Provincial Treasurer Leslie Frost had been informed by an Ottawa official there was no difficulty in regard to the material forwarded but that an Ontario official was needed to prepare the agenda.

Mr. Drew added:

"I need hardly say that the government of Ontario does not intend to place the responsibility for drafting an agenda on behalf of this government on anyone who is not a member of that government. It seems necessary for me to remind you that this is a conference between governments, not merely a meeting at Ottawa to suit the convenience of the Dominion Government."

Mr. King replied that the original purposes of having an Ontario official present in Ottawa was "to prepare basic material on a comparable basis."

He added that Ontario had sent some financial figures and "in order to put such figures on a comparable basis with those of the other provinces and the Dominion, it is obviously desirable to have the assistance of an officer from each province competent to interpret and explain them."

Mr. Drew replied yesterday by telegram that Mr. King's correspondence didn't make clear that the purpose of having a provincial treasury official at Ottawa "was for the purpose originally declared in your letter." He then said that the officials had left for Ottawa.

Allies Landed 7 Waves Of Infantry

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst.

The outstanding feature of the amphibious invasion of Southern France by British, American and French Forces is that the first landings were made quickly and against a minimum of resistance.

That's vastly significant. It means of course, that the Germans no longer have the strength to withstand such an attack. They are cracking up.

The Hitlerites knew the invasion was coming. They have been talking about it for months—as who hasn't— and yesterday gave clear indication that they realized it was at hand when they ordered civilians to evacuate the great port of Marseille, near mouth of the Rhone.

With all this warning the Germans would have been armed to the teeth to defend this strategic coast if they had the wherewithal. But they lacked the men and equipment to stand off the Alies. Seven waves of infantry were put ashore on a broad front in less than two hours—an amazing feat.

This doesn't necessarily mean that Southern France is stripped of enemy forces or that there won't be hard fighting. It does mean that the 60 to 65 divisions of troops — say 750,000—upon which Hitler has depended for defence of Western Europe were far too few to meet the concerted Allied onslaught. About half of this force undoubtedly was flung into the fighting on the Normandy front, and scores of thousands are either dead or prisoners.

Gen. Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, Supreme Allied commander in the Mediterranean theatre, has told the French people that the object of the invasion is "to drive out the Germans and join with the Allied armies advancing from Normandy." This indicates the invading force will drive northward through the great Rhone Valley. Hitler's chances of holding the line of the Seine and the Marne riveers, with Paris as the central anchor, are poor. Indeed, they've been fading fast under the Allied successes on the Normandy front. He will have to expedite his withdrawal to his inner fortress on German soil.

Disaster continued to clutch tenaciously at the Hitlerites in Normandy today. The mouth of the Cul-de-Sac which is said to surround 100,000 or more Nazi troops has been narrowed to less than a dozen miles. And even if they run the gauntlet of that narrow passage of death they will come under a deluge of bombs from the Allied air fleets which are attacking every roadway or assemblage of troops.

Water Scarcity

LONDON, Aug. 15—(CP-Reuter) —A statement issued by the Metropolitan Water Board yesterday said only strict economy in the use of water would ensure that London would have adequate water for the rest of the summer. The Board said a serious shortage existed and the flow of the Thames was one of the lowest on record.

A Long Trip

DES MOINES, Ia., Aug. 15 —(AP).—An ordnance plant worker's pass folder has been found and returned—from somewhere in France. Mrs. Flossie M. Kintz of Colfax lost the folder while employed here as an ammunition packer and it was mailed back from France by a bomber squadron corporal who found it among ammunition. Also returned were some bus tickets.

Farmers Save Burning Barn

MARMORA, Aug. 15.—(ENS). — Prompt action by the participants in the threshing bee at the farm of W. J. Pack in Marmora township on Monay afternoon saved his barn from destruction by fire.

A wagon belonging to Irwin McCoy and a wagon rack, the property of James Crawford, besides two loads of grain, the property of W. J. Pack, were destroyed. The team, driven by James Crawford, had their hips slightly scorched.

Sparks from the engine ignited the straw about 5.30 p.m. but when the chemical engine arrived from Marmora village later, the blaze was under control. Water was drawn from the Pack well in milk cans towed on stone boats behind the tractor belonging to Mr. Pack. Within the threatened barn was the summer's hay and the day's threshing of grain.

Bombs Carpet Invasion Area

LONDON, Aug. 15 —(CP)—Allied planes from the Mediterranean carpeted the coast of southern France with bombs today to pace the new invasion while nearly 1,000 British-based American heavy bombers smashed at 10 enemy air bases in Germany and Belgium.

The heavy bombers striking from the west were escorted by up to 1,000 fighters. They slashed at three operational airdromes for the German air force and at seven non-operational stations which have clusters of workshops and various installations for maintenance and repairs.

The first announcement said the attackers landed bombs on the targets with good to excellent results.

Allied planes were attacking the south of France for the fifth consecutive day, laying a path of blazing steel and explosives before the British, American and French forces swarming onto the Mediterranean beaches.

Overnight, R.A.F. Mosquitos crashed two-ton blockbusters into the ruins of Berlin. Targets near Paris also were hit.

Dark Horse Wins First Round With Golf Pros

SPOKANE, WASH., Aug. 15 (AP)—Little Freddie Annon, one of the dark-horse contenders, scrambled around the Manito Course in below-par fashion Monday to lead a classy field in the first round of the 36-hole qualifying test for the 1944 National Professional Golfers' Associaton championship.

His 34-34—68 against a 36-36—72 par course was good enough to set the pace not only for the two leading performers of the year, Byron Nelson of Toledo, O., and Harold McSpaden of Philadelphia, but many another star and champion.

Who Is Annon?

Annon, 30-year-old defense plant worker of Mamaroneck, N.Y., stole the first-day show of the seven-day event, and people were asking, "Who is Annon?"

Trailing him with 69's were Nelson, former United States Open and P.G.A. champion; Ed Dudley of Colorado Springs, president of the P.G.A., and Morrie Gravatt of Williamsport, Pa., also an outsider.

Nelson turned in a 36-33; Dudley and Gravatt posted 35-34. McSpaden leading bond winner of the year, shared the 70-station (36-34) with Bob Hamilton, Evansville, Ind., (36-34) and Willie Goggin, White Plains, N.Y., who paired up 34's.

The only others to break par with 71's were Joe Zarhardt, Harristown, Pa., 37-34, and Joe Gersten, Salt Lake City, 38-33.

Back a ways were such big names as Craig Wood of Mamaronick, United States Open title holder for the duration, with a 39-35—74; Tony Manero, Stamford, Conn., National Open champion in 1936 with 37-37—74 Harry Cooper of Minneapolis, 39-35—74; Jimmy Hines, Amsterdam, N.Y., 38-36—74 and Olin Dutra of Los Angeles ex-National Open and P.G.A. winner, with 43-35—78.

An outstanding performance overlooked in the rush was turned in by Dave Martin of Fresno, Cal. He had a 38-36—74 and played on a knee so badly swollen he had water tapped from it several times. He wrenched his knee during a practice round last Thursday.

Driver Killed In Truck Crash

WOODSTOCK, Aug. 15 — (CP)—Floyd Johnson, a truck driver of this city, was killed instantly today when a truck crashed into the back of his vehicle which was parked by the side of the highway. Johnson was working on the engine of his truck when the accident occurred.

Both trucks burst into flame and damage was estimated to be about $4,000. Harold Vansickle, driver of the other truck, was not seriously injured though he received lacerations on his head and face.

The parked truck was carrying 3,000 pounds of sugar.

Would Wipe Off Veterans' Debts

OTTAWA, Aug. 15 (CP) — The Irish brogue of Robert Fair, Social Credit member for Battle River constituency in Alberta, argued its favorite case in the Commons Monday —that of the soldier settlers of the Western Provinces.

He wanted the Government to write off nearly $8 million outstanding on loans to veterans of the first Great War to establish farms in that part of Canada.

Resources Minister Crerar said that a veterans' delegation had already made representations to the Government and these would receive "full consideration" shortly.

"Until they have received the consideration of the Government I am unable to say what the final action will be," he said.

He added that settlers voluntarily had made payments of more than $1,250,000 in the last five years and the department had not asked for the payments.

Mr. Fair said the total number of men settled after the last war was 25,017 and the total amount advanced by the Government, $109,-034,331. Up to March 31, $50,507493 with interest totalling $25,381,060 had been repaid.

Mike Jacobs Secures French Fighter

NEW YORK, Aug. 15 (AP)—Armand Vincent, Montreal sports promoter, today signed a contract giving Mike Jacobs the North American promotional rights to Marcel Cerdan when the French middleweight arrives in the United States late this month.

Cerdan, middleweight champion of Europe and the only knockout title winner in the Inter-Allied ring tournament at Algiers last winter, now is in Casablanca awaiting transportation to the United States. Cerdan and his manager, Lucien Roupp, are expected by air before Sept. 1.

In signing the contract, Vincent represented the Canadian Entertainments Co., Ltd., the group bringing Cerdan here. Vincent will manage the Frenchman's fistic affairs in the United States and Canada with Pete Reilly of New York, his aid in this country.

Cerdan is a physical instructor for the Fighting French army and his trip to North America is a "good-will venture. Two bouts, one in Canada and one in the United States, will be designated for Fighting French charities by the Embassy in Washington.

Club Singles Get Underway In Close Games

(By HERB MARTIN.

The club singles for schedule groups No. 1-2 got away to a good start last night. There were many close and exciting games and there were many upsets. Some of the skips who have not been going so good during the schedule came to life.

To begin with R. Payne defeated H. Freeman, last year's winner. R. Burns took care of Bill Jeffries. G. Gimblett scored two on the last end to nose out Jimmy Cullen. Harold Darling put Benny Chesler out of the running. Ross Downey accounted for Tom McMillan and the parade was still on when we came away about nine o'clock. It was a terrific night to play singles. The boys certainly earned what they got.

Some of them looked as if they had fallen in the river.

We have been advised by the Ladies' Game Committee that if this excessive heat lasts till Wednesday that the starting of the ladies open trebles tournament will be postponed until late in the afternoon.

It is expected that the draw for the Men's Novice Single Competition will be posted up in the club house within the next day or two.

This is for this year's beginners and it is one of the outstanding events of our schedule. A beautiful trophy, presented by the late P. J. Giffen, goes to the winner and this year as many years in the past this competition is being sponsored by The Peterborough Examiner. All the boys who are entitled to play in this series will be duly notified. The date set for play is 7 p.m. Tuesday, August 22nd.

The boys who motored down to Ottawa last week, to play in the Ottawa tournament, report having "A Hull of a Good Time."

Loses 4 Brothers Enlists For Revenge

WINNIPEG, Aug. 15 (CP)—Jim Wilson, 23, of Nipawin, Sask., is wondering if he'll get over to Europe in time to settle the score with the Nazis.

Jim trekked from the heart of the Northwest Territories to enlist in Canada's Active Army when he learned last February that his four brothers — Charles George, Harry and John—all were killed in the Dieppe raid. A fifth brother, Manuel, lost both legs in the same battle.

Jim, with something to settle over there, learned the fate of his brothers while listening to his radio in a tent in Canada's Northland. It took him 23 days to reach Churchill, Man., and after a wait of nearly a month he was able to get rail transportation to Winnipeg.

Jim formerly was a research man with the Federal Resources Department in the Northwest Territories.

NEW YORK, Aug. 15.— (AP).—Looks as if college football has no intention of letting the pros take first place in the gridiron picture ....Since chairman Bill Bingham of the Rules committee first refused to heed the coaches' appeal for a couple of changes, the pros have been pointing out that their game always was more attractive from a spectator standpoint and that they didn't hesitate to make those changes last winter....The new rules adopted yesterday by the Eastern United States' Intercollegiate Football Association included three favored by the pros — no out-of-bounds kickoffs, forward passing fiom anywhere behind the line of scrimmage and running with recovered fumbles....Most of the other major groups have gone for at least the first two and when the rules committee meets after the war, that probably will be regarded as an order to stay ahead of the pros.

Never Too Late.

When Mike Jacobs' press corps was interviewing Welterweight Aaron Perry, it took a lot of digging to uncover the fact that he once climbed the Griffith stadium fence to see the Joe Louis-Buddy Baer tussle....Seems Jacobs promoted the Washington bout and Aaron was afraid Mike might deduct the price of a ticket from his purse for Friday's bout with Jimmy McDaniels.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

A STRONG WARNING

NO CAUTIONING signal is more eloquent, when coming from a sound player, than that involved in a pre-emptive bid. "Don't count on me" is the message to a partner who considers doubling a contract bid by an opponent that overcalled the pre-empt. The high original bid, or high overcall, indicates ability to take a rather goodly number of tricks if the hand gets played at that declaration, but probably no ability to take any tricks at all on the defense against a different declaration.

North learned a good lesson from what happened to his double on this hand. West made his contract without particular difficulty, merely making the natural plays under the circumstances.

The heart 2 was the opening lead from North, which the declarer ruffed with the dummy's club 7. Next he pulled the diamond K out of the dummy, prepared to discard if South did not cover. The latter did so, however, and his A was snuffed out by the club 2. The spade 10 was successfully finessed and the diamond Q and J furnished two heart discards, blanking West in that suit.

The club 8 was covered by the 9, and North got this with his J. He fired back a heart, but West was able to ruff that and win a second spade finesse. After scoring the spade A, he let North get a trick with his club K, but that was only the second trick for the defenders and West had nothing remaining but good trumps.

South's hand proved worth not a single trick on the defense, which is practically what he said when he bid his 4-Hearts. Not even his diamond A proved of any value.

How should South play for 4-Hearts on this deal after West leads the club K?

World Force Of Fliers To Insure Peace

WASHINGTON, August 15—(AP)—Peacetime use of an international air force with its swift and deadly striking power operating at the command of a Council of Nations is considered certain to come up for discussion at forthcoming United Nations security talks here.

The idea has recently been put forward in Russian quarters which, at the same time, express opposition to the creation of an international police force such as ground troops and naval units.

Sir Alexander Cadogan, British delegate to the peace talks, told a news conference it had been talked about and added that "use of force is one of the large subjects" on which the talks will be concentrated.

Sir Alexander, meeting reporters at the British Embassy yesterday, professed frank optimism about the acomplishments of the conference opening a week from to-day and disclosed that much preliminary work has already been done.

As a result, he made clear, Britain and the United States are in accord on the main outlines of their world peace organization plans and Russia and China have been kept informed of the British and American proposals. Last week the Russians submitted a document presumably setting forth their plans, but Sir Alexander said he had not had opportunity to study it.

Atlantic Charter Will Be Able To Help Allies Win The Peace

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15 (AP) — Bombers and cannon and mud-slogging infantry will win the war. They cannot win the peace. In fact, nobody knows now just what can do that job. But there is some feeling, especially among White House and State Department officials here, that the Atlantic Charter may help.

However, Allied leaders, notably President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill, have differed in the past over what the eight-point charter means and how it should be applied.

In the next few months such differences as persist will have to be reconciled because the problems they reflect are now coming to a head. The Atlantic Charter, three years old today, is entering the most critical period of its existence.

One of the questions which must be answered is whether the world's leading powers can get together on organizing a workable league to preserve peace. Another, and perhaps the most critical problem is how the victorious Allied powers will interpret the charter's first point which states that subscribing countries "seek no aggrandizement, territorial or other."

Does this mean that the United States should not keep the Pacific islands which Japan formerly held under mandate and which American forces this year have torn from enemy control?

American army and navy chiefs want the American flag permanently planted in the Marshalls and Carolines.

Another issue, and one which brought the difference of opinion between Mr. Churchill and Mr. Roosevelt, revolves around the charter's guarantees about popular government and no territorial changes except where the people agree. The question is: Would those guarantees prevent Allied control of defeated Germany, dismemberment of its territory and dictation of its government?

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 15—(AP).—Sgt. Albert Noona of Camp Chaffee, Ark., on his way to Fort Leavenworth, Kas., to pick up a prisoner, stopped off here to see his girl—and wound up by coming completely attached to her. Noona decided to explain the handcuffs to the girl, Doris Goodman, as they strolled through Swope Park. Not until they were handcuffed together did the sergeant discover he had lost his key. Two hours later police located a key that would fit.

Imperials Will Organize Branches

Alderman Len Owen of this city was elected president of the Imperials' Provincial Command, with Arthur Morris, also of Guelph, as secretary. Immediate Past President is Frank Tadman of Toronto.

Representatives will be elected to the executive from each of seven zones in the province. Three of these, chosen yesterday, are Col. W. Cousins, Georgetown; A. Powell, Toronto, and Alex Forbes, Galt.

A resolution asking war veterans' allowances for Imperials was adopted.

U.S. Destroyer Is Sunk By U-Boat

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15—(AP)—The 300-foot American destroyer Fiske has been sunk by a torpedo launched from a German U-boat in the Atlantic. A Navy announcement did not indicate how many of the approximately 150 men aboard lost their lives. Lieut. John A. Comly, the commander, was listed as a survivor. The loss of the Fiske raised to 175 the number of American warships lost since the war started.

Canada's Views Known To British Leaders

OTTAWA, Aug. 15—(CP)—British government representatives at the coming conference in Washington for the purpose of drawing plans for a world organization are fully aware of the views of all parts of the British commonwealth, Prime Minister Mackenzie King said to-day in the Commons.

He was answering a question from Gordon Graydon, Progressive Conservative House Leader, as to whether Britain alone or the British commonwealth was to be represented. He note Mr. King had previously said Canada would not be represented, but Anthony Eden, British Secretary of State, had referred to the British commonwealth as being represented.

Mr. King said the conference was on the "expert level." Ministers would not be present. It was behind held between the four great powers, Russia, United States, China and Britain, pursuant to the declaration made following the Moscow conference of foregn ministers.

At the London conference of commonwealth prime ministers, Mr. King added, the question of a permanent world organization to maintain peace had been fully discussed Agreement had been reached on the points of view of the different parts of the commonwealth.

"While the British representatives (at Washington) will represent the United Kingdom," said Mr. King, "they will have in thier minds very fully the points of view of the commonwealth with respect to the questions to be discussed."

The Prime Minitser said no one knew how long the war would last nor how long after the war it would be before an international organization could be set up.

As the discussoin took place on an estimate item of more than $200,000 for Canada's contribution to the League of Nations, he said the new league would continue to function in a limited way until the new organization came into being. It was not intended that the league continue after the new body was created.

Civil Servants To Aid Farmers

OTTAWA, Aug. 15—((CP) — The Labor Department said to-day the deputy heads of all Federal government departments across Canada are being urged to encourage their staffs to take farm work for a temporary period wherever satisfactory arrangements can be made.

The action is aimed primarily at providing help for prairie farmers during the harvesting season.

The deartments are being urged to give the usual vacation leave and special leave without pay to any civil servants willing to work on the farm. The scheme applies to civil servants at headqaurters in Ottawa as well as those working in departments across the country.

Civil servants working in Ontario east of Port Arthur, or in the Montreal district, will be invited to go west on the harvest excursion. Any man suitable for farm work who can obtain leave of at least a calendar month will be taken to the prairies and brought back later at a cost of $10 to the man.

Remembrance Service Conducted At Apsley

APSLEY, Aug. 15—(ENS) — The annual commemoration service was held on Sunday in St. George's Church. Owing to the extreme heat it was not an open-air service as has been the custom.

Mr. C. Robb of Trinity United Church read the Scripture lesson, which was followed by repeating the Apostles' Creed.

Rev. F. Freestone, before beginning his address, offered apology for the absence of Rev. Langstone, who had been called to report to his unit in Barriefield at once. He based his remarks on "The souls of the righteous are in the hands of God," and referred to "Grey's Elegy" written in a country churchyard as being very fitting in the case as we were paying respect "to the forefathers of the hamlet" who sleep in the two cemeteries.

After a short service in both of the cemeteries the closing exercises were held in St. George's Church. Mrs. James Downing, organist, presided at the organ for the service.

You can get added wear out of your Congoleum floors with very little effort. Brush and mop them regularly and renew the brightness of their surface with an occasional waxing. Nazi Thrust To Relieve Warsaw Fails

32 Tanks Destroyed 800 Huns Killed In Counter-Attack

By DANIEL DE LUCE, Associated Press Staff Writer.

MOSCOW, Aug. 16 —(AP)—The Red Army appeared to be making its real, all-out bid for Warsaw against bitter resistance in the Praga district just across the broad and swift Vistula from the besieged Polish capital.

Marshal Konstantin Rokossovsky's army group has been within gunshot of Warsaw since late July. For the first time in many days, the Soviet communique mentioned the Warsaw battle, disclosing the destruction of 32 Nazi tanks and 800 troops in a counter-attack in the battle of Praga.

Assault Plans Completed

Marshal Rokossovsky has completed his assault plans, built up reserves, strengthened his communications and eliminated a strong German threat to his right flank and today was striking for the heart of the enemy defence zone before Warsaw. Indications were that the struggle on the east side of the Vistula was in its final stage.

Seasoned Russian and Polish troops now are strongly dug in in a semi-circle around Praga, a great industrial district, and their massed artillery and planes were strewing the battleground with derelict tanks and sprawling German dead.

While only a frontal battle for Warsaw was reported in the Praga area, the Germans were in a precarious position and faced flank blows from the north and south as well.

Red Army troops stood unshaken before Warsaw after hurling back German reserves of tanks and infantry thrown into a costly counter-attack.

A Soviet communique said the Germans succeeded in forcing a wedge into the Russian positions but "by blows from the flanks the Soviet units threw back the enemy and restored the situation." Thirty-two German tanks and self-propelled guns were reported destroyed and 800 Germans killed.

Americans Hit Japanese Base

CHUNGKING, Aug. 16 —(AP) — American heavy bombers bombed the Japanese naval base of Mako in the Pescadores Islands to-day in the first blow at those enemy islands between Formosa and Chana.

The Formosa harbor of Takao in the southwest portion of the big Japanese islands were bombed at night. All the attack planes were from U. S. 14th air force.

No details were given on the Mako attack.

Mako lies about 1,700 miles southwest of Tokyo and 400 miles north of the Philippines.

President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill in the Caro pronouncement said the Pescadores would be returned to China, from which Japanese seized them, after the Japanese are defeated. The islands are tiny specks in the Pacific but importance because of their strategic position.

ALLIED PARACHUTES DESCEND ON FRENCH RIVIERA COAST—Parachutes dot the ground somewhere near the Riviera coast in Southern France, evidence of the new Allied landings there. They were left behind by paratroopers who struck out immediately for their objectives. This picture was radioed to New York and telephoned to Toronto.

Underground Army Attacks

LONDON, Aug. 16—(CP).—Underground forces, inspired by the Allied landings along the Riviera and the growing German rout in Normandy, were reported rising everywhere throughout France today in a swelling tide of revolt against Nazi forces which have held the French people in bondage for more than four years. Dispatches from Spain quoted advices from the French border as saying the Maquis, acting under pre-arranged plans, had launched a series of attacks upon German garrisons in Southern France as soon as they received news of the Allied landings.

By sundown last night they were said to have surrounded a score of towns, including Auch, Agen, Mntauban, Rodez, Periguex, Tulle, Aurillac and Limoges.

Serious German resistance was expected at Limoges, these advices said, but the other towns mentioned were reported manned by garrisons of less than 1,000 men each.

The German commanders at Pau, near the Spanish frontier, and at Toulouse, capital of the whole south-central area, were sent ultimatums demanding thier immediate surrender.

Vichy, meanwhile, was reported in a turmoil, with collaborationists attempting to flee the city and armed guards patrolling the streets. The A. F. I. (Independent French Agency) quoted a dispatch from Bern as saying 10,000 French Patriots were "advancing toward Vichy" and that they were being joined en route by hundreds of recruits.

The same dispatch asserted that other patriot forces of the interior were moving on Bordeaux.

In Paris, the populace was said to have gone wild with joy at news of the Allied landings along the Riviera, and some reports from the French border said sporadic fighting had broken out in the streets between collaborationists and Patriots who assembled in the streets singing the "Marseillaise." German police were reported unable to control Patriot demonstrations.

A Madrid dispatch to the Daily Mail said the Germans had made bonfires of army archieves and files of Vichy officials to keep them from Allied hands.

Headquarters said the French patriots had operated "in close co-operation with other Allied forces." They have entered Sizun, Brasparts, Pleyben, Chateauneuf, Coray and Milisac and captured by storm Quimperle, Bannalec, Chateaulin and Douarnenez.

The communique also said the F.F.I. had annihilated German garrisons at Moutiers and Bourg St. Maurice after fierce fighting.

Blame Duplicate Ground Pattern For R.A.F. Bombing Of Canadians

By WILLIAM STEWART—Canadian Press War Correspondent

WITH THE 1ST CANADIAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Aug. 16—(CP).—With bombs throwing up geysers of dirt alongside the Caen-Falaise highway, I fled in a jeep Monday from an R.A.F. bombing which in error became turned upon Canadian instead of enemy positions. My companions and I escaped, more fortunate than an undetermined number of 1st Canadian army personnel who were killed, wounded and shocked by shattering explosions of the attack which went wrong.

We were luckier, too, than some other correspondents who found themselves in the midst of the mistaken target area and were pinned down in a dugout while the earth heaved and shuddered around them. Ralph Allen, war correspondent for the Toronto Globe and Mail, was one of these.

Many Casualties.

(In a copyright story of his experiences Allen said the number of killed and wounded was "many.")

An explanation advanced by a senior Canadian staff officer was that the pattern made by the combination of woods and ground features in the bombed area virtually duplicated the correct target.

My companions and I had left an observation post and were driving up the Falaise Highway toward Caen when we heard explosives getting closer and closer to us. We didn't realize at first what it was but when we did Lieut. Dave Campbell of Hamilton, Ont., who was driving yelled for his helmet and stepped on the gas.

Startled Canadian soldiers peered apprehensively out of ditches and other cover points as we raced up the road, the bombs falling closer and closer. At one point showers of dirt were thrown onto the roadside.

Forsook Road

Finally we forsook the road and jolted over fields to get out of the target line. Once clear, we saw another formation of heavies give the same area a going over.

Officers at a headquarters told us efforts were being made to call off the attack but some time elapsed before the bombing ceased.

Officers said the attack did not affect the Canadian assault toward Falaise, which began that day and which the R. A. F. bombers were supporting. However, some equipment was damaged and the reaction of troops in the area was one of dismay.

Earlier the R.A.F. had carried out an unprecedented night bombing attack as a prelude to a Canadian offensive south of Caen, and had pin-pointed their targets with unerring precision.

Possibly Monday's episode will result in some method of communication being devised between ground troops and bombers.

Lt.-Gen. Crerar, Commander of the 1st Canadian Army, who was in an aircraft at the time, estimated 80 per cent of the R.A.F. bombs fell on enemy target areas.

Canadian Troops Enter Falaise

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press War Correspondent

WITH THE 1ST CANADIAN ARMY ON THE [illegible] Aug. 16.—(CP Cable).—Ontario infantry stormed into the outskirts of Falaise to-day and are probing into this vital road junction dominating the northern tip of the narrow gap through which Von Kluge is seeking to pull his battered German 7th Army out of the Normandy gap.

These troops drove down the highway from the north, swung around to the west of the city during the night, then went down slopes on the edge of the city this morning and worked thir way among the buildings of Falaise.

It is not known yet what opposition they are meeting, but the sound of fire from machine-guns and heavier guns can be heard from the area of the important communications centre.

Pockets of Germans are hidden in the woods north of the town, and in Falaise itself the enemy is believed to have a number of dug-in tanks, rocket mortars and anti-tank guns.

Fall Inevitable.

The fall of Falaise, however, is inevitable because it is dominated by Ontario troops on the hills to the west and south-west and by other Canadian forces which made Monday's attack across the Laison river east of the main highway.

The highway leading north-east of Falaise towards St. Pierre-Sur-Dives is now useless to the Ger-

Expecting Attack In Greece

Huns Likely To Evacuate Islands

ISTANBUL, Turkey, Aug. 16 —(AP).—Advices from inside Greece said today the new German commander, Gen. Rosler, had ordered urgent preparations against an Allied attack in western Greece and Albania.

Meanwhile it was reported here that the German commander of the Greek Aegean islands of Samos and Lesbos had ordered his troops to concentrate in the ports and towns. It was not known whether the Germans already were evacuating the islands, but the concentration of troops in readily available points appeared to indicate an evacuation was probable.

Rosler, who replaced Gen. Sheidel, is moving all his heavy units out of south Greece, leaving only light covering forces, most of which consist of satellite troops, these advices said.

The German heavy defences were being concentrated along the Adriatic coast of western Greece and lower Albania, it was reported. Along the Greek-Yugoslav frontier German troops have replaced Bulgar forces.

Hun Corridor Cut In Half In Normandy

Von Kluge Gets Most Of Armor Out Of Allied Trap

By GLADWIN HILL
Associated Press War Correspondent

LONDON, Aug. 16 (AP)—The Allies showered steel and surrender leaflets on the German 7th Army's pell-mell retreat near Falaise today and, by Berlin account, hurled an American column within 40 miles of Paris, threatening a new encirclement of fleeing German troops.

Troops of the 1st Canadian Army, meanwhile, reached the outskirts of Falaise and opened an assault on that communications town.

British patrols swept unopposed into Conde-sur-Noreau, 15 miles west of Falaise, a front dispatch said, and the first signs of chaotic confusion appeared in enemy ranks.

"The German retreat no longer is being conducted according to plan," a British staff officer said. "Now it is just get out—if you can."

German broadcasts declared the American 3rd Army, in a 60-mile eastward drive, was battling near Dreux and Chartres only 40 miles from Paris.

These armored columns, driving toward the Seine, carried the potential menace of swinging behind the enemy and bottling him up between the river and the Atlantic coast. Seine bridges have been knocked out by dive-bombing.

Field dispatches declared Field Marshal Von Kluge had pulled most of his armor from the vanishing Normandy front, but his escape hatch south of Falaise had been sliced to eight miles. (One front report said it was no more than six miles wide.)

Possibly 50,000 Nazis still were fighting rearguard actions within the dwindling Normandy pocket.

Allied planes showered the enemy with 2,000,000 safe conduct surrender leaflets.

Both the German high command communique and Nazi radio broadcasters said Americans had plunged 60 miles eastward from Alencon and were battling on a 20-mile sector between Dreux and Chartres.

No Longer Orderly

Orderly until now, Von Kluge's [illegible] began to show the first signs of chaotic confusion.

Total German casualties in the western France debacle approached the 300,000 mark.

Included in the shower of surrender leaflets were pictures of German officers capitulating at Cherbourg. These were designed to illustrate the type of treatment the enemy could expect.

The Germans were running a fiery gauntlet of bombs and shells near Falaise.

One German broadcast declaring "great new developments are shaping up in the north of France," said the Allied plan in the push eastward seemed aimed not only at

Airborne Troops Blocking All Enemy Reinforcements

By EDWARD KENNEDY—Associated Press War Correspondent

ROME, Aug. 16 — (AP) — Allied invasion troops have struck eight miles inland at some points in southern France after taking all initial objectives and establishing themselves firmly, headquarters announced tonight. British and American airborne troops vaulting behind the lines were credited officially with blocking enemy reinforcements by glider and parachute into the airborne bridgehead today. German resistance generally continued relatively weak. Assault forces fought on through the night after overrunning the first beach obstacles. At one point, however, heavy German opposition prevented landing craft from beaching, it was learned.

French and American forces are still streaming ashore on the beachheads between Toulon and Cannes.

"Casualties are exceptionally light," it was officially announced.

The assault was facilitated throughout "by a superior air bombardment and was supported by naval gunfire said by observers to be heavier and more effective than during any previous operation in the Mediterranean theatre," a headquarters announcement said.

"Air-borne American and British troops, together with the pre-D-Day bombing of roads, railroads and bridges, have successfully blocked enemy reinforcements. The airborne units are moving on predetermined objectives."

The invasion commander, in headquarters announcements, was quoted as commending troops in the seaborne operations for "the aggressiveness displayed by both assault and follow-up units."

Allied headquarters said the operations were proceeding according to plan." No comment was offered upon broadcast German accounts of the action nor was a report that French parachutists were operating 20 miles inland officially confirmed.

35 Miles Apart.

It was known the Allies had landed at Cap Negre and in the area of Frejus, 35 miles apart on the coast between Toulon and Nice, and the Germans said other attacks were made in the St. Tropez gulf region between Cap Negre and Frejus.

A heavy two-way traffic filled the air lines between southern France and Italy. The Mediterranean Allied air forces said reinforcemens for airborne troops were landed yesterday and "no opposition either from the air or on the ground was encountered."

The reinforcement wave was declared easily the largest of the day, with not less than 1,000 parachute troopers in the air at one time and

ALLIES ON RIVIERA—Invasion forces comprising French, American, British and Polish units have swept into Southern France near the world famous seaside resort town of Cannes, shown above. Complete occupation of this port is forecast soon.

Cannes, Nice Are Occupied

BERN, Aug. 16 — (AP) — Frontier news reports to La Suisse of Geneva said today the Allies had occupied Cannes and Nice and that French Partisans, co-operating with 1,000 Allied parachute troops, were about to take Marseille, from which the Germans were moving south-eastward toward Toulon.

East of Nice, French Advance Guards were said to have passed the principality of Monaco on their way to the Italian frontier at Ventimiglia.

A dispatch from the Italian border said the Germans had ordered immediate evacuation of residents along the Ligurian coastline from Ventimiglia to the naval base of La Spezia, 110 miles to the east across the Gulf of Genoa, in the expectation of new Allied landings.

A report from Chiasso to La Suisse said Fascists believed southern France and Northern Italy would soon be united in a single front and that Field Marshal Gen. Kesselrings' Gothic line defences eventually would be attacked from the rear.

It was suggested that this operation would be launched by fresh forces landed on the Ligurian coast after Allied positions between Nice and Cannes were reinforced.

This expectation was supported by reports that strong land and naval forces are still in Corsica and Sardinia and by the continued intensive bombing of the coast and military facilities of Genoa.

Daniel C. Spry, 31, Becomes Canada's Youngest General

OTTAWA, Aug. 16—(CP).—Daniel C. Spry, 31, of Winnipeg, today became Canada's youngest general.

Defence headquarters announced his promotion from brigadier to acting major-general and he succeeds Maj.-Gen. George Kitching, 33, a divisional commander of Montreal, as the most youthful of Canada's high-ranking officers.

No indication as to whether he is taking a division was given in the official release. Such matters now are subject to tight censorship. However, it has been announced recently that Maj.-Gen. R. F. L. Keller, B.C., commander of the 3rd Division, attached to the 1st Canadian Army in Normandy, had been wounded and it might be that Gen. Spry is succeeding Gen. Keller.

Gen. Spry was last in the news in the Italian campaign in July. He won the Distinguished Service Order for brilliant handling of a brigade in fighting in the Pontecorvo area.

In 1932 he was commissioned in the Princess Louise Fusiliers, Halifax, where he attended Dalhousie University. Two years later he was appointed to the Royal Canadian Regiment. He went overseas with his regiment in 1939, was adjutant and commanded A Company.

He was promoted major in 1940 and became a general staff officer at a divisional headquarters in 1941. In September, 1942, he was appointed personal assistant to Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, former commander of the Canadian Army Overseas.

Gen. Spry was with Gen. McNaughton in Algiers July 10, 1943, when the 1st Division went ashore in Sicily and he accompanied Gen. McNaughton on an inspection of Canadians in Sicily.

When Lt.-Col. C. R. Crowe, Royal Canadian Regiment, was killed, Lt.-Col. Spry took over his old regiment and commanded it in some of the most hard fought actions of the Sicilian campaign. He continued in this capacity on march into Italy until last December when he was promoted brigadier.

Mrs. Spry, the former Jessie Elizabeth (Betty) Forbes, Halifax, resides in Britain.

2,000 Planes Raid Germany

LONDON, Aug. 16 —(CP) — Another great armada of 2,000 planes half of them heavy bombers, smashed to-day at aircraft and oil plants and airdromes in Germany while other hundreds of fliers attacked enemy troops and defences on the north and south French battlefields.

Targets all were in the Leipzig and Magdeburg area in the very heart of Germany.

Berlin was bombed last night with two-ton blockbusters with which R. A. F. Mosquitos disturbed the Nazi capital's sleep.

The German radio said the Reich also was being penetrated by American flights from Italy which were striking over the Alps into the Tyrol and Bavaria.

This was the fourth straight day in which the U. S. 8th Air force had sent 1,000 or more heavy bombers against continental objectives.

The Germans said bomber fleets from the west were over Saxony, Central Germany, Hannover, Brunswick and other sections. An early Berlin report asserted 20 bombers were destroyed.

No Catch—All Peace Treaty

United Nations To Maintain Peace

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16—(AP).—Creation of a world security organization along lines to be laid down at the four-power meeting here this month probably will eliminate the need for a general peace conference and a catch-all peace treaty, such as the Versailles Treaty, after this war.

Instead the numerous and difficult problems of making a just and lasting peace are expected to be turned over to the projected post-war version of the United Nations for both settlement and maintenance.

American officials argue that [illegible] would be illogical to set up in com[illegible]ing months an organization to pre[illegible]serve peace, yet deny it the rig[illegible] to make that peace in the fir[illegible] place.

Presumably it has been with th[illegible] end in view that State Secreta[illegible] Cordell Hull has promoted the poli[illegible] of no territorial or other settle[illegible]ments until formation of a securi[illegible] league—except where countri[illegible] directly involved try to reconc[illegible] their differences, as Russia a[illegible] Poland have sought to do.

Pacific Isles Take Pounding

PEARL HARBOR, August 16 — (AP) — Japan's screen of Pacific Islands has been bombed again at both its ends and near the centre— at the Kuriles in the north, Iwo Jima, 700 miles south of Tokyo, and the Spice Islands on the equator.

Adverse weather limited the air war in the New Guinea-Carolines sector, but far to the west, heavy bombers from China bombed Takao, Formosa, and sank three freighters between Formosa and the China coast to add to hammer blows from every direction.

Southwest Pacific headquarters announced to-day that heavy and medium bombers, continuing attacks which have paralyzed Halmahera as a Japanese base, raided both Halmahera and Ternate in the Spice Islands repeatedly Monday, through heavy anti-aircraft fire. The bombs set warehouses afire and exploded ammunition dumps.

South of Halmahera, toward Ceram, air patrols sank eight coastal craft.

Meanwhile it was announced here that heavy bombers hit Japanese shipping near Paramushiro in the Kuriles Friday and also bombed the airstrip at Suribachi. They fought off 15 to 20 enemy planes, shooting down at least three and possibly eight.

Other planes bombed installations on Shumushuand on Araito Island, off Northern Paramushiro, Saturday. They also sank a patrol ship.

Marianas-based bombers raided Iwo Jima, in the volcano group, Pagon, in the northern Marianas, and Rota Island, south of Saipan, Sunday. One heavy was shot down by enemy fighters.

At Honolulu, Elmer Davis, director of the office of war information observed upon his return from Saipan and Guam that "more Tokyo governments will have to fall before the Japanese are ready for the unconditional surrender we shall demand."

mans and other routes running out of the town are within easy range of the big concentration of Canadian guns.

The battleground to-day was unusually quiet. There was a lot of traffic movement, but there has been no heavy shelling by the Germans and nothing in the way of enemy mortar fire compared with the barrages loosed on Canadian positions when the frontline was just south of Caen.

Germans Shaken to Core

The two attacks made by 1st Canadian Army forces south of Caen in the past eight days have made a greater change in the battle picture than any operations since the landing.

The Germans appear shaken to the core and unless the enemy is able to bring in S.S. troops in large numbers it would look as though the Canadian will be able to keep a steady advance going with little trouble.

Neither Ontario troops who overlook Falaise from 500-ft. slopes nor other Canadian infantry marching down from the northwest met any serious opposition and casualties during the past 24 hours probably have been lighter than at any time since D-day.

Germans have surrendered in scores and personnel in charge of prisoner-of-war enclosures have been hard-pressed to keep up with the flow. A large number of the prisoners were dispirited.

For the first time since they started fighting in France the Canadians making the attack on Falaise are seeing villages in the battle area that hardly have a scratch. Until now all the villages have been heavily bombed and shelled and their occupation has meant little more than the occupation of piles of rubble.

Closing in on Falaise, target of their bitterly-contested 20-mile advance from Caen, Canadian troops captured or over-ran a number of towns and villages.

The towns of St. Pierre-Caniven, three miles north of Falaise, Aubigny, two miles north, and Ussy, five miles to the northwest, were captured by Canadian infantry and tank columns which broke loose late yesterday as a German screen of guns was pierced.

Fresh Landings.

(Fresh Allied landings were declared in Berlin dispatches to Stockholm to have lengthened the front to 120 miles, from the French naval base of Toulon to San Remo, Italian port and winter resort 84 miles southwest of Genoa. Tank battles were reported in progress midway between Toulon and Cannes. The Germans said heavy fighting had developed for an airfield north of St. Raphael.

(A Transocean broadcast from Berlin said German forces had blown up harbor installations at Nice, Cannes and St. Tropez, all likely spots for attack.

(The BBC said one of its correspondents had been as far as 20 miles behind Cannes with French parachute troops. This broadcast, recorded by NBC, said 12,000 French sailors were participating in the invasion.

Dispatches from correspondents referred to three separate Allied beachheads, but the location of a third was not disclosed. Stephen Barber, Associated Press war correspondent, said the landings covered a 40-mile stretch of the coast.

Another dispatch said the Germans began some heavy shelling, forcing landing craft to hit the beaches behind dense smoke screens.

In general, however, reports indicated opposition on this second day of the fourth front was much less than anticipated. No air attacks have yet been reported on the landing parties.

The Mediterranean Allied air forces, which yesterday broke all previous records for one day's individual flights down in this theatre, still were holding a protecting cover over the ground troops this morning.

Hit Airdrome

Air activity during the night included an attack on the Valence airdrome in the Rhone Valley. By both day and night German communications leading to the battle area were battered virtually without letup.

Three enemy aircraft were destroyed in operations in the last 24 hours and 20 Allied planes were lost.

The weather still held good.

"Although there is little in the way of definite naval news from the assault area on the southern coast of France," said a naval communique, "steady building up of the army by the Allied navies is proceeding smoothly... the work continues by night as well as by day."

The announcement that reinforcements were moving in steadily was in itself evidence that the areas along the coast were firmly in Allied hands.

(German broadcasts acknowledged beachheads were established at three points and that glider troops were pouring in. The enemy broadcasts said heavy battles were under way, and asserted Allied bombs failed to knock out German coastal batteries.

(In an early afternoon report, the German propaganda agency, International Information Bureau, declared the Allies had been able to land armor only in the bay of St. Tropez, 15 airline miles south along the coast from Frejus. This report said Americans also gained a foothold at St. Raphael, in the Frejus area, and the Hyeres Islands, 10 miles off the coast from Cape Negre.)

Unless the Germans are able to mobolize a much greater defensive force than so far encountered it appeared the Allied landing force would quickly extend its hold. Allied Headquarters said in a special announcement last night that "some of the high ground back of the beaches is in our hands."

Cap Negre and the heavily-fortified Sentinel Islands of Port Cros and Levant, 10 miles offshore, were captured before dawn yesterday by picked French and American troops. Seizure of the Islands cleared both sea and air approaches to the mainland.

German broadcasts at first reported landings at three points, but last night the Transocean Agency said in a Berlin broadcast that landings had been made at various points from Cannes west to the Toulon region.

Troops Advance Fast

(Nazi propagandists declared the Southern France landings were "on the same scale as in Normandy.")

(A Spanish radio report said Canadian troops were included in the invasion forces but there was no Allied confirmation of this. It was thought probable, however, that the combined Canadian-United States special service force which helped to hold the Anzio beachhead in Italy would be in the forefront of the landing).

On the first day of operations on this fourth major front against Hitler "substantial numbers" of troops were put ashore, Gen. Maitland Wilson's headquarters announced last night.

Allied airmen sweeping over the coastal areas late in the day said there appeared to be no opposition and that American vehicles were "running all over the countryside."

"The Jerries were caught completely by surprise, and what few there were waiting for us have been scattered or captured,' wrote Herbert L. Matthews of the New York Times, in a pooled press dispatch.

Turkish advices immediately began a round of conjecture that other Allied landings might come soon elsewhere.

The Ankara radio reported "another Allied landing is expected — this time on the Adriatic coast of Italy, aiming for Trieste." Istanbul dispatches said there were reports the Germans were preparing for Allied attacks on Western Greece and Albania.

KANDY, Ceylon— Allied troops on the road to Mandalay continued to advance southeast of Taungni and reached the village of Thaiwagon, two miles north of Pinbaw, a communique said today. Other troops on the Tiddim road advanced south.

Typhoons Wreck 17 of 18 German Tanks

By ALAN RANDAL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON, Aug. 16.—(CP).— Remember back in 1940 when our troops were streaming back from France and the German Stuka dive bombers were the terror of retreating British army? Well, to-day our typhoons make those Stuas look like a baby's pram.

That is the word of Group Capt. Paul Davoud, D.S.O., D.F.C., of Kingston, Ont., commanding a Canadian Typhoon fighter-bomber wing in Normandy and he say they haven't really got down to business yet. They haven't had a chance. The weather hasn't been good and the Germans haven't been sufficiently on the move.

3-Ring Circus.

But "once it starts it should be a three-ring circus," he said.

He was referring to the part the Typhoons with their bombs and rockets will play when the battle of Normandy reaches a point where the German armor becomes dislodged and attempts more fluid operations than tried in the early operations.

To illustrate his point he spoke of a Typhoon attack on 18 German tanks in a valley near the Sienne. Bombers had knocked out a bridge across the Siene river over which the tanks were to go. With its destruction they deployed about the valley, each of them becoming an individual target. Bombers would not be so good for the job so they sent out rocket-firing Typhoons and they knocked out 17 of the tanks.

"The valley of death was an understatement," said the group captain.

But before the Canadian troops in the Caen front the Germans have been using a different technique, digging their tanks in hull down and using them as sort of forts with heavy screens of cross-firing guns about them.

"Those are tough nuts to crack," said Davoud. "They are difficult to spot because the German is a master of camouflage and once found they are not good targets for aircraft because the Germans just go below ground and come up when the atack is over and the positions are well protected by anti-aircraft emplacements.

Greater Speed

"But," he added, "when the armor is finally on the run—that is where we come in; we'll make a fortune."

The Typhoons can hit an individual tank with two, four or eight rockets which beat cannons for destructiveness and bombs for accuracy. They are twice as fast as the Stuka ever was, carry twice the weight of bombs—two 1,000-pounders—and four cannon. Rockets are alternative to bombs and the bomb-carrying "Tiffies" work closely with the "Rockphoons."

Canadian Typhoon squadrons are working as close-support formations for the army.

And from the morale angle the Typhoons are great boosters for our own soldiers and great breeders of fear for the enemy. The sound effect alone is quite something—the normal thunder of a Typhoon engine, the horrifying "swish" of the rockets and the noise of the cannon. As Davoud himself said, "If I were on a French road and saw a Typhoon coming? Well, I'd write myself off right then."

W.I. Discusses Hospitalization

HAVELOCK, August 16—(ENS) —The Government insurance plan for free hospitalization through the Women's Institute came up for a lengthy discussion at the August meeting of the Havelock Women's Institute, and resulted in the matter being left for a special meeting in the near future. The secretary was instructed to write for complete details from the Government.

Mrs. H. Hoard was social convener for the meeting which took the form of a young mothers' day. A health talk was given by Mrs. F Gibson, a vocal solo was sung by Mrs. J. W. Wilkinson, who was also winner of the nursery rhyme contest. Mrs. J. Freeman gave an amusing reading, "A Quig for a Son-in-law." The roll call was answered by a pickle recipe. Mrs. H Dafoe was hostess, assisted by Mrs J. Hoffman, Mrs. H. Hoard, and Mrs. R. Jones.

Council Unenthusiastic Over Dance Hall Plan

Intentions of two Toronto men to build a dance hall costing $15,000 to $20,000 in the vicinity of Morrow-Lansdowne streets have been reported to the city council at its last two sessions, and Alderman Swanston, as chairman of the property committee, said there "have been in to see me".

"They say they have options on two properties," he reported.

"There are some nice homes down in that district," Alderman Bradburn remarked, and Alderman Dutton added: "We don't want a repitition of Brock street anywhere."

Alderman Swanston said the Toronto men wish to build in the city for its services, but he did not think they could get priorities for present work.

City Engineer Parsons informed the council that the Toronto men had showed him some rough drawings, but they were not complete enough to be considered plans.

The council passed on to other business Monday night leaving the dance hall project on the fringe.

preventing escape of the Germans, but "simultaneously to create an upheaval in the Paris region."

The aproaching cleanup in Normandy gave the Allies firm hold on the western half of the Sine-Loire quadrangle running inland to Paris. Part of its eastern end was menaced by the reported push to Chartres.

Allied ground troops hammering all around the perimeter of the German 7th Army's salient have halved the size of the area in the last 24 hours and narrowed the escape gap to 8 miles or less. Allied planes wrecked hundreds of German vehicles in the Nazis' swift but generaly orderly retreat to the east.

It was not known how many Germans were still in the trap. The latest estimate, and it was many hours old, was 50,000. The salient, excluding minor irregularities along the edges, was aproximately 20 miles long and no more than eight miles deep.

Used Care.

One explanation contained in a front dispatch for the failure of the Allies to close the Falaise-Argentan escape gap was that the two armies driving toward each other had to exercise extreme care to avoid coming under each other's artillery fire.

Canadian 1st Army troops on the north side of the pocket reached Falaise and launched an assault on that city and British forces captured Vassy, 20 miles to the west. British and American troops together sliced off a large section of the western end of the pocket. The Americans scored gains of up to three miles and took Tinchebray, a road junction nine miles south-east of Vire.

Putanges, a major crossing of the Orne River 10 miles west of Argentan, was captured, widening the southern jaw of the escape gap.

Additional gains were made east of Ger and north-east of Domfront.

British troops by-passed the former German rallying point of Conde-Sur-Noireau and pushed across the Noireau River.

Front dispatches said it was estimated the American 3rd Army, commanded by Lt.-Gen. George S. Patton, Jr., in a little more than two weeks had inflicted nearly 100,000 casualties on the Germans—taking 39,000 prisoners, wounding 46,000 and killing 11,000.

An additional 2,000 prisoners were taken by the Canadians in the last three days.

Casualties High

This brings the Germans' estimated total Normandy casualties to from 250,000 to 300,000. On Aug. 8 the total was estimated at 190,000.

In the Brittany cleanup Dinard, just west of St. Malo, was occupied by the Americans after organized resistance ceased there. This was the site of the heaviest fighting on the Breton Peninsula.

(The situation at the ancient Breton north coast port of St. Malo was obscure. The German D.N.B. agency said in a broadcast dispatch that the Americans had captured the city where a die-hard Nazi garrison has been holding out in the old citadel. There was no immdiate Allied confirmation of this report howover and in a later Berlin broadcast the International Information Bureau, Nazi propaganda agency, asserted that the St. Malo fortress was holding out.

The whole western end of the 7th Army's "coffin salient" was buckling. Von Kluge's beaten troops gave ground along both the north and south sides of the pocket.

At the shell-swept escape gap itself, where resistance still was the fiercest, Canadians had driven southward through the defence crust to within less than a mile north of Falaise. The situation in the Canadian sector now was described as fluid.

While enemy troops that got through the Argentan-Falaise gap escaped the prospect of capture they still faced the prospect of destruction by Allied air attacks which would write them off just as effectively as a fighting force. It was pointed out that many of the enemy divisions now hemmed in took a week to get from the Seine River to the battle area and the way back out would be under far greater difficulties.

Capture Much Booty

As the Allies continued to hammer the Germans in the Normandy death trap an American officer at the front declared Von Kluge's force has "ceased to exist as an army."

American troops captured huge stores of ammunition and equipment as they pressed forward. Hundreds of prisoners streamed back to the cages, with thousands more certain to be taken within the next few days, a front dispatch said.

North of Argentan the Germans still were reported battling desperately against the armored drive of the American 3rd Army commanded by Lt.-Gen. George S. Patton, Jr. part of Argentan was in American hands and forward elements strove to close the escape gap and join with the Canadians driving south in the Falaise area.

To the west around the rim of the pocket gains of from two to four miles were scored by American troops yesterday in many sectors.

Field dispatches said the Germans were withdrawing by daylight yesterday for the second time in three days and were takng an aerial battering.

A sudden heavy thundershower, hampering Allied planes last evening, gave the Germans one of their last chances for flight.

Balfour Arrives

OTTAWA, Aug. 16 —(CP)—The Hon. Harold Balfour, British under secretary for air, arrived in Ottawa Tuesday for meeting with Air Minister Power and officials of the R.C.A.F.

NEW YORK— The BBC to-day broadcast a dispatch which said Allied troops in southern France had taken five towns, including one five miles inland, and that "prisoners are coming in in batches."

Packers Trounce Marines 20-7

Last night at Brinton Recreation Field Canada Packers trounced the Marines 20 to 7 due largely to the superb pitching of F. Foley of Canada Packers, who also helped his own cause with some timely hitting. The Packers played one of their best games of the season and will make it tough for the rest of the teams if they hit as they did last night

Some top fielding by Begley at third was also a feature of the game. The Marines used three pitchers, but all were hit hard and often. F. Foley, pitching for the Packers, struck out 12 batters. Canada Packers will be minus their captain (first base) S. Detlor for the next two or three games as he will be taking unto himself a partner in life on Thursday. All the boys wish him and his bride the very best of luck.

The teams:

Marines — Thompson 2b, McCue c, Stewart 1b, Heffernan ss, Simpson lf, Matticci rf, Taylor p, Bennett cf, Metcalf 3b.

Canada Packers — S. Detlor 1b, G. Downer ss, A. Downer c, H. Nobes rf, L. Lefave 2b, N. Downer cf, H. Foster lf, F Foley p, Traynor 3b.

Score by innings:

Nazi Thrust

The effort to relieve Warsaw was one of many major counter-attacks to which the German High Command committed irreplaceable reserves yesterday, others striking vainly at Russian armies near the East Prussian front in Lithuania and West of the Vistula.

The Russians destroyed 114 Nazi tanks during the day in Southern Poland.

Losses Heavy.

(A broadcast Moscow announcement recorded in London to-day by the Soviet monitor said Marshal Ivan S. Konevy's 4th Ukraine Army had killed or captured 172,360 Germans between July 13 and August 12 in driving through Southern Poland toward German Silesia.)

Yesterday's frenzied enemy attacks came while Red army troops in Northern Poland were striking along the Bialystok-Lyck railway through a 15-mile belt of Axis defences guarding imperilled East Prussia in the Masurian Lakes region. Grajewo, only two miles from the frontier, was reported under heavy air attack.

In the north Gen. Ivan Maslennikov's sweep across Estonia freed another 80 settlements, but elsewhere from the Baltic to the western reaches of the Carpathians, the Russians said, the Red armies during the day broke wave after wave of German counter-attacks.

At best, it was believed here, the German High Command could have hoped only that the Nazi counter-attacks would blunt for a few weeks the sharpness of the Red army's offensive power, for these enemy blows have been delayed too long to catch the Soviet advance forces in over-extended and vulnerable positions.

Astride two main railways from Bialystok into Warsaw, Marshal Rokossovsky's divisions turned Praga's outlying factories and apartment buildings into gun-crammed fortresses which broke the heart of the enemy thrusts.

Report Canadian Casualties Low

NEW YORK, August 16 —(CP). —Two war correspondents to-day reported light Canadian losses in the fighting for Falaise.

Ross Munro, Canadian Press war correspondent, said losses were lighter than at any time since D-Day and a CBC correspondent said losses were "negligible." The CBC correspondents report, recorded by CBS, added "it's wonderful to be able to say that, for a change."

Italian Front Becomes Quiet

ROME, August 16 — (AP).—British 8th Army troops have mopped up German resistance in Empoli, on the south bank of the Arno River 25 airline miles west of Florence Headquarters announced to-day.

The Italian front, however, remained generally unchanged.

Shelling of aircraft by German long-range guns tapered off.

The Allied Military Government now is feeding three-fourths of the population of Florence, it was announced, but in some suburban areas still cut off many thousands are unable to get food.

Green Vegetables Spoiling From Heat

Rain is badly needed if the district's green vegetable crop is to be saved, according to the city's vegetable dealers. At the present, they said, lettuce and cauliflower are the hardest hit, and while reasonably large quantities are available now, it is of a poorer quality than expected.

Most of the retail vegetable stores reported they were obtaining some lettuce and cauliflower, but warned anything might happen if there isn't some change in the weather in the near future. On the other hand, some stores admitted they could not get the quality of lettuce they desired, and declared that good cauliflower, in their case, was practically unobtainable!

Market gardeners who have large quantities ready for harvesting, say that rain is badly needed, if much of their crop is to be salvaged.

Boathouse Burned On Dr. Moir's Island

Cottagers in the Crowe's Landing district battled a brisk fire with buckets of water Tuesday toiling in a summer temperature above 90 degrees, as fire destroyed a large boathouse on the island of Dr. A. Moir of Peterborough. The efforts of the cottagers saved the summer home and a large launch house nearby, both of which were menaced by the flames.

The fire started after an explosion in the boathouse and the cause is unknown, but believed due to some trouble in the lighting plant, and pumping unit. The building housed the two units, along with a canoe, and 1,000 feet of dressed lumber. An estimate of the loss has not been given but it will be high.

The island is located in Stoney Lake a short distance west of Crowe's Landing, and when the fire was noticed, cottagers from the mainland and surrounding islands hurried to the scene and organized a bucket brigade, that did a splendid job, saving the buildings nearby.

Dr. Moir was in the city when the fire started, and the only ones at the island were Mrs. Moir and a granddaughter.

German Army Broken Into Guerilla Bands

By HAL BOYLE
Associated Press War Correspondent

U.S. 3RD ARMY HEADQUARTERS, Aug. 16—(AP).—The German 7th Army is breaking up into roving guerilla bands and appears today to have passed the point where it is able to mass its remaining men and supplies for a breakthrough to the Seine River to join other broken and disorganized units fleeing beyond Paris.

Demoralized by shattering artillery and aerial bombardments, the Nazi army within the narrowing steel ring in Normandy is disintegrating daily and is trying to escape from the squeezing pocket in groups of 15 to 50 men.

Officers of the 3rd Army expressed belief the bulk of the German 7th Army is caught in the gigantic trap whose only gap is an eight-mile exit between Falaise and Argentan. All escape roads through this corridor of death are "interdicted," an army term meaning they are controlled by strong fire power although not straddled by troops.

An indication of the vast and vital wound inflicted on the German army in France is the unofficial estimate that the 3rd Army alone in its sweep to Argentan captured 39,000 prisoners and killed 11,000 Germans.

Another 20,000 German troops are hopelesssly cut off on the Brest peninsula in port defences and isolated strongpoints which are being reduced at leisure.

South of the Loire River and in the vicinity of Angers, 5,000 more of the enemy slowly are being cut to pieces and no longer can be considered an effective fighting force.

Thus from Brest to Argentan, most fighting now consists of brushes with heavily armed Nazi guerilla bands, trying desperately to rejoin their comrades who already have given up the battle of France as lost and retreating as fast as possible on bicycles, carts and afoot.

Robot Bomb Damage Severe

TORONTO, Aug. 16 (CP)—There "is an air of victory throughout the length and breadth of the United Kingdom," Major J. S. P. Armstrong, Ontario Agent-General in London, said today, and the people are in good spirits in spite of the menace of Robot bombs.

Major Armstrong who left the United Kingdom yesterday morning, said he felt that many Canadians did not fully realize the damage and the dislocation caused by Robot bombs.

He recalled that in one night of fire-watching he counted explosions from 159 of the flying bombs falling in the area in which he was working.

In Ontario House, 40 per cent of the staff had been directly affected by robot bombs, either through damage to their homes or being "in imminent danger of serious injury."

ation after a day inwhich a massive force of 1,900 heavy bombers, with supporting fighters "in great strength," mangled 21 German air force bases.

On the Russian, French and Italian fronts, Allied communiques listed 71 German planes destroyed and 86 Allied craft lost.

Much of the day's effort again was directed against German air strength in continuance of the campaign to prevent the hobbled Luftwaffe from coming to life in time to fly to the aid of battle-shattered German field armies.

Targets included the Delitzxch air equipmnt depot, one of the most important in Germany; bomber assembly plants at Schkeuditz and Halle; aircraft engine plants at Magdeburg, Dessaq and Kothen; synthetic oil plants at Zeitz, Bothlen and Magdeburg; a carbonization and oil refinery at Rositz and a German air force station at Halberstadt.

The Delitzxch, Schkeuditz and Rositz targets never had been hit before by American heavies. The Magdeburg engine plant and the Halberstadt air force station were damaged heavily earlier this month. Synthethic oil plants struck to-day were knocked out two months ago but recently were repaired and producing on a reduced scale.

All bombing was done visually in good weather and U. S. headquarters called the results good to excellent.

Company Wants Site Earmarked For Legion

COBOURG, Aug. 16 (ENS) — Cobourg town council held a special meeting Tuesday night to consider the enquiry of a firm seeking to establish a factory in Cobourg. The company would be willing to take an option on the site which at present is earmarked for the proposed Legion Hall, situated on Albert street.

Before anything could be done it was pointed out, the Legion would have to be consulted. If the Legion should decide to take another site, arrangements could be made to grant the option on the land required by the company. At the request of the mayor, the press agreed to withhold any futher information as to the name of the company and the nature of the proposed factory.

Collect 6 Tons In Salvage Drive

HAVELOCK, Aug. 16 — (ENS). — The first curb salvage collection to be held in Havelock took place on Tuesday, with gratifying results, and was sponsored by the Havelock-Belmont branch of the Red Cross Society, assisted by the local Eastern Star Patriotic Association, resulting in a total weight of almost six tons of waste paper, cardboard and rags being collected, the proceeds from which amounted to $47.68.

The untiring efforts of the salvage committee composed of members of both organizations with Mrs. W. Copp as convener were responsible for the success of the drive. As a result of the two house-to-house canvasses the citizens had been educated how to sort, pack and tie the bundles, and had been supplied with heavy twine by the canvassers. The buyer complimented the committee on the manner in which the salvage had been prepared for collection.

Plan Second Drive.

The regular meeting of the Red Cross Society was held after the collection, and the president, Mrs. A. S. Thompson, reported that another curb collection would be made this fall and that in every home there should be a plan of systematic saving of waste paper and rags started at once to insure the success of the second drive.

A communication was received with regard to the nursing course to be held October 3-6, by the University of Toronto School of Nursing and the establishing of a local health program by sending a nurse to take this course who on return would develop the program for this community. It was decided to leave this matter for future consideration.

The treasurer was authorized to settle the following accounts: E. D. Chiles, flannelette, 66 cents; Hubbel Hardware, binder twine for salvage drive, $2.13; Miss M. Williams, $1, and Mrs. F. McKay, $2.50, transportation blood donors to Peterborough.

Since receiving Mrs. C. Anderson's resignation as work-room convener at the last meeting, the society was informed that circumstances had arisen whereby Mrs. Anderson will not be leaving town, and the meeting voted unanimously that she be interviewed and requested to again assume the duties of that office.

WMS Reviews Figures Liquor Consumption

ROSENEATH, Aug. 16 —(ENS)— Mrs. Andrew Brown was hostess Tuesday afternoon when the regular meeting of the W.M.S. was held in her home. The president, Mrs. R Crego presided.

It was decided to hold the meetings in the evening for the remainder of the year, the September meeting to be held in Mrs. M. Davey's home, and the members to bring a donation toward the bazaar.

Mrs. A. J. Campbell, in charge of a study period, gave a splendid address on Temperance, when the following startling figures were revealed, that in all of America nine million dollars a day were spent on liquor, and ten million gallons of gasoline used to distribute liquor in the space of one year. The responsibility of Christian citizens toward this problem were freely discussed.

The president read an article on chivalry, and Mrs. C. W. Varcoe played a piano solo. Afternoon tea was served by the hostess.

Born in Cobourg, he was educated in the public school and collegiate institute and before his enlistment in 1942 he was employed at the local foundry. After enlisting with the Midlands here he trained at Camp Borden and Cornwall and went overseas in 1943. A letter to his parents revealed that he had arrived in France early in June.

Fire Destroys Launch Owned By Soldier

BANCROFT, Aug. 13 (ENS) — Fire completely destroyed a pleasure launch belonging to R.Q.M.S. Ronald Maxwell of Bancroft, recently. Mr Maxwell had been at his summer cottage on Lake Baptiste and was in company with a guest, Captain Craig, pulling into the main dock at Baptiste Station Saturday evening when both doors over the engine compartment suddenly blew open and it is believed the gas fumes and the excessive heat caused the vapour to explode. The two men although not injured got a singing. Mr. Maxwell in spite of the fire hazard managed to propel the stricken yacht to a dock a distance of some twenty feet and after leeping into the dock shoved the burning craft away from other moored boats. The loss was partially covered by insurance.

A Blow From The South

There is really very little that can be said at present about the Allied landing in force in the south of France. It has been obvious for several weeks that the blow would be struck eventually, for a large French army was concentrated on Corsica, and on Monday the Germans ordered the evacuation of Marseilles. Sir Henry Maitland Wilson has said that the task of his forces is to drive the Germans out and join the Allied armies which are advancing from Normandy. How long it will take him to do the job no one can say at present.

The Allied landing did not meet with heavy German resistance. That does not mean, however, that there are no Germans in the south of France, or that our troops will advance to the north without any serious fighting. It appears that the Germans had 60 or 65 divisions in France, and they must be using at least half of these to fight in Normandy. But even if there are only 30 divisions in the south, they could put up a good fight for a while, though they would eventually be overcome by the weight of our numbers.

From what Wilson says, it looks as though the Allies would drive up the Rhone valley. If Hitler had any idea he could hold a line on the Seine and Marne rivers, with Paris as his anchor, he will have to reconsider it now. General Eisenhower has said that there are many weeks of hard fighting ahead of our troops, but he appeared to think that anything in the nature of a really strong German stand was now out of the question.

At several thousand miles distance we understandably see the strategy of the battles which are in progress with a deceptive simplicity of outline. When we say that the Germans will now be unable to make an effective stand we really mean no more than if we said that they cannot win. But they can fight, and they can inflict heavy blows on us, and they can secure delays for themselves, and they can cost us many casualties, and undoubtedly they will do all these things. The fact that they are now in retreat to their homeland does not mean that our forces are having an easy time; indeed, it means that the worst fighting is still to come.

A Visit To Hitler

Recently Mr. Mackenzie King made public what passed between himself and Adolf Hitler when they met in Germany in 1937. Apparently he made it clear to the Fuehrer that if there should be another war, Canada might be expected to fight side by side with Britain. We are not to assume, of course, that Mr. King hurled defiance at Hitler; diplomacy is not conducted in quite that way; but it would not be difficult for a man of experience in such matters to make his meaning perfectly clear without being offensive, and we may be quite sure that Hitler understood what Mr. King meant. We need not suppose that Mr. King's warning gave Hitler much worry; in 1937 Canada did not look especially formidable, and perhaps the German leader had forgotten how formidable Canada was in 1914-18. But the important fact is that Mr. King told Hitler what he might expect, and until last week he did not feel that the time had come to tell Canada what he had done. He had previously told officials of the British Government of his action, and had received their thanks for his support.

This new light on the matter gives it a new appearance. The Premier's political opponents have not hesitated to insinute that he sought out Hitler because he liked celebrities, and hob-nobbed with him on the most amicable terms. That, of course, is sheer nonsense, and so are the attempts to give a sinister air to the Premier's mission. Mr. King visited Hitler because it has always been a very good policy for statesmen to meet face to face; it is much easier to understand a man whom one has met, than a man who is a shadow in the mind. And Mr. King visited Hitler to give him a piece of information which was vastly more important than Hitler knew. We are glad that the matter has now been cleared up, and that a pack of foolish and vicious stories have been discredited.

Local Historical Societies

Our attention has been drawn to the fact that the local historical societies of Eastern Ontario are fewer than they were. This is a great pity, for those societies did good work while they existed, and much work still remains for them to do. The job of such local societies was to undertake tasks which were not of sufficient interest to attract national historians, but which possessed strong local interest, and which pieced out the history of the county or community in which the society existed. The findings of such societies enriched larger works, like Guillet's Early Life In Upper Canada, and they fostered an antiquarian spirit in the country which was culturally valuable. Would it not be possible to revive the societies which have temporarily gone out of existence?

The late Stephen Leacock had a great respect for such societies, and in 1925 he made a most complimentary reference to them in an address to the Canadian Historical Association. "A thing to which this association ought specially to devote its attention, is the encouragement of what one may call local history", he said. He then went on to say that in his boyhood he thought of 'history' as something which was contained in a book, couched in the resounding language of a Macaulay or a Greene. But then he continued:

"Fifty years have passed since the time of which I speak, and my point of view has changed. I value none the less the great historical epics of a Macaulay or a Gibbon. But I find myself drawn more and more to the charm and meaning of little places. Who lived here first? Who first set the stones that lay beneath the simple frame of that log-house? How did life feel for these first comers? Such queries and such reflections may arise in any lost corner of our countryside, and may well fill the reflecting mind with wonder and interest. For after all, the life of the individual has, in its silent passage to the end, the same infinite mystery and the same unfathomed meaning as the life of a nation".

Peterborough once had an historical society, but it seems to have disappeared. Peterborough once had a city record, kept for many years by the late Frank Dobbin, but it has fallen into disuse, and it would take many months of hard work to bring it up to date. Are we wise to let these things slip away from us? A few days ago the Examiner recorded the death of a lady who had seen much of the growth of this city; had anyone taken the trouble, during her last years, to make notes of what she remembered? The people who saw Peterborough grow from a small lumber town to its present size are dropping off one by one, and they are carrying their memories with them. We, the living, are the losers, and our grandchildren will not thank us for our indifference to the history of our own city and its district.

Nothing of value grows without roots; there can be no shining future where there is no affectionate and accurate recollection of the past. The cities of Eastern Ontario today are what our ancestors made them, and we show little wisdom in allowing all recollection of those ancestors to slip away. Peterborough is fortunate in having a few books which contain its history in part, but there remains much to be done in filling in the outline, and the history of this part of the country before the white man came is virtually untouched ground. There is ample work here for an historical society.

Memorial To a Great Editor

Arrangements are now going forward in Winnipeg for the establishment of a J. W. Dafoe Memorial Foundation, which will commemorate the great editor of the Free Press who died a few months ago. The purpose of the Memorial will be to further international understanding by promoting lectures, discussions and publications on international affairs. This is entirely appropriate, for during his fifty years of journalism the late Dr. Dafoe became a widely recognized authority on international affairs, particularly as they affected the British Commonwealth, and what he wrote on such matters was authoritative. In his day John Dafoe's name was better and more favourably known at Geneva, and at other centres of international discussion, than that of any other Canadian, with the possible exception of the present Prime Minister. A foundation which will further the work which he carried on so vigorously during his life would please John Dafoe greatly; nothing could be more appropriate.

NOTE AND COMMENT

This would be a good time for a few more of those 'freezing' orders.

Three Good Things

By SAMUEL MARCHBANKS

EVERY few months I discover that I have several books which ought to be reviewed before they grow any older, and then I am forced to crowd two or three of them into a single column, much against my will. I am going to write about three books today, all of them good, and all of them worth a full-length review; but these are days of paper shortage, and it cannot be so.... The first is a collection of the short stories of the late Virginia Woolf, called "Haunted House." There are many people, I find, who think that Virginia Woolf was an austere and obscure writer, whose books may only be read in a spirit of tension and puzzlement; they will find "Haunted House" the very book to change their minds, and introduce them to her more ambitious work. Let them begin with "The Man Who Loved His Kind" in this collection, and if they can resist its humour and keenness of observation, they are very solemn indeed—much more solemn than Virginia Woolf ever was.

IT was not Virginia Woolf's habit to present her characters directly to the reader. She gave the reader their thoughts, and what other people thought about them, and thus the portraits were drawn. That method is admirable in the hands of a subtle and brilliantly discerning writter, but it usually needs the scope of a novel to give it a fair demonstration. In this collection Virginia Woolf shows that it may also be applied to the short story. Her greatest power was in her ability to conjure up moods by the most economical means; she understood the pain of love, and the pain of disappointment, as very few writers have done, and she could convey her understanding to sensitive readers with the utmost delicacy. In the short stories her usual economy of means is carried as far as it can possibly go, but she never loses strength in this way. Readers who know her other work will find many allusions and echoes of the novels in these stories, and it may increase their pleasure to relate what is new to what they are familiar with already.

THE second book is called "The Great Ship, and Rabelais Replies," and it is made up of two dialogues by Eric Linklater, who has made brilliant use of this form to discuss problems of current interest. Some of his dialogues have been heard over the CBC, very successfully presented from Montreal. Linklater's play, "Crisis In Heaven" is at present running in London (if the robot bombs have not killed it, as they have killed so many other plays) and it is said to be very much in the style of these dialogues. The first named is about the war in the Western Desert, and it follows Mr. Linklater's familiar theme that fighting men often do not realize fully what they are fighting for, but fight for a variety of reasons, some good and some bad; but the faith which keeps them fighting is good, and makes its contribution at last to what is good in the world and in history. The second dialogue is much better, and it concerns education. Linklater brings together Dean Swift, Bishop Grundtvig of Denmark, the Archpoet and the great Francis Rabelais, and lets them dispute about his subject. It is Rabelais who has the last word, when he demands that a guarantee be given to the children of soldiers that they should be the beneficiaries of their father's valour; children, says he, aspire to freedom and knowledge, but the world as it exists knocks those aspirations out of their heads and forces something far less worthy to take its place—it may be that he means 'security from cradle to grave.' Rabelais, who was the great advocate of letting men of good will do as they please, is made by Linklater to ask for a Great Charter of the Children. These dialogues are not, in my opinion, as good as those in the earlier volume called "The Raft and Socrates Asks Why," but they are still good enough to command the attention of intelligent readers, and they are necessary to a full understanding of what Linklater is getting at.

THE third book in this group is George Biddle's "Artists At War," in which this brilliant American artist tells about his work with his country's troops in Tunisia, Sicily and Italy. The book is illustrated very generously with gravure reproductions and line drawings by the author; there are 56 illustrations altogether. Curious as it may seem, I thought the text of the book better than the pictures, which is unusual in a book by an artist; I do not advance this opinion very seriously, however, as it may merely spring from ignorance. Mr. Biddle is a first-rate reporter—far better than the majority of professional reporters who have written books about phases of the war. This, I think is because he is older, better educated and of more profound intellect than the majority of reporters. He tells his readers many sensational things, and he reproduces accurately the rough and often obscene speech of fighting men. But he is not interested in sensationalism and obscenity for their own sake, and he does not attach any special importance to them; they are part of the picture and, like facial disfigurements, he sets them down without passion or criticism.

MR. Biddle's appraisals of the various fighting forces are interesting. He has great admiration for the skill and resource of the fighting men of the United States, but he makes the odd criticism that they lack gallantry and conviction—qualities which he finds in the Russians and the Germans, and in most of the British. The lack in the forces of his own country he attributes to a lack of understanding of the real issues of the war. American troops admire the Germans as fighters, and often they are enraged and disgusted by the treachery and barbarism of the Germans, but they appear to have no idea of what the Germans really are, and why they have to fight them to the death. They are an army without a cause. This is a criticism which will doubtless attract a good deal of attention in the U.S.A.....This is one of the best books about the war that I have seen, and I am glad to be able to recommend it.

Post-War Palestine

Turkey's breaking off relations with Germany will have an effect on Palestine.

We hear from reliable sources that Turkey may be given a chance to wield considerable influence in affairs of the Middle East as a result of its break with Hitler.

In short, this could mean that the status of Palestine after the war may be determined by Britain, the United States, Russia and Turkey.—Canadian Jewish Chronicle.

TEMPORARY HOLD —By Goldberg

When Daddy Comes Home

By J. H. G.

IN all the planning for the post-war years that is being done the world over, planning that includes economic and political reconstruction, vast schemes for rehabilitation of the wounded and the demobilized, great plans for raising living and health standard; in all this nothing is being done about the greatest of post-war problems, the problem of intimate human relationships. Nothing is being done because nothing can be done, for it is a problem which only the individuals concerned can work out.

No one who thinks beyond the smiling faces of the returning service men and their happy, reunited families can be unaware of this problem. This war has literally torn years from the family lives of our young people—precious years, formative years, years which can never be regained and which will condition the many more years which are to come.

To thousands of young Canadians—and Americans and Russians and Britons too—Daddy is not somebody who comes home at night to supper; who fixes wagons, goes for walks, play ball, reads stories aloud and occasionally administers a spanking. Daddy is a picture on the wall, on the table or on mother's bureau. He is a nice looking man in a fine uniform and someday he will come home again and it will be such fun!

YES, he will come home again. There will be fun. That is for sure. But after the fun, after the happy reunion has been enjoyed to the limit, there will come the period of re-adjustment. There will be a man in the house again after so many years and the effect upon the household, though it consist of a single room or a mansion, will be profound. What is more, it will be a strange man in the house. The ordeal of war will have changed him considerably, perhaps deeply; just as the ordeal of trying to be a father and a mother to growing children will have wrought profound changes in the personality of the mother.

Family life cannot be picked up where it was dropped two, four or five years ago. The intrinsic nature of families, of life itself, makes that impossible. Instead a new life must be created; and for many it will be so very, very hard. There will be some heart-breaks, some disillusionment, but in the end there will be a new life for human nature is adaptable to new conditions and new surroundings.

For the returning service men, and of course for their families, it will be a new adventure. For many of the men one of life's greatest adventures—the early growth of a young family—will have passed them by. But there will be compensations, very great compensations.

FOR the younger service men the problem of re-adjustment will be infinitely more difficult than for the older men. Many will come back to young wives and babies. After two, three and four years of having everything done for them, of having others worry about their welfare, they will suddenly find themselves on their own. Then they will not only have to worry about themselves but about their families as well. The test of responsibility will be thrust upon them. Thousands of them, who went straight from school and college to the forces, will discover the new world of business and the task of making a living. What was once a life of great simplicity will become a life of vast complexity.

It is true that the governments may help in these re-adjustments. There will be cmomittees and organizations galore to help fit service men back into civilian life. But none of these organizations galore to help fit the service men back into civilian life. But none o fthese organizations can solve the problem of human relationship. This must be solved by the men and women and children themselves. They have got to work it out, almost hour by hour and day by day. The daddy who was once a picture on the wall must grow into the family in a sort of self-grafting operation. The organizations, the committees, the rehabilitation schemes will help only to provide the service men with an economic base from which to operate. But the ultimate happiness of all these human beings does not depend upon jobs or work. It depends in the final analysis whether a happy home life can be achieved. Without that, work tends to lose its meaning, to become merely drudgery or, at best, futility. With it work takes on new meaning and becomes a means to a greater end. The orators have been saying that these returning service men will be the builders of a great new Canada. If they succeed only in building happy family lives for themselves and their wives and children a great new Canada will follow automatically.

An Old Number Trick

(Christian Science Monitor)

APPARENT widespread credence is being given to current abracadabra which indicates that, due to some strange coincidence of arithmetic, the war will end this September 7th at 2 o'clock. Take the number 3,888, one-half of which is 1944—the present year. One-half of 1944 — 972 — breaks down to the ninth month, seven day, and second hour.

One is told to consider all the war leaders—Mr. Churchill, for instance. He was born in 1874, is 70, has been British leader for four years, taking office in 1940. Those figures, added together, total the "mystical" 3,888.

President Roosevelt was born in 1882, is 62, has been in office for 11 years, being elected in 1933. Add 'em up. Again, the total is 3,888. And so it goes precisely with the rest: Hitler, born in 1889, 55, in ofice 11 years, took office 1933; total 3,888. Stalin; born 1879, 65, in office 20 years, took office 1924; total 3,888. Even Tojo—though now out in Japan—was born in 1884, 60, in office 3 years, took office 1941, total, 3,888.

Why the strange repetition of 3,888? Well, try it on a friend. Ask him to jot down the year of birth; add age in years at time of birthday this year; list the numbers of years that have passed since the occurrence of some significant event in his life—the year he graduated from college, the year he began work, or the year he was married. Finally, he should add the number of years that have passed since that occurrence.

Without knowing any of the figures he has put down, you can tell him, strangely enough, that his total will be 3,888!

Try it on yourself. Naturally, the year of birth plus age this year will total 1944. Twice 1944—3,888! Break this down as you wish. One-half of 3,888 brings us back to 1944; one-half of 1944 gives you 972—9th month, 7th day, 2nd hour.

It's an old number trick—not to be taken more seriously than Hitler's astrologers.

These Bridges Had No Views

Throughout the Middle Ages, and even down to comparatively recent times, it was considered a wise economy of space to cover brdiges with houses; and that to such a degree that instead of a broad road over the bridge with open views on both sides of it, the people of those days had the advantage (as it must have seemed to them) of getting across the water through a narrow street without any views at all, but with plenty of delightful little shops....It may be supposed that our ancestors thought a bridge without houses bleak and uncomfortable, as the passenges over it would be unpleasantly exposed to the draught of wind that generally blows up or down a river. Their arrangement gave no view, but it gave a sheltered lounge, with plenty to see in the shop-windows. A curious consequence of it, which scarcely strikes us until we reflect a little, was that not only were the passages deprived of a view on the river, but even from the windows of the houses themselves very little was to be seen, as the next bridge always blocked the view, so that when the bridges were near together the houses on them and on the banks of the river made a sort of square with an enclosed area of water; and the river was little better than a succession of such squares. We may be severe on our own times for some errors of taste, but surely in our treatment of rivers we have reason on our side. The Middle Ages had nothing to show like the quays and bridges of modern Paris....Old Paris had a thousand picturesques.—From "Paris in Old and Present Times," by Philip Gilbert Hamerton.

MOTORWAYS PLANNED

Construction of a vast system of motorways costing $400,000,000 is planned for England after the war, London reports. The motorways would be a super-highways stretching over long distance and designed to meet all needs of modern motor traffic. The proposal has been placed on the Government's approved list, but experimental stretches will be constructed first to test the plans. The motorway project is only part of a program mapped by the automobile industry in Britain to prepare the industrial machine for post-war conditions. Employment features largely in that rounded project and early transition to provide work for thousands has been mapped. —Bellville Ontario Intelligencer.

SWISS DON'T WANT 'EM

Switzerland, traditionally a haven for the persecuted, rightly believes that the right of political asylum within its borders has limits. Swiss frontier guards have been ordered to bar "foreigners unworthy of asylum because of despicable acts or because their activities or attitudes violate Swiss interests."

As the Detroit Free Press observes: "That broad enough to net Hitler, Goering, et al, and also their quislings in occupied Europe."

Now if a few other countries we have in mind will follow suit in this Swiss movement the arch-criminals will have no place to go except Japan. And escape to the Mikado's homeland would provide only temporary refuge.—Kitchener Record.

A Bible Message

O Jerusalem, wash thine heart from wickedness, that thou mayest be saved. How long shall thy vain thoughts lodge within thee?.... Canadian Ship Iroquois In Sea Battle

LONDON, August 16 — (CP). — A British-Canadian naval force, led by the cruiser Mauritius, damaged seven German supply ships and other vessels and scored hits on a destroyer in three engagements yesterday off the naval base of La Rochelle, between Nantes and Bordeaux, the Admiralty announced last night.

The British force suffered neither casualties nor damage, the communique said.

The Canadian destroyer Iroquois and the British destroyer Ursa made up the force led by the Mauritius.

The Iroquois was commanded by Cmdr. J. C. Hibbard, who won the D.S.C. while serving in the Canadian destroyer Skeena in the early part of the war. Details of the Iroquois' individual part in the action were not immediately available.

The communique said the force, led by Capt. W. W. Davis, R.N., in the Mauritius, made first contact with the enemy during the night, engaging a small convoy escorted by one destroyer and minesweeper which was proceeding southward toard the entrance to La Pallice roads.

During the course of a running fight one supply vessel was driven ashore sinking and in flames, a second supply ship was set on fire, and hits were also seen on the enemy destroyer which escaped at speed in the darkness.

As the British ships pursued the fleeing Nazi vessels enemy shore batteries opened fire, but without effect.

Just before dawn a small tanker was engaged in the same area and was driven ashore in a badly damaged condition, the announcement said.

Shortly afterward the British ships caught up with another small convoy of two medium-sized supply vessels escorted by two minesweepers. Repeated hits were obtained on the enemy vessels, all of which were driven ashore and left blazing fiercely.

"H.M. ships sustained neither casualties nor damage," said the Admiralty.

Boy 9 Missing 28 Days Extend Search

TORONTO, Aug. 16 — Etobicoke police will be asked to search Silverthorne bush, and to check on a circus which played in the area about four weeks ago by Mrs. J. Marlowe, mother of 9½-year-old Richard (Pee Wee) Marlowe, who has been missing for 28 nights.

One of the most intensive searches ever conducted by township and Lakeshore police has failed to reveal the slightest trace of the youngster. Soldiers from Long Branch military camp, a Royal Canadian Mounted Police dog, and neighbors of the Marlowe family have drained wells, searched culverts and walked for miles through the high grass and weeds without any success whatever.

Mrs. Marlowe last night told The Globe and Mail that some one had suggested the youngster might have wandered to the Silverthorne bush, a favorite spot with many youngsters. "I haven't much hope of him having walked or ridden that far from home, because he is a shy lad, but I feel that I must try everything," she said.

Meanwhile, Etobicoke police are preparing circulars to be sent to police officials in all parts of the Province.

On July 18, Mrs. Marlowe and a neighbor friend started to go to a show. En route they passed Pee Wee and a friend, who were on their way home. When the women returned from the show, the youngster was missing.

Chief J. A. McConnell said last night that, despite questioning of several persons and a thorough tracing of the boy's movements on the night he disappeared, "we haven't got a single encouraging clue. If any one knows of the lad's whereabouts or of his movements, we would be very happy to hear from them."

Reds Jubilant At New Landing

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

When the citizens of Moscow learned of the Allied invasion of southern France the jubilant cry went up: "Victory this year."

That of course was an expression of vast satisfied rather than a prophecy, but few will be inclined to quarrel with those who entertain the thought. Indeed the government-controlled German radio last night remarked gloomily:

"The supreme hour has struck. It is the hour when we must throw into battle the last little ounce of strength."

Well, Boche concern certainly is warranted. The relatively bloodless invasion of southern France is "proceeding according to plan." The Maquis, the vast underground army, are surging into action throughout France—a terrible menace to Hitler.

The Allies continue to pommel the beaten Nazi 7th Army in Normandy and are taking bloody toll from those inside the trap (just how many still are surrounded remains to be seen, but this column will count its chicks when they're hatched). And over on the heaving Russian front the Red armies are about to deliver knockout blows at East Prussia and Warsaw, heart of the great Vistula Line which is the last powerful defensive position east of the Reich.

On the Skids

So the Hitlerites are on the skids but at the same time I like the cautionary note in General Eisenhower's summation yesterday when he remarked: "It is certain that German forces congregated on our front are taking a sound beating" but added: "We are still a long way from the Rhine...."

True the dictator lacks sufficient fighting strength to hold all the territory he's trying to defend. His troops are spread as thin as butter on a hot griddle. But his total forces would present a tough proposition if they were collected in his inner fortress.

Thus the Fuehrer's great problem now is to rescue his armies in both France and on the Russian front from impending disaster and pull them back. Apparently he still has the bull-headed idea of holding his present positions so long as possible before retreating. He must change those tactics quickly or the war will explode in his face.

Nazi Clutch On France Loosens Fast

By WES GALLAGHER

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, Aug. 16 (AP)—There was every indication last night that Hitler's four-year clutch on France was nearing an end.

With preliminary reports indicating only isolated resistance to the new Allied invasion of France from the Mediterranean and with the French underground aiding the squeeze play from the west and south, the Germans appear to be in a position from which they cannot defend the country.

The Allied effort has been helped considerably by the strategy of Hitler in ordering every unit to stand firm to the last.

The Allied Mediterranean blow was timed to coincide with the point when the German garrison along Southern France was at its lowest point in two years. Despite the fact that the invasion was the worst-kept secret of the war, Allied reports indicated that the Germans had little ability on opening day to deal with it.

Hitler had steadily drained the German Army in Southern France, under Field Marshal Gen. Johann Blaskowitz, in order to cope with the Allied invasion from the west, and at last reports there were less than five German divisions available in the Toulon-Marseille area, where the attack is taking place.

It was likely that the biggest German effort would not develop for several days during the gathering of forces for attack. It may never come, for the Allies have complete superiority in the air.

There was no chance that the German High Command would bring in new divisions from the west to help in the south. The western armies, under Field Marshal Gen. Gunther von Kluge, were fighting a losing battle for their lives.

In Central and Southern France the French underground was engaging German outposts, destroying communications and in fact cutting the Germans in France into several forces.

Plazas Even Up Final Series With Switchgear

The Plazas defeated Switchgear 9 to 6 at Riverside Park on Tuesday evening to even up the City League finals at one game each. The Plazas spotted the Switchgear five runs in the first three innings, and after that Stokoe, who was hurling for the winners, tightened down and with the exception of a little weakening in the seventh, kept the Switchgear boys pretty well off the runways.

Elliott started for the Switchgear, and for the first five innings kept the Plazas' hits well scattered, holding them to two runs. In the sixth an error at the second sack started the trouble, allowing Kingdon on, Blewett singled into right to score Kingdon and Elliott was replaced by Harrison. But the Plazas were hitting the ball, Tucker grounded to third, Hawkes singled to score Blewett, Ellis walked, Conroy singled, scoring Hawkes, and Stokoe proved the hero of the game when he polled a deep one into centre field for a home run to drive in both Ellis and Conroy ahead of him, for six runs in the innings.

Switchgear scored their first run in the first innings. Holmes the first man up singled, Padgett walked, Tompkins was out at first. Playford singled over third to fill the bases and Mowry sacrificed to score Holmes.

Switchgear got four in the third when Padgett doubled over third. Tompkins singled over second and Padgett scored, Mowry singled scoring Tompkins, Brockley walked and both Mowry and Brockley scored when Blewett dropped one in centre field.

Switchgear threatened again in the sixth when Holmes lifted one just over second, Padgett hit into short left but was out when Tompkins hit to second, Mowry walked to fill the bases and then Brockley was given a pass forcing in Holmes.

Stokoe tightened down for the last three innings with only ten batters facing him. but Tucker to Kingdon to Ellis on a double play cut off what looked like a rally in the eighth.

After Harrison had disposed of the rally of the Plazas in the fifth outside of a walk to Burton not a Plaza runner reached first.

The two teams meet again this evening in the third game of the series.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16 (AP)—Iced "T" formations—or why wait until New Year's Day?....The first football "bowl" game of 1944 was played in Panama Aug. 1; another is scheduled in China sometime in November with Col. Bob Neyland, former Tennessee tutor, and Lt.-Col. Fred Thomsen of Arkansas as opposing coaches....The Mango Bowl game in Panama was a tough-tackle game between eight-man teams in which the Pacific coast champions, the coast artillery "Meritadors," licked the Panama mobile force "Jungle Troopers" 26-6 as big John Greevey from Notre Dame connected with 19 of 39 long passes....So far only the coaches have been chosen for the "Rice Bowl" game in China.

Nomination Seconded:

Even before the season starts, Sgt. John Derr, sports editor of the "C.B. I. Roundup" nominates Thomsen, two of whose players have won the Congressional Medal of Honor, as coach of the year...."This guy is doing a great work for the G.I.'s and officers in China," Derr writes, "and he's responsible for keeping hundreds of good Americans from going mentally nuts and physically stale out at the end of the line."....As special service officer for the 14th Air Force Thomsen has organized numerous leagues in volleyball, favorite indoor sport during the rainy season, softball, basketball, the Chinese national sport. He runs track meets, tennis, boxing...."We try to play games that our Allies play," he explains, "so we'll have some local competition. And in basketball we can't let up against the Chinese at all."

Killer Katan Vanquishes Pierre De Glane

Pierre DeGlane, fiery Frenchman of a previous meeting with John Katan in Frank Tunney's wrestling shows, took a beating and took it in a well-mannered way in another match with the same opponent on Tuesday night at the Arena. Laid low by the Killer in a fall after 34 minutes of fighting, the game mat expert returned to take a great deal more of similar punishment, though occasionally meeting out a few excellent but unavailing recipe of his own. The hour show, main drawing feature of the night's entertainment, ended only when the time limit had been reached.

DeGlane's debacle in the first fall became inevitable a good many minutes before Katan actually succeeded in pining the obstinate Frenchman to the floor for a sufficient count. Ironically, it followed closely upon one of the very few occasions when the struggling fighter came near to upsetting his huge opponent. He had been swinging off the ropes in catapult fashion slamming the Killer back and forth, when the latter, enraged to the limit, gave him a helping hand on and over the ropes to the floor outside the ring. DeGlane came back in slightly dazed and was slammed to the floor once, twice, three times and more, each time falling more heavily and toppling over gracefully like a well-sawed tree going down in the forest. Finally, human endurance could take no more and he was counted out.

A Slow Start.

The bout got off to a slow start, with Pierre practicing great agility in avoiding and jumping out of inconvenient holds designed by Katan for a bid at a quick victory. The crowd was for Pierre almost from the start and emphatically so after Katan's first head lock included the referee in its octopus grip. The Frenchman took his punishment with very little complaining either to the official or to the audience; but Katan, the evening's badman, was reaching for the rope with his hand or foot whenever in a difficult position and gesticulating to the rafters at what he believed unfairness or meanness on his opponent's part, which in his estimation was often.

Only once did DeGlane exhibit his ire publicly in a purposely dramatic fashion, and this was halfway through the first fall, when, worn down by torture inflicted by Katan, he stood in the centre of the ring and bellowed threats to the audience's unrestrained delight. He then swung a powerful haymaker, which missed its mark by a wide margin, and fell into the Killer's willing arms, to be led ignominiously around the ring caught in a head lock with his nose being pulled. This illegal strategy was concealed from the referee for several minutes, and when broken up, DeGlane was incapable of further effort until the tears were wiped from his eyes. He then

Here and There in Sport

Mervyn (Red) Dutton, managing director of the National Hockey League since the death in February, 1943, of the late Frank Calder, was in Toronto yesterday for an N. H.L. Rules Committee meeting on Thursday, but he declined to say whether he will direct the league's affairs again this season.

"That wil have to wait until after Thursday's meeting," Dutton told The Canadian Press. Dutton tlso declined to discuss whether the Government had given the N.H.L. the "green light" for another wartime season of hockey. An announcement on that also may follow the Thursday meeting at which the N.H.L. moguls will discuss rules and other questions with officials of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association.

Announcing yesterday he had purchased Valdina Orphan, seven-year-old stallion, from the Almahurst Stud, Kentucky, for $100,000, William Helis of New Orleans has raised to nearly $750,000 the amount he has paid out for horses in 1943-1944.

Albert (Chalky) Wright of Los Angeles yesterday was nominated No. 1 challenger for the featherweight title by the New York State Athletic Commission. The crown is held by Willie Pep, Hartford, Conn. who defeated Wright for the honor November 20, 1942.

The $5,420 Village Farm Stake, feature of last night's grand circuit card at Saratoga Springs, N.Y., was won by Fred D. Greenly's High Command in straight heats. John Carman's High Axworthy accounted for the Hoosick Falls Pace for three-year-olds and up after finishing fourth in the first heat.

Greco Defeats Robinson In 4th Round

MONTREAL, Aug. 16— (CP).—Showing an impressive two-fisted attack, Johnny Greco of Montreal last night stopped Ernie (Nat) Robinson of New York, in 2.58 of the fourth round of a scheduled 10-round feature bout here. Greco weighed 144¼ to Robinson's 143.

Making his first appearance before a home town crowd since getting his medical discharge from the Canadian army, Greco looked an improved fighter over the lightweight who earned a decision over New York's Terry Young in his last major fistic attraction.

Robinson went down for short counts in the first three rounds as Greco caught him repeatedly on the ropes and went down before right and left-handed blows to the head in the fourth.

In the semi-final, Harry Jeffra of Baltimore stopped Dominico Diaz of Puerto Rico in the sixth round of what was to have been an eight round go. Jeffra, former lightweight champion, had too much steam for Diaz.

Harry Jeffra, 130½, Baltimore, beat Domingo Diat, 125, Puerto Rico, knockout 0:15 sixth round (8).

Bobby Gunther, 137¾, Detroit, beat Norman Sea, 134¾, Quebec, technical knockout 2:47 third round (6).

More than 4,000,000 GOODYEAR all-synthetic rubber tires are now making history on the road!

YES, in spite of many wartime difficulties, Goodyear has already built more than 4,000,000 all-synthetic rubber tires of all types—nearly half of them in the popular 6.00-16 passenger car size.

This is a record achievement, made possible by the Goodyear Research Laboratory's twenty years' work in developing synthetic rubber. It proves that synthetic rubber tire production is out of the woods and rolling into high.

More than that, it provides a real measure of the worth of tires manufactured from man-made rubber, as shown by such typical records as these:

A large metropolitan taxi company using 3,000 Goodyear synthetic rubber tires reports an average service of 30,000 miles per tire—before recapping.

On sixteen taxi fleets operating in as many cities, the average before recapping is 22,360 miles.

And scores of letters from war workers, police officials, doctors and other unrestricted drivers tell of equally high mileage with trouble-free performance. Similar satisfactory service is being enjoyed by users of Goodyear synthetic rubber tubes.

All this demonstrates that it is not the material but what is done with it that counts most in building tires. It is one more proof of the tire-building skill that makes more people ride on Goodyear tires than on any other kind.

Surely, if you judge by performance, your choice in synthetic rubber tires must be Goodyears—now, as for the past twenty-nine consecutive years, the world's first-choice tire.

Toronto Sweeps Two Games At Jersey City

By the Associated Press.

Newark Bears' International League express has chugged to within one half game of first place, putting themselves in a position to duplicate the feat of the 1914 Boston Braves in the National League.

The Braves in that year were last at the July 4 halfway post and came on to win the flag. The Bears were in the cellar a few short weeks ago.

Newark's latest success was a 7-4 victory over Rochester Red Wings last night. Johnny Maldovan was the star as he pitched all the way and minimized eight Wing hits. Joe Buzas chipped in with a home run in the third.

Montreal, by pasting Baltimore [illegible]-2 for the third time in four tries aided the Bear cause considerably. The Royals unleashed eight runs in the seventh to make it a runaway. Ralph Branca had no trouble notching his second win since being sent down by Brooklyn.

The Buffalo run-making machine swung into action again and hammered Syracuse into 9-2 submission as Walter Wilson hung up his 15th in Johnny Tyler accounted for both Chief runs with two homers.

Toronto swept two games from Jersey City, 8-0 and 2-1. Cliff Melton's comeback ambitions received a stiff jolt in the first game. Cliff was touched for 11 hits as Woody Crowson shut the Little Giants out with five. The second game saw Al Jarlett win his 16th as the Leafs came from behind to take a close decision

BOSS LISTENS TO PITCHERS AND LIKES IT — Whatever it is that the two leading St. Louis Browns pitchers are whispering in Manager Luke Sewell's ears, he likes it. The Browns are right in there making a bid for the pennant and if confidence will win it for them, it is theirs. Left to Right, above, are Bob Muncrief, Luke Sewell, manager, and Danny Galehouse.

TORONTO, August 16 — (CP).— It's been nothing but worry, worry for race followers on the West Coast this year, according to the Vancouver Sun's turf reporter. The owners have been having a whale of a time in the claiming game, with no less than 40 such transactions reeled off so far. The result is it's practicaly impossible to keep track of a horse from one day to the next.

While no fatal cases of heart seizure have been reported yet, some of the punters have come very close to keeling over after the horses leave the starting gate. With a heavy bet on some favorite nag, they take a gander at the field and it comes as a shock when they do not see the old familiar racing silks they have always followed with yearning eyes.

It generally takes until the end of the race to realize their mairzy doats was claimed yesterday and is travelling under new colors by the time you become familiar with those silks, somebody else claims the horse and you start all over again. It just makes things so interesting.

Exposed:

It seems that Doc Durnan's winning effort in the sculling event at Barriet the other day was only an exhibition, and the word has been sent out that nobody is to take the result too seriously. When the 69-year-old Doc bested 2 of Canada's leading scullers in the race, it occasioned no considerable comment, much to the embarrassment of the others concerned. The sponsors now want it understood the whole thing was just for fun, and those promoters who were thinking of offering Doc a contract can relax and look for other talent. However, it doesn't, alter the fact that Doc Durnan still is quite a marvel for his age.

Incidentally:

Since former footballer Lew Hayman, now Flight Lieutenant Hayman, introduced his physical training program in the R.C.A.F., the airmen apparently have improved greatly in fitness. When he started 46 per cent failed in the Harvard physical tests, while now a scant 4 per cent are flunked out....They have just about given up hope of staging that proposed East-West High School football game now that Toronto vetoed the plan. Interested parties in Winnipeg hope to get a bid from Montreal, but if not the whole thing will be called off.

Pittsburgh Wins 9th Straight; Yanks Still In

By JACK HAND
Associated Press Sport Writer

Luke Sewell and his St. Louis Browns past their two "crucial" eastern series to-day and headed for Philadelphia and Washington with a comfortable 6½ game lead still intact.

Baseball men had predicted the Brownies could come home with their first American League flag "in the bag" if they could manage a .500 pace on thier final visit to the Atlantic seaboard. The pace was in the consistent neighborhood of .600.

With the Athletics and Senators buried in seventh and eighth places the Browns have a chance to fatten their advantage. When Sig Jakucki was batted out against Boston for the second straight time yesterday, Sewell came up with capable relief work from Tex Shirley and George Caster.

Caster was given the decision when Vern Stephens hit a bases-loaded homer to spark a rally that netted a 6-5 win over Red Barrett.

Detroit called on Dizzy Trout and Hal Newhouser in relief of Stubby Overmire to nose out Philadelphia in 11 innings, 3-2. It was the 19th victory for Newhouser, tying him with Trout for most won.

New York stuck in the race by downing Chicago 3-1, when Bill Zuber surprised with a neat three-hitter. Clevelond snapped a five-game losing streak but had to go 12 innings to shade Washington, 1-0, on Ken Keltners' single scoring Oris Hockett.

Pittsburg rolled to its ninth straight, disposing of Boston 7-5, on a three-run spurt in the eighth that gave Zavier Rescigno the edge over another reliefer, Ira Hutchinson. Cincinnati kept pace with the Pirates in a second-place tie by whipping New York 6-3. for the Giants' eighth successive defeat. Tom Delacruz, making his last start before going home to Cuba to join the service, hung up his fourth win.

St. Louis drubbed Brooklyn for the fourth straight time 6-3. Chicago captured a 4-1 game from the Phillies that was cut to six innings by rain.

Nelson Leads McSpaden In U.S. Trials

SPOKANE, Wash., August 16 — (AP). — Byron Nelson, the Toledo, O., shotmaker, and his buddy, Harold McSpaden of Philadelphia, ran one-two yesterday in the 36-hole qualifying trials of the 1944 United States Professional Golfers' Association championship.

Nelson, the tournament favorite, was in the last threesome to finish and he took the Manito Course to pieces with a 69 to win medal honors with a two-round total of 138, six under par. His score yesterday was the same as on Monday—36 on the front nine and 33 on the backstretch. It gave him a two-stroke bulge over McSpaden, who had finished earlier with two 70's for a 140.

Last Place Playoff.

There was a playoff for last place among the 32 qualifiers for the match-play rounds starting Wednesday. The two who had to fight it out were friendly rivals from Salt Lake City, John Geertsen and George Schneiter. They had tied at 149. Schneiter beat his friend on the second extra hole to stay in the tournament.

Harry Cooper of Minneapolis three-putted himself out of the tournament on the 18th hole of his round yesterday. From about 35 feet Cooper batted the ball some six feet past the pin, then missed the putt coming back. Had he made the long one he would have been in the competition for the $20,000 prize money and there would have been no playoff.

Trailing Nelson and McSpaden was Sam Byrd, who brought in a neat 69 to couple to his opening round of 72 for a 141. He shared a third-spot tie with Joseph Zarhardt of Noristown, Pa., one of the surprise performers.

Wilie Goggin, White Plains, N.Y., was an easy qualifier at 70-72, just ahead of Craig Wood of Marmaroneck, N.Y., who holds the United States open title for the duration. Wood made a fine comeback after Monday's 74 to click with a 69 for his two-round 143.

The first-round leader, Fred Annon of Mamaroneck, N.Y., who topped the field on Monday with his 68, four strokes under par, found his putter failed him in the pinches yesterday. The result was a 40 on the outgoing nine and 37 coming home against par 36-36—72, but his 145 enabled him to qualify easily.

Hon. C. Cahan Dies At Age 82

MONTREAL, Aug. 16 — Hon. Charles Hazlitt Cahan, for 10 years Secretary of State for Canada in Governments headed by Rt. Hon. R. B. (now Viscount) Bennett, died suddenly Tuesday while at dinner at his home in the Chateau Apartments, Sherbrooke St. W. In poor health for some time, he would have been 83 on Oct. 31 next.

At one time or another, he was a newspaper reporter, editor of a newspaper, lawyer, dean of a law school, Leader of the Opposition in the Nova Scotia Legislature, promoter of companies and manager of concessions in Latin America, corporation and criminal lawyer in Montreal, Dominion Cabinet Minister and candidate for the leadership of the Conservative Party.

Surviving are his widow, the former Juliette Eliza Charlotte Hulin of Paris, France; a daughter, Mrs. K. Archibald, Montreal, and a son, C. H. Cahan, K.C. Another son, Capt. the Hon. John Flint Cahan, died in 1928 from the effect of war wounds.

Mr. Cahan was born at Yarmouth, N.S., in 1861 and was educated at Yarmouth Seminary, where he taught mathematics for a time before embarking on a newspaper career with the Halifax Herald and Mail. While working with the newspaper he studied law at Dalhousie Law School but when he graduated he was turned down by the Law Society because of an ancient rule that prohibited a law student from working at any other profession than law.

Politics as Sideline

Mr. Cahan continued his newspaper work, later becoming editor of the Herald and Mail, and took up politics as a sideline. He turned the tables on the Law Society when he was ejected to the Nova Scotia Legislature and introduced an act nullifying the ban on students earning money.

From 1890 to 1894, Mr. Cahan held his seat in the Legislature and in 1896 he ran as candidate for the House of Commons in Shelbourne-Queens, but was defeated. He first earned a seat in the Federal House in 1925, when he won an election contest in Montreal St. Lawrence-St. George, and in 1927 fought a hard campaign for leadership of the Conservative Party at the Winnipeg convention when Mr. Bennett won the role.

Mr. Cahan held the seat for St. Lawrence-St. George until the 1940 general election when he was defeated by Brooke Claxton, Parliamentary Assistant to Prime Minister King.

Record Figure

OTTAWA, Aug. 16 —(CP) — Canada's domestic merchandise export trade during the seven months ended July totalled $2,024,900,000, a record, Trade Minister MacKinnon announced last night. Vast stores of equipment going to fighting fronts were responsible for the record figure.

Landings On Kiska Happened Year Ago

AN ALEUTIAN ISLAND BASE, Aug. 16— (AP)— A year ago today United States and Canadian troops occupied the Aleutian Island of Kiska, and the anniversary finds American forces carrying a many-pronged drive toward Tokyo with repeated trip-hammer blows at Japan's inner defences and home island.

In evacuating Kiska, the Tokyo war lords, their dream of dictating peace in Washington blasted, acknowledged to the world that they were unable to hold what they had seized.

French Maquis Aid Invasion

By JOHN F. CHESTER
Associated Press War Correspondent

ROME, Aug. 16.—(AP).— The invasion of southern France was a carefully planned four-way operation with French Partisans supplementing the air-land teamwork that has been a part of all previous Allied landings.

French troops counted on their own countrymen for a major minesweeping operation in addition to the usual guerilla attacks in the rear of German forces.

More than two months ahead of to-day's D-Day, Fighting French agents reported through Algiers that they had comprehensive information on German sea and land mine fields in the proposed landing area.

The entire French corps, which performed brilliantly in the sweep up the Italian boot, was withdrawn from the Allied front in Italy weeks ago in preparation for this new invasion.

French Pilots Sweep Coast

WITH ALLIED AIRFORCES ATTACKING SOUTHERN FRANCE, Aug. 16.—(AP).—Flying Frenchmen of the famous Lafayette Escadrille and sister squadrons unleashed their Thunderbolts over their native land yesterday, supporting the Allied sea and airborne invasion which struck France's southern shore.

Each pilot of the fighter planes, which had tricolors painted on the tails, carried a leaf from a tree in France next to his heart as he flew.

The French major who commands a fighter-bomber group supplied the leaves. He was strafing a train over France not long ago and swept so low he hit a tree and came back with a bunch of leaves decorating his plane. He divided them among his fellow pilots.

Lieut. James Parsons In France Finds Grave Of Cousin E. Bell

In one of those pathetically new Canadian cemetries in France Lieutenant James E. Parsons, son of City Engineer and Mrs. Parsons, came across by chance the grave of his cousin, Lance Corporal Ernie Bell who was killed in action with the Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry Highlanders on July 6.

"It seemed a strange circumstance that Jim should have happened along there only four days later, and tha this eye should have fallen upon the cross at the head of that grave," Mr. Parsons said. "He recognized the name at once, and he immediately verified it by opening the little weather-proof packet that is placed on each cross, and reading the brief notation."

Just the figures indicate the sixth day of the seventh month of this year of 1944; such was the time; and then the name, Lance Corporal Ernie Bell with the Stormont, Dundas and Glengarries.

Lieut. Parsons wrote on July 20 relating his experience, and conveying the information which he fancied might not have reached the family at that time. However, the news had preceded his message.

The unusual aspect of this incident was the fact that Lieut. Parsons discovered his cousin's death in action from the regulation grave post of the Canadian Army in one of its new cemeteries in Normandy.

Sewage Disposal Plan Suggested

Successive councils have been talking for years about Peterboroug's sewage disposal plant, generally in the phrase of "something should be done about it." So have neighbors in Otonabee and North Monaghan. In fact they have been inclined to urge the Ontario Board of Health to do something about it, too. In the meantime the council has set this project near the top of its postwar program, a maybe program, and to get some preparatory action Alderman Bradburn proposed Moiday night that City Engineer Parsons be instructed to advertise through Selective Service for a temporary engineer to investigate the city's need, estimate costs and draw plans and generally make a complete preliminary survey of the project.

Alderman Bradburn remarked that the months were passing, the Germans were becoming more completely surrounded, and postwar projects were not making any headway through the stage of preparation. The sewage disposal problem was linked with the need of providing a new outlet for the Ashburnham sewer and also with the question of increasing the capacity of the trunk sewer on George street south.

"We have a great deal of work to do, and if we are going to make headway and get ready for after the war, I think we should get some extra engineering help," Alderman Bradburn said. "There is also the question of a sewer on Monaghan road, and the same engineer could take up the matter of airport sites."

Alderman Sullivan seconded the Bradburn motion, which was adopted.

Milkweed Crop Experiment Proves Failure At Peterborough

Peterborough farms were yielding this morning their crop of milkweed, grown for the first time under cultivation, and the final chapter of this wartime experiment ended on a woozy note of disappointment.

Two box cars on a C.P.R. siding were being loaded for transportation to Ottawa as trucks arrived from the countryside with milkweed plants mixed with a profusion of other weeds just as they had been cut from the contract fields that were sown in the spring of 1943 with seed gathered from nature.

The milkweed simply refused to grow at man's hand as it does in its natural course of propagation. The seed was received from Ottawa and planted with drill machines in the hope of obtaining a large supply of its leaves to be used in the manufacture of synthetic rubber. The Japs had seized the commercial sources of supply in the rubber tree plantatons in the Far East, and the western world, anticipating the exhaustion of their rubber stock piles, resorted to artificial means of meeting an emergency that was everywhere regarded as a serious threat to wartime transportation of all kinds, including wheels for airplanes and for trucks and other machines that are essential to the armies.

The area of Peterborough was selected for the experiment with the milkweed, and approximately 500 acres were sown. The result has been disillusioning, and in its returns today is substantially a failure.

Pte. Edward Cohen, with the Medical Corps here in Peterborough, was fined $50 and $2.50 costs on a charge of having liquor in a place other than his residence. A second charge of having liquor in his possession while not holding a liquor permit, was withdrawn by the prosecution. Pte. Cohen said he and other soldiers had just finished a route march, and he was getting some liquor for a party. The two bottles of whiskey, found in his possession, were confiscated.

Council Favors City Gift To Health Centre

Members of the city council, including Mayor Hamilton, stated this morning that a resolution would be submitted at the meeting next Monday night recommending that the municipality's contribution to the financing of the Peterborough Memorial and Community Centre would be an outright gift from the citizens.

From the outset of discussion of the need of such an arena and community centre, and in the planning that has been proceeding during the last few months, it has been generally understood that the city should provide a substantial sum to ensure the success of the project. his attitude has been expressed by members of the council who now desire to indicate their cooperation with the Memorial Centre committee as they approach the important stage of financing the undertaking which is broadly planned for extensive public uses not only during the winter seasons but also for the year round.

The Council declared on Monday night its willingness to recomment to the ratepayers the proposals of the Memorial and Community Centre Committee as a civic enterprise which has long been regarded as a local need to place Peterborough abreast of other cities throughout the province. Discussion of the financing of the project have advanced this week to the stage where Mayor Hamilton and members of the Council have expressed themselves as being in favor of a municipal contribution to the fund for the Community Centre with the Council and its citizens assuming the leadership in making this assistance without any conditions of repayment.

The proposal wil come before the Council next Monday night as an expression of the support for the success of the Centre which is being put forth as an investment in the Peterborough that is being conceived in the days of new enterprise and facilities to the people after the war.

Newspapers Lead In Reading Value

People are spending more money for newspapers than for books and magazines according to figures recently released by the Bureau of Advertising and the Publisher's Weekly. In 1943 people in United tates spent $660,937,000 to read daily and Sunday newspapers. This is $113,052,000 more than spent for all other reading matter (magazines and books) combined. It is more than twice the amount spent for magazines and two and one-half times the amount spent for books.

GREAT ALLIED INVASION STRIKES SOUTHERN FRANCE — Over a 100-mile stretch of beach between Nice and Marseille, an armada of more than 800 ships flying various Allied flags landed large forces of American, British and French troops as a third front on the European continent was opened. The over-all invasion force which came from the Mediterranean theatre of war, according to reports, was bigger than that which participated in the Normandy operation and it reached its target without detection or interference. (International)

Seeking Sites Near City Landing Strips

A further step in what it is hoped will one day result in the realization of that long-cherished dream, an airport for the city of Peterborough, was taken on Tuesday, when three representatives of the civil aviation branch of the Department of Transport toured the district with an eye to possible sites for landing-strips. They came at the request of Alderman Herb. Bradburn, who recently travelled to Ottawa to engage the assistance of Commander Edwards, deputy minister of the department, in this project which lies close to the hearts of city officials and the many persons aware of the distinct advantages Peterborough would quickly acquire when once it began to be served by adequate air facilities.

The men travelled around the countryside equipped with carefully drawn topographical maps designed to show in minute detail the lay of the land in the neighboring area; and where closer investigation seemed warranted, surveyed on foot likely spots. Particular interest was shown by them in a location on Highway 28 out past the Kawartha Golf and Country Club.

This was in the immediate vicinity of Water Trough Hill, and the Department of Transport representatives are expected to make a report on their findings here to the civil aviation branch. City Engineer Parsons, who accompanied the officials, stated that the men showed decided interest in the location, thought it had possibilities, but at the same time admitted the project would involve considerable expense as the building of runways would necessitate breaking up and building on another strip of land a short stretch of the highway.

Harold Dalliday Battle Casualty

A former employee of the C.G.E. Wire and Cable department, Gnr. Harold V. Dalliday, son of J. W. Dalliday, 246 Prince street, and the late Mrs. Dalliday, has been officially reported wounded in action in France, information reaching his father revealed today. He is now in a hospital overseas. The nature of his wounds was not disclosed.

The 21-year-old soldier enlisted in the R.C.A. in February 1941, and went overseas in November of the following year. He was educated at Peterborough Collegiate, and has a sister in the Royal Canadian Air Force, Women's Division, LAW Mary Dalliday, she is stationed at Trenton.

A short time before enlisting, Pte. Dalliday was employed as a painter at the DeLaval Company.

Herman Viner Bailed For Trial

Herman Viner, 43, Leahy's Lane, was charged with reckless driving in connection with the death of Mrs. George Pymer, August 5, and bailed for trial at the General Sessions court under bail of $3,000, in police court this morning, before Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C. Mrs. Pymer was killed after a collision with a truck allegedly driven by the accused, just after she had alighted from a southbound George street bus, and was crossing the street.

Ivan Cunningham, a driver of the bus from which Mrs. Pymer alighted, testified that it was around 10.30 in the evening when Mrs. Pymer got out of his bus. He said she had gone past her stop, and when she pulled the cord in the bus, he pulled the bus to a stop at the next stop, where Mrs. Pymer got out. This was south of the main C.P.R. tracks, Mr. Cunningham said. Cross-examined by Mr. Viner's counsel, T. J. Carley, K.C. the bus driver said he thought Mrs. Pymer was wearing a gray dress with dark markings.

Miss Mabel Stoneberg, High street, said she was with two other women walking north of the tracks, south on the west side of George, and testified she saw Mrs. Pymer "going under the truck," although Miss Stoneberg could not give in detail the part of the truck she saw Mrs. Pymer go under. She said she thought Mrs. Pymer was wearing a pink dress with white flowers on it.

Brakes Poor

Frank Dracup, who works at the J. J. Duffus Company, said he and a police officer tested the brakes on Viner's truck after the accident. He said he found the brakes "were poor," and in testing the truck, found it was brought to a complete stop in 60 feet, after travelling 20 miles an hour.

Cross-examination by Mr. Carley disclosed the witness was not aware the legal footage for a truck travelling at that speed is 40 feet, after the witness had said the truck, in his opinion, should have been brought to a halt in 13 feet. Mr. Dracup also said the emergency brakes on the truck had no effect at all.

Constable E. Beatty, who arrested Viner after the accident, testified he had asked Viner if he was the driver of the truck, and he had answered in the affirmative. Constable Beatty also gave official measurements as to the approximate position of the body, in relation to the tracks, both the main C.P.R. tracks and siding that goes into the Canada Packers Company.

Provincial Constable Lloyd McClure who examined the truck driven by Viner the day following the accident at about 6 to 7.30 in the evening, said he found a dent in the radiator grill, and damage to the windshield. that might impair vision. Cross-examined by Mr. Carley, he said he thought the dent in the radiator had been made recently.

Dr. Herbert N. Young, who was called to Nicholls Hospital, said Mrs. Pymer was dead upon his arrival. He testified she had met death by a fracture of the neck, and damage to the spinal cord. Dr. Young stated in his opinion, the wheels of a truck had not passed over Mrs. Pymer's body.

Water Pumped Sets Record For City Use

An all-time record in gallonage of water pumped for the city was set Tuesday, when 6,088,000 gallons were used in Peterborough, exceeding by approximately 88,000 gallons the previous high established on June 27, 1941. Records of water-supply have been kept for close on 60 years, or ever since the building of the waterworks.

A peak rate which is also a fantastic figure viewed in the light of average water consumption was recorded Tuesday as well, when, between 7.30 p.m. and 8 o'clock, the hot weather need for good old H2O resulted in pumpage at the rate of 10.25 million gallons, which means the amount of water that would have been made available to citizens if the expanded rate of demand during that particular half hour had been maintained throughout the day.

Pumpage on Monday, to go back a little further, was no slouch either, and emphasizes, as many other things have doubtless already done, that the first two days of this week were veritable scorchers. Then total gallonage rose to 5,638,000 and the pumpage peak rate, reached at 7.30 p.m., came to 9.5 million gallons.

Fire Damages Priest's Car

Fire of unknown origin swept through the garage shed on the property of Sacred Heart church, Aylmer and Romaine streets, at 11 o'clock this morning, destroying a Dodge Coupe automobile belonging to Father J. J. O'Brien, pastor of the church, and threatened for a few minutes of its brief but flaming existence the adjacent parish club rooms and assembly hall. The roof of the shed was badly burned, and where water had been poured on that part covering the club rooms the hall itself was drenched, but firemen averted a threat of greater damage. A second automobile parked in an open shed 100 yards from the start of the fire, was not harmed.

Father O'Brien's car was almost a total loss, burned and gutted from end to end, inside and out, an it was doubtful even if any of the tires could be salvaged.

Personal Gift Gives Aid To Honor Friend

No memorial, no matter how elaborate or extensive it may be from worldly values, can be said to be greater than the amount of good it may do, for its sphere of influence passes almost into the spiritual realm, which unlike mortal things that decay, stands for ever to the great day of judgment on the credit side of the ledger.

Friendship for one outside of one's own immediate family circle, that can continue on when one has passed beyond the ken of earthly things, and give inspiration to deeds of good for others of the human family in distress, declares in the finest possible manner how close a bond existed between two such persons while both were able to enjoy the association of each other.

Then too, one is not apt to be inspired to deeds of real worth to honor the name of a departed friend, only if such a one has merited such recognition by a life well spent while walking the paths of this earth, and so it is that today, a fine memorial to honor the sterling worth of the late W. R. Breyfogle as a man, a leader, and a friend is registered in giving aid to the victims of robot bomb attacks on Britain, through the local and district fund operating for that purpose.

A Day of Personal Gifts

No finer lead to a day of purely personal gifts on behalf of the fund can be visualized, than that listed today as coming "From a Friend, to honor the memory of the late W. R. Breyfogle" and it is accompanied by four other personal gifts also of sterling worth, for they all represent repeats by people who have continued to show an interest in the welfare of a people stricken through no fault of their own, in this same identical manner.

This marks the 8th list of purely personal gifts to appear since the end of June, when a special appeal was made for such to hel the increased need occasioned by recent robot bomb attacks, and in these lists the name of Herb Doig has now appeared five times, while the donor who gives under the name of "E.M.F." has appeared in two of these lists. Today the fund starts on the last thousand toward the $80,000.00 mark.

Gladiolus to be Sold

At the close of the 2nd Annual Show of the Eastern Ontario Gladiolus Association and the Peterborough Aquarium Society in the Market Hall on Thursday night, the gladiolus that have been on exhibit will all be sold to further enrich the proceeds, all of which also will come to the fund.

This will follow the draw for the five prizes of that evening to be made by His Worship Mayor Hamilton, and those desiring to procure what is expected will be some of the choicest blooms obtainable, should see to it that they are on hand at that time.

The draw for the five prizes on Wednesday night of the Show will be made by Alderman Floyd Curtis, who has taken such an interest in the beautification of the parks of the city and shown such a general interest in horticulture in general.

Pte. L. Barnsley Killed In France

The youthful soldier joined the Army in January, 1943, enlisting with the Toronto Irish Regiment and later transferring to the Haldimand and Dufferin Rifles. He arrived overseas in February of this year and some time before the invasion became a member of the Highlander unit. Letters to his two sisters in Peterborough written from the Normandy beachhead arrived in the city between last Friday and the first of this week.

Pte. Barnsley was educated in South Ward and Central Schools, Lindsay, and also attended the Lindsay Collegiate. He was a member of St. Paul's Anglican Church, Lindsay, and before entering service worked for a short time with the Purity Bread Co. and at the Lindsay Arsenal.

He leaves four sisters besides his mother, Mr. Muriel Krogh, 144 Albertus street; Irene Barnsley, 587 Aylmer; Grace Barnsley, at home in Lindsay; and Mrs. Melville McDonald of Oakwood.

WOUNDED IN ACTION with the Provost Corps is Cpl. Bertram Howden, 24, the only son of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Howden, 301 Romaine street. A former employee of Canadian Raybestos, the soldier has been in the Army for four years.

Tie Shoes Lead In Fall Foot Fashion.

It looks as though the "ties" have it on the early fall shoe fashion parade, as the natty tie shoe emerges as the dark horse that comes in first. In the fall stocks, shoe stores are now beginning to receive, a sprinkling of this style forecasts of a new trend. It's a logical choice too, since it gives sufficient support for working hours, and yet is also smart enough for evening or "special" times.

Materials, of course, will remain about the same, because of government regulations, and suedes, gabardines and leather will be practically all the selection the stores will be able to display. Styles are pretty well limited to certain lines also, and it is expected that the pump, which was so much in demand last year, will again top the list. Remember those smart black pumps with the open heels? Well, they're back again in full force. So, if milady has a pair that didn't see much service last fall and winter, she had better get them out and brush them up, and be right in the parade.

When the regulations on shoe manufacture were introduced, it was feared that the few styles permitted would cause a regimentation of shoes. However, ingenious designers got around the difficulty by bringing out the various ornaments, clips and rosettes which now adorn most shoes, so that the wearer could, at will, change the whole appearance of her shoe by merely clipping on a new ornament. These little doo-dads also brought an unlimited field of possibilities into play, since they are available in several colors and shapes, and can be switched to match accessories of any costume.

In answer to the popular demand, shoes for early fall wear will have high or high Cuban heels. Most popular shade, if ladies' wear shops continue to show all-black ensembles, will certainly be black, but there is also a considerable supply of brown coming in. Blue will be very scarce. However, there's nothing quite as smart as a snappy pair of black shoes, and they effectively set off practically any color. They will be particularly effective with the bright new wool shades predicted for winter.

Victory Recipes Planned For Canadians' Health

By LAURA C. PEPPER
Chief, Consumer Section,
Dominion Dept. of Agriculture

There's keen rivalry among wartime gardeners just now; which of the neighbours had the first ripe tomato, whose are the biggest, who has the most on a single plant! And of course never were tomatoes so fine in flavor as those grown by every proud wartime gardener in the land.

There's a good reason for the fine flavor of home grown tomatoes; its because the tomatoes are left to ripen fully on the vine and eaten shortly after picking.

From breakfast to supper, tomatoes can appear in a variety of ways. A lot of people nowadays are starting the day with a dish of sliced tomatoes instead of an orange. Today's tomato recipes from the Consumer Section of the Dominion Department of Agriculture include a variation of the ever popular tomato juice cocktail in the form of Tomato Freeze.

Tomato Pepper Sandwiches

Chop and mix together in equal amounts peeled tomatoes and green peppers. Let stand one half hour, drain well, season with salt and spread between slices of buttered bread. Save the liquor and use in vegetable juice cocktail or to thin salad dressing.

Tomato Freeze

5 tomatoes
¼ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon sugar
2 teaspoons vinegar
½ teaspoon onion juice

Peel and chop tomatoes. Press through a fine sieve to remove all seeds. Add salt, sugar, vinegar and onion juice. Freeze to soft mush. Six servings.

Escalloped Tomatoes

8 large tomatoes
1 teaspoon salt
Pepper
2 teaspoons sugar
1 small onion, finely chopped
2 cups bread crumbs
2 tablespoons fat

Peel tomatoes, cut in thick slices. Arrange half the tomatoes in a greased casserole. Sprinkle with half the salt, pepper, sugar and chopped onion. Cover with 1 cup bread crumbs. Repeat, having bread crumbs on top. Dot with fat. Bake 25 minutes, in a moderately slow oven, 325 deg. Fahr. Six servings.

Jellied Cheese Tomato Salad

2 tablespoons gelatine
½ cup cold water
7-8 medium tomatoes (about 2 lbs).
Salt to taste
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1½ cups grated cheese
Salad dressing or milk to moisten cheese.

Soak gelatine in cold water. Chop tomatoes and rub through a sieve to make 2½ cups of juice. Add salt and Worcestershire sauce. Heat to boiling point, add soaked gelatine and stir until gelatine is dissolved. Add lemon juice. Pour half the mixture into an oiled mould and chill until firm. Whip cheese with enough boiled dressing, mayonnaise or milk to make light and fluffy. Season to taste and spread over the set jelly to within ¼ inch of the sides of the mould. Pour remaining half of the jelly mixture over the cheese and chill until firm. Unmould and serve on lettuce. Six to eight servings.

Stuffed Tomatoes

6 large, firm tomatoes
1 cup diced bologna
1 cup cooked corn (cut from the cob)
½ teaspoon salt
Dash of Pepper
3 tablespoons bread or cracker crumbs
1 tablespoon butter

Cut a slice from the top of each tomato and scoop out the pulp. Combine pulp with bologna, corn and seasonings. Fill tomato cups with the mixture. Sprinkle with crumbs and dot with butter. Bake in a moderate over, 350 deg. Fahr., until thoroughly heated, about 15 minutes.

DOROTHY DIX . . . . .

LET SERVICE MAN ALONE

Give Him Time To Be With His Family When He Comes Home On Furlough

DEAR MISS DIX: Can you not say something in your column that will make kind and well-meaning friends and relatives show some mercy to the boys who come home on furloughs? As it is, the minute a lad gets off of the train they practically kidnap him. They drag him about from place to place and party to party without reference to his own desires or consideration for his family. They never leave him alone for a minute or give him any rest so the whole purpose of his furlough is frustrated.

As soon as our boy comes home our relatives, and even the boys he went to school with descend on him in droves. If he stays home an evening, they jam the house so that we never get private word with him. They insist on taking him out and making the rounds of taverns and nightclubs. He hates drink and loathes the whole proceeding. When he tries to get out of going to places they won't take "no" for an answer.

Of course, they do this as a compliment and it makes it impossible for us to defend him or ourselves against them. But why can't they realize that he wants to be at home with his own people and that we want to see him after he has been gone so many months?

HIS MOTHER

Friends Mean Well

ANSWER: It was a wise man who prayed to God to protect him from his friends because he could defend himself against his enemies. And in truth we are helpless before the good kind people whose motives we appreciate and whose feelings we do not wish to hurt when they force their unwelcome attentions upon us.

And that is what happens to the poor, exhausted, bored service men when they come home on furloughs they have looked forward to so long. They are never left alone a minute. They are dragged from place to place. They are stuffed until they feel the never want to see another plate of food again. People buy them drinks that they don't want. The survivors of every war since the Civil War come and reminisce about how they fought at Shiloh or Gettysburg. Mama has promised that they shall speak before her Missionary Society and Dad shows them off before the Rotary Club And when the furlough is up, the poor heroes feel as if they had fought Guadalcanal all over again.

And there is nothing they can do about it. One can only beg the friends and neighbours to have a heart and leave the lads alone with their own people whom they haven't seen for so long and whom they may never see again.

DEAR MISS DIX: I have a husband who is devoted, loving and generous but who forgets special dates like anniversaries, birthdays etc. I try not to let it hurt my feelings too much but when he doesn't remember me on such occasions it leaves me irritable and unhappy.

Except for this our marriage is perfect and if I could find some remedy for his unintentional thoughtlessness I would be completely happy.

FORGOTTEN WIFE

ANSWER: The princess in the fairy tale who searched and searched until she found a crumpled rose leaf under her forty mattresses of ease has nothing on you as a trouble borrower when you let your husband's forgetting to send you an anniversary present ruin a perfectly good marriage. You would get a just punishment if your folly made him forget you for some woman who appreciated him.

Unfortunately other men have wives who have the same phobia that you have. The way they get around is to have their secretaries write down the sacrosanct anniversaries and send an appropriate gift for the occasion.

DEAR MISS DIX: What privilege should a girl of 20, who holds a responsible position in the business world and who pays board have when she lives at home?

M.M.

ANSWER: Those of a star boarder I should say. A girl of 20 is legally of age and if she is self-supporting, she is on her own independence as long as she keeps within the bounds of good taste and decent behavior. But as long as a girl stays at home, her family always regard her as a child and treat her as if she were one, no matter how old she is.

Having right to privileges is one thing. Getting them is something else again in the home circle.

THE STARS SAY . . . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

A DAY OF dramatic if not astonishing events is forecast from the predominant lunar and solar aspects. These are likely to affect the life and its destiny with radical or uprooting force or breathtaking experiences. In the effort to grasp quickly and accept the benefits without delay there is room for making serious and regrettable mistakes, unless much logic, commonsense and emotional poise be maintained. Peculiar situations or contacts with queer persons may tax the sound judgment and wise conduct. Adhere to codes and all may be surprisingly happy.

Those whose birthday it is are on the verge of uprooting, surprising and dramatic adventure, in which swift and dynamic moves may be turned to either adverse or benefic denoucments, according to th epoise, good sense and wise decisions governing the behavior. Emotional reactions or erratic propensities may be overwhelming especially in connection with strange circumstances or people. Adherence to the conventions and public codes ,and preserving poise, should bring astonishing results, although with radical change, of ideas or environs. Love affairs might complicate or dominate conditions.

A child born on this day may have much originality, ingenuity, and force of character, but may be inclined to be swayed by forceful emotions or impulses. With restraint it may have a conspicuous career and much romantic happiness.

Citizenship Topic At W.M.S. Meeting

In spite of the steady heat Tuesday afternoon there was a good attendance at the regular meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of St. Andrew's United church, at the home of Mrs. F. W. K. Harris, Rogers street. Guest speaker was Mrs W. H. Morton, president of the Local Council of Women, who chose "Citizenship" as her topic, working into the discussion the efforts and accomplishments of the L.C.W. Reich Invasion Likely In Few Days

LONDON Aug. 16 — (AP) — Red Army troops have cross the Biebrza River in Northern Poland on the last 15-mile route to German East Prussia, covered by swarms of Russian armored fighter bombers which sprayed German positions at Grajewo, only two miles from the frontier. Moscow dispatches said last night.

The Soviet High Command bulletin remained silent on this sector where Associated Press Moscow Correspondent Daniel De Luce said an invasion of Germany was likely in the next 72 hours.

One hundred miles to the south- another Red army, the 1st White Russian, under Marshal Konstantin K. Rokossovsky, beat down German counter-attacks east of Praga, industrial suburb of Warsaw. The Russians last were reported within 11 miles of the Polish capital.

Soviet troops fighting west of the Vistula River, 100 miles south of Poland, captured several localities during the day in their steady battle against reinforced German lines.

In Estonia Russian troops in a three-mile advance west of Antsla, seized the rail station of Anne, only 14 miles from the key junction of Valga and within 11 miles of the Tallin-Riga railway which runs through Valga. The Russians captured 80 localities in their drive toward the Baltic Sea.

In the area of Raseinial, Lithuanian town 53 miles northeast of Tilsit, German East Prussian rail city, the Russians repulsed strong enemy infantry and tank attacks and inflicted heavy losses in men and material, the Soviet bulletin said.

FOR THE ROAD TO TOKYO—Despite the vast and insistent wartime demands made on Canada for gasoline and oil, not one aircraft has ever been grounded, a ship held in port, a farm tractor stopped, or a machine tool kept idle because of their lack. Among the many petroleum needs filled by Canada since the war began were those of the United States Army in building the Alaska Highway for the defence of this continent. Big gasoline dumps (Top) were established at strategic points while (Bottom) an oil barge nears docks at Norman Wells refinery to take on cargo of fuel for trucks and other road-building equipment.

"Some of the best fields of fall wheat in Durham are yielding 40 bushels to the acre," according to the weekly review of the Ontario Department of Agriculture. "One farmer reports a large field of Ajax oats producing around 70 bushels to the acre."

Excellent quality and heavy yields of fall wheat have been reported from all parts of Ontario county. Early potatoes are being harvested with heavier yields than last year. Prices at the farm have been $1.25 to $1.35 the 75-pound bag.

The long period of hot dry weather enabled farmers across the province to get a long way through their harvest work, but another general experience has been the parching of pastures and a sharp decrease in the volume of milk. Prince Edward canneries are busy on the tomato pack.

The theme of the county reports this week is just the routine "grain harvest is well under way, rain is badly needed."

Farmers Get Help

In Peel, 1,141 men from Toronto have helped farmers in afternoons and evenings. Some remained up to two weeks, their vacation period.

"Fall wheat growers in Simcoe-South have 5,000 bushels of seed wheat to offer. Farmers are getting excellent assistance from the Air Force and Army at Camp Borden at week-ends and of evenings."

Bean and tobacco crops have been crimped by the heat in Kent. The wheat yield in Lincoln has been as high as 50-55 bushels to the acre. Some fields of Ajax oats have gone as high as 75-60 bushels to the acre.

Many farmers in Western Ontario are all through harvesting and threshing. In Wentworth "a great number of the English Air Force boys from Mount Hope are assisting with the harvest in this area."

Bombs Pulverize Coast Batteries

ROME, Aug. 15—(AP).—American heavy bombers yesterday dropped more than 1,400 tons of bombs in over 50 separate attacks upon enemy coastal batteries in Southern France and in the Genoa region, Allied headquarters disclosed today.

It was the fourth straight day of attacks upon enemy positions along the French coast.

Medium mombers also concentrated on the French coast yesterday, headquarters said, flying more than 1,000 sorties against objectives there while fighters strafed radio stations in Toulon, Nice and the Cannes areas.

French Patriots Disrupt Communications

LONDON, Aug. 16 — (AP) — Complete disorganization of Germany's communications throughout France was claimed by authorative French sources today as patriot forces struck with new intensity to assist the Allied invasion in the south and the sledge-hammer blows in the west.

The independent French news agency reportead from Bern that 10,000 French patriots were "advancing toward Vichy" and that hundreds more were joining them as they pushed ahead.

The agency said six other detachments of French forces of the interior were moving on Bordeaux

The despatch did not say where the patriots were coming from or how they were armed.

A communique issued through the French press service reported that French forces of the interior killed 800 Germans, wounded 300 and took 100 prisoners during the last 24 hours while seizing the towns of Breton, Serifnac, Lannion and Lee Clarte, in Brittany.

Sabotage In Factories

The report said the delivery of equipment from factories working on German production had been halted by sabotage. It listed the Eaglebert works near Compiegne and the liquid air factory at Rheims as among the "mang" whose output has been stopped.

The French were officially silent on F.F.I., activity in the area of the southern invasion, but a spokesman said the Maquis had undoubtedly joined up with the Allies in large numbers at the beachhead while ripping up roads, demolishing bridges and clearing minefields in the rear.

General Wilson, Allied commander in the Meditertanean, issued instructions to civilians in the south, warning them not to block roads not to try to cross combat lines, to report on German movements and to maintain discipline.

Meanwhile, French radio reports reflected higher tension in both Paris and Vichy.

One Paris broadcast, heard by Associated Press monitors, said the battle might reach Paris "any moment," and revealed: "We are threatened with famine. Sabotage under the pretense of patriotism is increasing our plight."

Another broadcast appealed to the people to "remain calm", and quoted the city's German commander as saying: "The population ought to know that the Germany authorities will do all in their power to guarantee the people's food supply.

Heavily armed guards in the streets and hotels of Vichy were keeping watch over the restless knots of people discussing the situation and their plight, according to a message reaching the French frontier.

In an interview in London, Madame Emilienne Moreau, delegate to the French Liberation Committee's Consultative Assembly, maintained 90 per cent. of the French people were against Vichy.

She said any compromise between the Allied governments and even moderate elements of the Vichy regime would bring "extremely strong French reaction and probably lead to revolution."

She said the French would demand execution for Pierre Laval, Marshal Petain and "all those who collaborated with the Germans."

Engineers Grow To Love Old Battlewagon

By DOUG HOW
Canadian Press War Correspondent

WITH THE CANADIAN CORPS IN ITALY, Aug. 16.—(CP). — They kept bringing the "Confident" in, crippled or wounded or bruised, until she got to be a legend around the Royal Electrical and Mechanical Engineers' workshop of a Canadian armored brigade.

They restored her to health first in Sicily, then around Potenza, then Motta. She tanked herself forward in the Moro Valley battle until she pitched over a slope at "Mortar Bend" and ended up at such an angle per picture got big play in the papers back home.

The "Confident," a scarred and nicked battlewagon by this time, hit the workshops three times in 10 days at the peak of her career, and each time the workshop crews would bring her in and fix her and cuss her and send her back out again.

Last Trip

They saw the "Confident" for the last time around Aquine airport, plugged with six German shell holes, completely a casualty for the first and last time. The engineers took one final look at her and went away muttering at the strange bond of affection that can grow up between men and a hunk of fighting steel.

The "Confident" became a personality around the workshops, the biggest personality of them all. But there were others because at one time or another many of the Shermans and Honeys and Recce cars have come limping out of the line to have a track replaced or a turret repaired or a 75 put back in shooting shape.

Pagoda Changes Hue Under Air Pounding

LONDON, Aug. 16 —(CP) — Before the Japanese ravaged Burma a tiny pagoda at Mogaung was a mecca for pilgrims.

Disregarding its religious signififance, the Japanese turned the shrine into a snipers' sanctuary and direct air support was summoned to remove the strongpoint from the path of our advancing army. The Mustangs dropped 500 pound bombs plump on the target.

"It was an amusing sight, one of the pilots said later. "One moment we could see this beautifully white pagoda then came a cloud of smoke, a flash and a terrific crash. The smoke cleared and there stood a bright brick-red temple.

"The bombs had shattered the outer white crust, leaving the inner shell still giving the familiar pagoda silhouette but with a complete change of color."

The story was told by air sources in London.

Brintons Take First Play-off Tilt

The Girls' League intermediate playoffs got under way on Tuesday evening at Ashburnham Bowl as Brinton Carpet, chasing in 15 runs, eight of which came in the second frame on a series of errors. took the verdict from Outboard Marines, who managed to score only seven times in nine fast innings of ball. This game is the first of a four-out-of-seven series, and Brintons are one up on their opponents.

Doris Walker pitched for Brinton, striking out none, and walking none, but allowing 17 hits. Helen Mark held the mound for Marines, fanning two and walking one. The Brinton girls struck 25 blows during the game, including two doubles by Doris Walker and Helen English. Eileen Young of the Marines was that team's hitting star for the evening, lashing out a home run in the second inning. Helen Mark batted a long double during the first frame, and Viola Martin struck a triple into left in the eighth. Teddy Mills also hit a double in the first inning with the ball sailing into left field.

Many Errors

A series of sloppy errors and wild passes enabled Brinton to score eight times during the second frame, and although the battling Marines, helped considerably by Eileen Young's work in left field and Edna Smith's talents in centre, tried desperately to even the count, they never quite made it, and when Brinton pounded out six more runs in the seventh, the game for the Marines was as good as gone.

During nine innings of play Brintons had 11 players left on bases. Marines had nine.

Marines are promising the Brintons a thorough defeat when they meet again next week. In order to ensure the intermediate title, the Marines will have to take four games. But the team that played all through last year without a win has improved tremendously. Before going on its vacation a few weeks ago, it was a threat even to Westclox and Aircraft, and in the games with both those teams narrowly missed taking the verdict.

On the other hand, the Brinton girls have had their first victory of the playoffs, and are looking for more when the two rival intermediate groups meet the next time.

The teams:

Brinton — Thelma Batley 3b, Betty Hamlin rf, Marjorie Walling lf, Helen English cf, Doris Walker p, Jean Vass c, Gladys Lawson ss, Margaret Thompson 2b, Elsie MacKenzie 1b, Norma Blackwell cf, Alva Laing ss.

Outboard Marines—Eileen Young lf, Ollie Smith 2b, Vera Mitchell 1b, Helen Mark p, Marjorie Smith 3b, Teddy Mills c, Viola Martin rf, Bertha Philips ss, Edna Smith cf, Betty Smith lf.

Umpires — Payne at plate, Barrett on bases.

Score by innings:		R.	H.	E.
Brinton	080 001 600—	15	25	5
Marines	311 000 011—	7	17	9

French Troops Get Welcome

By WILLIAM STEWART
Canadian Press War Correspondent

WITH ALLIED FORCES IN FRANCE, August 16 — (CP Cable). —Appearance of French forces returning to battle on their own soil was for civilians in Normandy and Brittany the greatest occasion since the Allied landings.

Travelling through the American sector recently, I saw the first French armored columns rolling through dust clouds in the Cherbourg Peninsula—an unforgettable scene.

The Americans had heard rumors about French troops joining them and civilians asked repeatedly why forces of their own were not called in.

French youngsters who were among the Maquis, stolid middle-aged Frenchmen and even older ones who hated the Germans, asked when they too would be mobilized. The appearance of French armored columns here satisfied some of their anxiety about the hour when Frenchmen would be given the opportunity of wearing uniforms in France again and taking up arms against the Boche.

The French columns could easily have been mistaken for fresh American forces arriving in France. Their equipment, except for a few civilian automobiles in army paint, was entirely American. But there was a French Tricolor flying from every Sherman tank and armored vehicle and like every truck, they also bore the cross of Lorraine, emblem of the fighting French.

The French soldiers called out greetings to villagers who stared back at their American helmets and uniforms before recognizing the troops as their own.

Word about the homecoming of the French troops spread quickly and soon the roads were lined with civilians dressed in their Sunday best hysterically cheering and waving to the moving armored columns.

Killer Katan

tore into his tormentor, raining kicks upon him and eventually cornering him against the ropes. Katan appealed for mercy, and Pierre without interference from the referee, acted like a gentleman and gave him a chance to comeout and resume the bout on equal terms.

Katan's victory in the first fall was not clear sailing by any means, and his saddest moments probably occurred when the Frenchman got his thighs around his head in a series of holds that for the average citizen might have resulted in an ambulance trip to the nearest hospital. Each time he managed with enormous effort to rend himself free, he was pulled back in again, and this went on for some 10 minutes, with the Killer's noggin getting several vicious bumps against the hard floor. It was DeGlane's greatest effort, and at no time after was he able to exhibit the same style of attack. Katan finally worked himself out of trouble by applying a muscle-damaging rub to DeGlane's calf.

Pierre started the second round still feeling groggy from the effects of the climax that brought about the fall, but eventually got himself onto reasonably equal terms with the Killer. Both men were on the mat innumerable times, but always succeeded in breaking loose. Several complicated wrestling structures, merely a tangle of sweating arms and legs, were developed by the twain in all kinds of resourceful holds, but neither man outpointed his opponent in a decided fashion.

Irishman Loses.

Dr. Len Hall, in the semi-finals, was another fighter, who though not a favorite wtih the crowd, won his match, felling Irish Tom Collins with the piledriver technique in a matter of 17-minutes. This was an action-packed bout that did not lack for excitement a single minute of its existence and appeared to interest the spectators as much as the feature exhibition. Plenty of rough stuff and tumbling were seen throughout and Doc resorted to every method of cowing his opponent that was in his repertoire, including hair-pulling, ear-pulling and his own original hand-stamping. Collins was no pushover, however, and the terrific joltings he took were equalled in many instances by those he dished out to the Doc. But the latter had the staying powers which count in such a match, and after Collins had had his head banged against the pole while under the influence of a full nelson and had been thrown out of the ring and hit twice before he could climb back in, he began to weaken in the face of the apparently tireless strength of his opponent. Crazy with frustration, he rebounded twice from the ropes and knocked the Doc down in a couple of really wicked body slams, but the end was even then in sight and no one knew it better than Collins himself. Hall waited his chance and got the fighting Irisman when and where it would do most good.

Both Disqualified.

Bunny Dunlop and Nanjo Singh, the Hindu mat artist, bucked it out for 21 minutes in the opener, at which time both were disqualified for getting pert with Bert Maxwell, the referee. In the throes of some close in-fighting, which resembled, if it resembled anything, akin to common human experience, the "it's you or me" tactics that are taught Commando trainees, the heavying fighters resented the referee's interference until that individual had put up with all the disregard of his orders which he was prepared to take lying down— and lying down he was two or three times when the infuriated wrestlers included him in their scrap. Before this happened, almost everything else which could have happened had already taken place, and the customers had even been up in arms, open-mouthed at some of the rough stuff. Throughout the engagement, Bunny showed a consistent tendency to talk, telling the world his troubles in between bites and arm twists, until he was actually hoarse; while the Hindu, silent throughout, took the attitude of looking grieved whenever he considered himself misunderstood by the referee.

LANDOWNER DIES

TOWCESTER, Northants — (CP) — Lord Hosketh, prominent estate owner in Northamptonshire and North Buckinghamshire, died here at the age of 62 shortly after attending a county council meeting. He was director of the county fire office and owned a brewery, a cinema and a race-course.

Quaker Team Beats Aircraft

Taking an early lead, Quaker Oats took an Industrial League game from Aircraft Tuesday evening at Memorial Park, winding up the final count with a 17 to 5 victory.

Horton pitched for the Quakers, fanning 2 and walking 5. Thompson hurled for the Aircrafters, also fanning 2, but walking 7.

Quakers took the lead in the second frame, coming out front with a five-run rally. The fourth frame also turned in runs, with Roote and Tice coming home to boost the Quakers' score to 7. The Aircraft players gained one run in the fifth inning, when Florence scored on a hit by Roberts.

A four-run rally in the sixth frame totalled the Aircrafters' scoring efforts for the evening, while the Quakers went on in the sixth to score once, and turn in 6 more runs in their half of the seventh, making the final count.

The teams:

Quakers—Sullivan 2b, Roote ss, Gunn c, Horton p, Fisher lf, Ash 1b, Townsend 3b, Willshaw cf, Tice rf.

Aircraft—Roberts rf, Heffernan cf, Beesley 3b, Morrison ss, Patterson c, Outram 2b, Odette lf, Thompson p, Florence 1b.

Score by innings:
Quakers	050 246 0—17

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

ABANDON YOUR CUSTOM

THERE IS nothing the matter with the usual policy of scoring the ace and king first if there are nine trumps on your side. Following it every time, however, is just plain bad bridge. If finding one opponent with a doubly guarded queen would beat your contract in case you took your two tops at the start, it may be highly advisable to attempt a finesse first, or even deliberately give up a first round trick in trumps, especially if that is necessary to leave a trump in the dummy for ruffing.

Jim Barnes, the old-time national open golf champion, had a policy on the putting green which he described as "Miss them quick." His idea was that prompt action would prevent binding nervousness which would destroy accuracy.

The declarer on this deal must have had a policy which could be epitomized in the words "Get set quick." Anyway, that is exactly what he did.

He won the club K lead with the A and immediately raked in the heart A and K, as soon as he saw his side had nine trumps and only four were out against him. In those first three tricks he made his contract impossible. To the fourth he led the heart J, which West took with the Q. South's only hope was that West would not return a spade, but the situation he saw compelled that lead. Consequently three spade tricks beat the contract.

All that South had to do to make his contract airtight, after winning the first trick with the club A in the dummy, was to finesse the heart J. West could have won that, but his side could then have scored only two tricks in spades, since the heart 8 would have remained in dummy to police the third round of the suit with a ruff.

Crew Of Huron Returns Home Without Mishap

By JOHN LEBLANC
Canadian Press Staff Writer.

AN EAST COAST CANADIAN PORT, August 16 — (CP) — Veterans of hot action from the Murmansk convoy route to the flanks of the Normandy invasion flotilla, members of the crew of the Canadian Tribal class destroyer Huron have returned to Canada on leave and the enemy will probably be happy to learn this.

For while they were hunting for trouble up and down the Channel coasts, they sank two of the enemy ships—trawlers—shared in the destruction of two of his carefully-hoarded destroyers and did damage to several others. In return, their ship absorbed nothing more than a few splinter holes from near misses.

Huron, members of her crew related, also took part in the action off Norway that brought about the destruction of the German battleship Scharnhorst last December. With other Canadian destroyers guarding a convoy, she had manoeuvred into position for a torpedo attack on the Nazi giant, but the Scharnhorst stayed out of range. Later, she was near enough to see the gun flashes as British ships polished off the battleship.

Prowled Along Shore.

In Invasion Day and afterwards, the Huron's job was to prowl the western end of the assault area to intercept any German surface vessels trying to get into the English Channel. Another Canadian Tribal —H.M.C.S. Haida — was in the British-Canadian flotilla doing this job.

"We didn't run into a thing on Invasion Day," said Cmdr. H. R. Rayner, D..SC., R.C..N, Huron's young skipper, "although we did get a tremendous thrill out of watching scores of planes carrying the airborne troops passing over us a few hours before the dawn of D-Day."

Cmdr. Rayner, who coincidentally is a native of Huron County, commanded the destroyer St. Laurent when it tackled enemy subs in the first wolf pack attack against a convoy on the Atlantic.

The Huron, commissioned thirteen months ago, has been operating with a flotilla that, at last count, had sunk 21 enemy vessels and damaged 17 more between the end of April and the end of July. This number includes merchant ships.

Invasion Makes Troops Jubilant

WITH THE ALLIED FORCES IN NORMANDY, August 16 — (CP)-Reuters) —A British Tommy summed up the reaction here to the new landings in the south of France by saying:

"We've been punching Jerry in the face and now we're kicking him in the trousers. Blimey it's wonderful."

A wave of excitement went around the rapidly expanding bridgehead as the news spread. It overshadowed the excitement over the trapping of the German division behind the Falaise gap.

Changes In Polling Set-up Recommended To City Council

Enlistment of school children on the day of municipal elections, this year the first Monday in December, was suggested in an extended recommendaiton to the council by City Clerk Outram, Monday night. His proposal also includes changing of the hours of voting to 11 a.m. to 7 p.m. to conform with his plan of focussing more attention on the citizen's duty of using their municipal franchise.

Several of the members, especially Alderman Bradburn and Sullivan,, were dubious about the switch of hours of voting, but for the present the proposed changes depend upon the approval of the Board of Education in some particulars about which the Board will be consulted.

The council generally aproved of Mr. Outram's recommendations which are in the main based on the experience of fifteen cities of about the same population as Peterborborough.

His presentment to the council was as follows:

Better Locations.

"In its desire to arouse the interest of the electors in municipal elections and to increase the number of voters using their franchise, City Council has passed By-law No. 4390, which advances the day of polling to the first Monday in December. From the recorded experience of other cities it can be judged that this action should have material benefit.

"However, there are other matters connected with municipal elections which I desire to bring to the attention of City Council at this time in order that council may establish policies in respect to them.

"One of these is the need of relocating certain polling places. For many years it has been the custom to locate the polling places in schools and other public buildings, while it is hoped that we may have the very helpful co-operation of the two school boards to an even greater extent this year to assure the success of the elections. I am of the opinion that too much emphasis has been placed on the use of schools as polling places. This has resulted in some polling places being located too distant from the electors to be properly convenient for them to vote.

Polls At Schools.

"I have made a careful study of the polling subdivisions and their polling places and would recommend that 15 polling places be changed from their past locations to new locations more convenient to the electors which they serve. These polling places with their previous locations are as follows:

No. 1—King Edward School; No. 4—Sacred Heart School; Nos. 7 and 8—South Central School; No. 9—Prince of Wales School; Nos. 15 and 16—City Buildings; No. 20—Prince of Wales School; Nos. 28, 29 and 31—Central School; No. 34—P. J. Harrison's Store; No. 36—Immaculate Conception School; Nos. 39 and 40—Community Hall, Ashburnham.

"As new and more convenient locations for these polling places, I would suggest the securing of private homes, preferably with corner locations, or stores more or less in the centre of each of these polling subdivisions. If council concurs with this recommendation, I would suggest that the necessary directions to make it effective be given the City Clerk at an early date in order that he may make the survey on the ground of these polling subdivisions which will be required and complete the details for the new locations.

"For the nine new polling subdivisions required in Monaghan Ward the City Clerk plans to locate the polling places in as convenient places as can be obtained.

"A second recommendation is that Council pass the necessary by-law fixing the polling places and the voting hours not later than its first meeting in October. This will permit the City Clerk time to complete his arrangements and present the necessary full information to the public.

Will Use Cards.

"I would suggest also that Council give consideration at an early date to the method it desires adopted for informing the electors where they vote. Last year a map was pubdished in the newspaper, while in previous years cards were mailed to the householders. Some citizens considered the map to be more effective, but others did not. The map is certainly less costly and is more flexible. However, instructions should be given the City Clerk at an early date, because if cards are to be used, detailed arrangements will have to be made for this work to be done.

"Would it not be possible to use the facilities of the local theatres in developing election interest? The three theatres have always been willing to co-operate in presenting information to the public and I have had particularly fine aid from them in respect to rationing. I would suggest that the City Clerk be authorized to learn the cost of a short film which would awaken election interest and give election information and which might be illustrated somewhat to make it more attractive. I do not think such a short film should prove costly, and it would be available for use annually.

Children As Aids.

"Owing to the change in the date of the election many persons employed in previous years as election officials, deputy returning officers and poll clerks, will not be available this year. As previously suggested, it is hoped that the School Boards will declare election day a partial holiday. During the first hour of school it is hoped that the teachers will give a lesson in citizenship and its responsibilities, particularly pointing out that it is election day and asking the children to remind their parents to vote School could be dismissed at 10 o'clock. This would leave the teachers free for the remainder of the day. I hope it may be arranged that many of the teachers will serve as election officials, thus furnishing a most competent group of election officials. If the polls were opened at 11 o'clock in the morning the teachers would have an hour following dismissal of their classes to go to their respective polling stations and be in readiness for the opening of the poll.

If Council approves of these suggestions, I would recommend that the City Clerk be authorized to write the School Boards in an effort to have this procedure brought into operation.

The experience here and in other centres is that voting is very light in the morning, but that the polls should be keupt open later in the afternoon. I would recommend that the hours of voting be from 11 a.m. to 7 p.m."

Macdonald Urges Powerful Navy

PORT ARTHUR, Aug. 16—(CP)—Navy Minister Macdonald said Monday that he hoped that never again would the Canadian navy be allowed to fall into the state which it had to endure in the 1920's and 30's.

Officiating at the official opening of the H.M.C.S. Griffon naval barracks here, the Minister said "the achivements of Canada's sailors in this war should be a constant inspiration to us and the foundations which they laid so gallantly ought not be allowed to crumble and disappear."

Mr. Macdonald said the establishment of such a naval barracks as the Griffon would do much to keep alive a proper naval spirit throughout Canada.

Others attending the opening included Munitions Minister Howe and Vice-Admiral G. C. Jones, Chief of the Naval Staff.

100 Farmers Battle Large Bush Fire

CORNWALL, Aug. 16 —CP)— A bush fire which has been raging in the Black River district 10 miles northwest of here since Friday yesterday moved in a southwesterly direction towards St. Andrews, a village six miles north of Cornwall. It was reported, however, that the village was in no immediate danger. More than 100 farmers were fighting the blaze today.

Meanwhile troops from the Army Basic Training Centre here who had assisted in fighting the Black River fire were engaged today in battling a bush fire which broke out northeast of the camp late yesterday. Mill employees helped the soldiers to battle the blaze, which is endangering power line poles which supply a rayon manufacturing plant (Cortaulds (Canada) Limited).

Drew Claims King Refused To Cooperate

TORONTO, Aug. 16 — (CP) — Premier Drew of Ontario Tuesday that Prime Minister Mackenzie King's explanation in the House of Commons "of his refusal to meet the Provinces in a Dominion Provincial conference is completely divorced from the truth." He added in a formal statement: "I have offered the utmost co-operation but co-operation has been refused."

The Ontario Premier's statement followed by a few hours the Prime Minister's announcement that the projected Dominion-Provincial conference would not be held until after a Federal general election. Mr. King said letters he received from Mr Drew and the latter's radio speech last Wednesday indicated that a conference held before an election would have "little or no hope of success." He said a "co-operative attitude on the part of all governments concerned" was essential to making the conference a success.

Premier Drew's statement said that at the time Mr. King was making his announcement to the House, Provincial Treasurer Frost and Provincial Secretary Dunbar of Ontario were in Ottawa to discuss various aspects of the conference and "Mr. King knew that."

"I became convinced a few weeks ago that Mr. King had no intention of calling this conference," said the statement, adding that "it is clear now that he never had the slightest idea of calling this conference and that he has been wasting the time and money of department officials across Canada for nearly eight months."

Faces Crises

The Dominion faces a grave constitutional crisis, the statement continued. Five bills introduced by Mr. King in the House of Commons in the last two weeks involve a total expenditure of $1,500,000,000 over ordinary expenditures and "all of them will depend upon tax payments which called for a re-adjustment of our Dominion-Provincial taxing arrangements before they were introduced."

Mr. King had said in the House of Commons that the Dominion government planned to discuss the administration of the Family Allowances Bill with the Provinces at a Dominion-Provincial conference. "Now there is going to be no conference until after an election. Perhaps the public will understand now why the operation of the bill was post-dated until July of next year. He passed the bill in defiance of our constitution and now refuses even to discuss this measure with the Provinces, which by his own statement must be brought in as partners in the administration."

Newest Invasion Worst Kept Secret

ALLIED SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, Aug. 16—(CP)—The invasion of southern France was perhaps the worst kept secret of the war.

Thousands of Frenchmen and Allied soldiers knew it was coming. Correspondents in Normandy and Brittany were constantly asked about it both by Frenchmen and soldiers.

The question was among the first asked by Frenchmen in towns which had been captured. The French underground probably was told of the impending invasion and they told everyone else.

Canadian Paper Lauds Americans

ROME, August 16 — (AP) — The Canadian Army newspaper, Maple Leaf, in an editorial column praising the tactics of the Americans in Northern France declared to-day "our Allies from another of the 'decadent democracies' have done a magnificant all-round job. They have what it takes in large doses."

"The major credit for placing the Germans in their present precarious position belongs to Lt.-Gen. Omar Bradley's American armies. It is true that the Canadians and British played their part— and played it well —by pinning down strong German forces....

"But it was the Americans whose dash, speed and courage first broke out of Normandy. It was the Americans who gained such important positions that Field Marshall Von Kluge decided they had to be cut off. And it was the Americans who met the great counter-attack at Mortain, held it, and forced the enemy to commit even more strength until the great prize lay within the bottle...."

Spectacular Drive Kept Secret St. Pierre Captured

By ROSS MUNRO,
Canadian Press War Correspondent.

WITH THE 1ST CANADIAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Aug. 17 —(CP-Cable)— Under a cloak of the deepest secrecy covering most military operations in north-west France for two days, the Canadian Army launched an attack eastwards with strong forces and our troops are now over the Dives River.

This new offensive, which could not be disclosed until now, went on while Falaise was being attacked and captured by Canadian infantry and tanks. Falaise, major road centre dominating the northern end of the Normandy pocket escape-gap, fell to Western Canada forces which fought their way through the city during the night and this morning.

At 3 o'clock this afternoon (9 a.m. e.d.t) the blackout on news of the new push was lifted and the story can now be told.

The town of St. Pierre on the south bank of the Diver river, 10 miles north-east of Falaise and 15 miles-east of Caen, has been captured in this spectacular swing to the east. St. Pierre is on the Falaise-Lisieux road which now is cut in a dozen places.

Hun Ships On Suicide Mission

By SUB-LT. SCOTT YOUNG—Royal Canadian Navy

ABOARD A CANADIAN WARSHIP OFF THE SOUTH OF FRANCE, Aug. 16 — (Delayed) — (CP Cable).—From bits and pieces of information gleaned in scraps of English, French and German from wounded Nazi seamen taken aboard this Canadian ship after their own vessel was sunk off Marseille Tuesday morning, the pitiful story of how the Germans sent eight corvette-type warships out to meet the great Allied task fleets supporting the invasion of South France has been pieced together.

The information did not come from official questioning for most of the prisoners were too badly injured to question. But in periods between fitful wakefulness and uneasy slumber they told voluntarily of the ill-fated little fleet which set out from Marseille with orders to "stop the landing craft trying to approach the beaches."

I write this just a few yards from where the prisoners are tossing with pain from burns suffered when a single salvo from a United States warship turned their 1,000-ton warship into a floating ball of fire from which only about one-third of the crew survived.

These men said one other ship also was sunk, but they did not know what happened to the remaining six.

One informant said it became known the day before D-Day that our invasion fleet was en route. Then came orders for the little German fleet to sail. They all knew then that they were finished and that this war was over for them.

All who could took their personal belongings ashore and sent them home.

The survivors were picked up by United States boats and put aboard this ship, where they were attended by our medical officers. Cmdr. A. F. Large of Toronto and Surgeon-Lieut. Hector McDougall of Montreal together with dozens of sick berth attendants, stewards and cooks, all of whom ignored watches and pitched in to help make comfortable the men who had been ordered out to try to send us to the bottom of the Mediterranean.

Enemy Can't Dodge Invasion

By HOWARD FLEIGER
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—(AP).—President Roosevelt returned to Washington to-day from a 15,000-mile war trip into the Pacific to declare that Allied armies will drive in and occupy Germany and Japan even should resistance collapse short of enemy borders.

It was the first definite assertion that Germany and Japan will not be able to use the Allies' own war goal— unconditional surrender — to keep Allied forces out of their homelands.

This time, the President said, Germany will not escape the military occupation which she dodged by armistice in the First Great War.

Mr. Roosevelt made the statement to a news conference aboard his special train as it approached Washington at a time when Allied forces were pushing ashore powerful new landings on the southern coast of France.

Premier King Reviews Plans To Maintain High Income Level

OTTAWA, Aug. 17. — (CP).— Prime Minister Mackenzie King said last night in a broadcast address that Canada was moving in the vanguard of nations which have the resources and the will to put the welfare of the people first in the transition from war to peace.

Speaking over the national network of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporatnon in a free-time, political broadcast period, Mr. King outlined benefits and other arrangements for members of Canada's armed forces and said thier re-establishment to civilian life would depend on a prosperous and happy Canada.

The Government, he said, had taken steps to help ensure full employment and a high level of income after the war.

"We are proceeding with social insurance against the major economic hazards," he went on. "We are actively pressing for action to promote world trade and to maintain and expand Canada's markets at home and abroad. We are planning for the rapid and efficient conversion of war industries to meet peacetime needs."

In addition, legislation to promote housing, slum clearance and community planning had been enacted. Banking services had been extended and additional credit facilities provided for industrial expansion, farm improvement and the building and modernizing of houses.

Farmers and fishermen had been given social insurance through establishment of floors under their prices. Family allowances — "the greatest measure of all"—had provided for the wel-being of the nation's children.

Canada's fighting men, said Mr. King, had been given the best in training, leadership and equipment,

Flying Bombs Damage Palace

LONDON, Aug. 17 —(CP)—Flying bombs have blown out windows in Buckingham Palace and have damaged two other landmarks — Dr. Samuel Johnson's house and Butchers' Hall, it was disclosed today.

The King and the remainder of the Royal family were absent when a bomb fell less than a half mile from the palace early in the morning.

The blast tore out window frames in the palace and seared the gardens and a half dozen beautiful ash trees.

A small summer house on the Royal grounds was wrecked, and the tennis court no which the King used to play before the war was ruined.

It was the second time robot bombs hit near the palace. Previously a bomb landed in a road outside the palace grounds but caused no damage.

Butchers' Hall, the home of the Worshipful Company of the art or mystery of butchers, is one of the city's oldest livery companies, dating back to 1605. The building was shattered, but its ancient archives escaped damage.

The blast tore the roof from Johnson's house, in Gough Square, off Fleet Street. Dr. Johnson lived there for 10 years, during which he compiled most of his dictionary. Most of the relics in the house had been removed.

Allies Punch 30 Miles Into France

50 Miles Of Coast Now Held; Cannes Penetrated

By NOLAND NORGNARD
Associated Press War Correspondent

ROME, Aug. 17.— (AP).—Allied troops have punched out a solid front 50 miles broad and about 30 miles deep along the coast of Southern France, American 7th Army Headquarters announced to-day.

On the west the invasion forces drove within 10 miles of the histori old fortified naval base of Toulon. On the east they were within 10 miles of the picturesque resort of Cannes. The invaders, led by three veteran American divisions and supported by heavily armored French forces, had seized an area of approximately 500 square miles.

(The German communique said the Allies already had penetrated Cannes. German broadcasts reported air-borne troops had landed northwest of Cannes and entered the town after bloody fighting. Although the Germans declared they were shelling the town from nearby heights, broadcasts indicated htey had little hope of holding the town where Napoleon landed in 1815 to begin his famous 100-day campaign).

Hold 9 Towns.

The Allied announcement listed nine other towns in Allied hands—the coastal towns of St. Tropez, Ste. Maxime, St. Raphael, Frejus and Le Lavandou, and the inland communities of Le Muy, Le Luc, Lorgues and Collobrieres.

Lorgues, the farthest inland, is 27 miles from the coast at Cap Camarat near St. Tropez in the approximate centre of the beachhead front.

"The swift advance of American and French troops inland continues and numerous additional villages and towns have been taken," Gen. Patch, 7th Army commander, announced.

"All elements of the beachhead forces have been joined to form a continuous front arching inland with anchor points over 50 airline miles apart. The beachhead itself now embraces some 500 square miles.

Editors Urged To Boost Moral, Spiritual Standards

WINNIPEG, Aug. 17—(CP).—A challenge to editors to do "a bit more preaching" on moral and spiritual standards in preparation for the post-war world was made here today by C. V. Charters of Brampton, Ont., managing director of the Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association.

The publisher of the Brampton Conservator told the association's 25th annual convention that returned personnel of the armed forces "will become demoralized unless they come back and find a fight going on to put moral and spiritual standards back into home, business, club and community life."

If persons demobilized can be enlisted into this kind of a fight then there's some hope of winning the peace and making it stick, said Mr. Charters.

He urged the 300 editors, from the Yukon to Newfoundland, to face the challenge courageously and start now. "A lot more depends on us than we realized in creating this new sacrificing spirit in the hearts and minds of our fellow Canadians —a God-given spirit of true patriotism and true world citizenship. Unless true religion finds a more prominent place in the post-war weekly press, we will have failed in our duty...."

The report of President W. J. Rowe, publisher of the Manitou Western Canadian, urged weeklies to "insist" on freedom in industrial and business enterprises after the war. Business will strangle itself by maintaining war-time restrictions in peace-time, it said.

The report, read by Chairman F. P. Galbraith of Red Deer due to absence of Mr. Rowe, now in a Winnipeg hospital, also stressed the necessity for editors to understand and interpret a change in times and to guide readers into wise channels. It suggested weekly publishers examine post-war reconstruction schemes wisely before endorsing them.

George Lake of Timmins, Ont., reported that membership in the association increased from 568 to 583 newspapers in 1944.

Americans Plunge 13 Miles Take Orleans And Chartres

By GLADWIN HILL—Associated Press War Coespondent

ALLIED SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Aug. 17 — (AP) — Swift American tanks and motorized infantry advanced within 35 miles of Paris today in a 13-mile plunge across the Aunay River from Chartres which was captured along with the three key cities of Orleans, Dreux andChateaudun. The 1st Canadian Army was moving faster, too. It captured the burning rubble which was Falaise, important highway centre and birthplace of William the Conqueror, and advanced one to six miles east of the Falaise-Troarn road beyond the Dives River. St. Pierre, inland from the coastal flood zone, fell.

Mezidon, important road junction town, 15 miles southeast of Caen and four miles north of St. Pierre, fell to the Canadians in their new eastward surge, headquarters said.

LONDON—Paris is now a "front line city" and the thunder of approaching guns can be heard in the city, the German radio said at 4 p.m. today.

Move 2½ Miles.

The Normandy trap was narrowed to seven miles as the Canadians' advance and British and American 1st Army troops chopped off the entire western end of the pocket. At the eastern end of the pocket British forces in the Conde sector advanced 2½ miles.

American 3rd Army columns cut within 27 miles of the Paris suburb of Versailles, which sprawls west of Paris.

The Americans were less than 20 miles from the Seine River, against which the fleeing remnants of the German 7th Army may be pinned in yet another trap.

The captured cities of Chartres, Dreux, Orleans and Chateaudun, all of which fell yesterday, lie in an arc 40 to 65 miles from Paris. German resistance was weak and gains from Le Mans reached from 60 to 80 miles.

Paris itself was virtually outflanked to the south by the fall of Orleans which gave the Americans a fighting foothold inside the Seine-Loire rivers gap.

The sweep past Dreux threatened to box off the fleeing remnants of the German 7th Army against the Seine, whose bridges west of Paris have been destroyed by bombs.

Vault River.

At least one column vaulted the Eure river barely 20 miles from the Seine in a swift threat to box in the fleeing German 7th Army against that river. The American thrusts also carried hard against the inland flank of the German 15th Army holding the Pas De Calais coast north of Normandy.

Russians Drive Within 3 Miles Of East Prussian Frontier

LONDON, Aug. 17—(CP).—Russian troops are within three miles of the east Prussian frontier, attacking on both sides of the Lithuanian town of Virbales with strong tank and plane support, the German communique said today. "Fierce fighting continues," the German communique said. Virbales lies 40 miles east of the east Prussian rail centre of Insterburg, where iron foundry and machine tool products are hauled away by five rail lines. It is 92 miles from Konigsberg, the east Prussian capital.

Troops of Gen. Ivan Cherniakhovsky have been engaged in a fierce battle with the Germans within seven to 10 miles of the east Prussian frontier for more than two weeks, and the German communique announcement was the first intimation they had started moving forward.

Other Russians imperil the wild, Masurian Lake country of east Prussia on the south, and last were reported knifing through a 15-mile fortified belt within 27 miles of the communications hub of Lyck.

Near Czeck Border.

The enemy also reported Russian progress in the Carpathian slopes, saying "the Soviets are attacking northwest of Krosno," a south Polish city 21 miles north of the Czecho-Slovak border. That advance threatened the Polish cities of Tarnow and also posed a flanking

Ploesti Centre Kiel, Stettin Hit

By AUSTIN BEALMEAR,
Associated Press Staff Writer.

LONDON, Aug. 17 (AP) —American heavy bombers from Italy attacked the great Romanian oil centre of Ploesti to-day after nearly 1,200 R. A. F. heavies from England had plunged 5,600 tons of explosives before dawn into the German Baltic ports of Stettin and Kiel.

Weather limited support on the west French front although bridge-busting American light and medium bombers attacked more crossings in front of the retreating Germans, and R. A. F. fighter bombers ranged over Germany, France and Belgium deep behind the lines, attacking communications.

Berlin was pounded with two-ton block-busters during the night by R.

French Revolt, Defeat Nazis

LONDON, Aug. 17 (CP)—Supplied with guns and ammunition dropped by, Allied planes, Frenchmen have risen in armed revolt, against the Nazis throughout Haute Savoie Province in southeast France, reports from the French frontier at Geneva said today.

Street fighting also has broken out in the important German bastion of Toulouse, where French Partisans have demanded surrender of the Nazis there, according to dispatches from Irun, Spain.

The Irun dispatches gave this picture of the growing revolt against the harassed Nazi overlords:

The Partisans have occupied the Pyrenees railway towns of Coloron and Mauleon. Heavy fighting is in progress between German occupation troops and Maquis around Pau and Tarbes, between Cloron and Toulouse.

Nearly 10,000 Partisans from the Mediterranean foothills are moving eastward toward the Riviera battleground to join Allied forces.

From the French frontier at Geneva came this description of the revolt in Haute Savoie:

Village after village was liberated during the afternoon fighting developed between German soldiers and S.S. units, adding to the chaos in the Nazi garrisons.

Canuck Paratroops Land

Switched From Italy To French Coast

NEW YORK, Aug. 17.—(CP).—First definite word of Canadian participation in the South France invasion was contained today in a dispatch from Sub-Lt. Scott Young of the Royal Canadian Navy.

Reporting participating of Canadians assault craft, Young, a former Canadian Press staff writer, added: "Landing craft from one ship carried mixed Canadian and American troops to assault the French Isle De Levant."

No further identification of the Canadians was given but presumably they were members of the special service force, dubbed by the Germans as "the men with funny pants and dirty faces" which fought in Italy.

There was speculation that this was the force involved when the Spanish radio (Radio National) reported— without Allied confirmation—Tuesday that one of the first Allied landing craft to arrive on a beach in Southern France "was loaded with Canadian and French soldiers."

Highly trained as parachute troops, mountain fighters and infantrymen, the special service unit would be high on the list of troops picked for an invasion. The force was used to help hold the Anzio bridgehead in Italy last January and was among the first to enter Rome after it fell.

Besides fighting at Anzio, the force helped root the Germans from around Cassino in fierce hill-to-hill fighting.

Camillien Houde Released

Stormy Petrel Of Quebec Politics On Way Home

MONTREAL, Aug. 17.—(CP). — Camillien Houde, stormy petrel of municipal and provincial politics in Quebec for two decades, to-day will meet his family on his way back from four years' internment. After a day's stop-over, he will arrive here to-morrow evening.

Mrs. Houde and two of her daughters left to meet him at an undisclosed point on his journey from Fredericton where he arrived late yesterday from an internment camp.

Meanwhile stickers calling upon the population of Montreal to go down to Central station Friday evening to greet its former mayor started to appear on lamp posts and store windows throughout the city early this morning.

While Mr. Houde at Fredericton declined to meet newsmen and talk about his plans or experiences, Mrs. Houde last night said her husband, who was arrested in 1940 for violation of Defence of Canada regulations after he issued a statement advising the people of Montreal to disregard national registration would "first of all enjoy a long craved-for rest with his family and his plans are pretty well undecided."

Mrs. Houde said that her husband never felt unhappy while in the internment camp and that he would miss the friendship of [illegible] number of friends" he made there.

Americans Want Bermuda Isle

LONDON, August 17 —(AP) — London newspapers generally printed brief, prominently displayed stories Wednesday on a resolution introduced in the United States Senate Tuesday recommending permanent United States possession of Bermuda and West Indies Islands.

The Daily Mail captioned its front page paragraph, "modest demands." The Herald carried a three-paragaph story on the back page under the headline, "Senators want our Islands." There was no editorial discussion or official comment.

The resolution was introduced by Senator Kenneth McKellar (Dem.-Tenn.) and was referred to the Foreign Relations Committee. The measure calls upon the United States to seek permanent post-war possession of island outposts in both the Pacific and the Atlantic for its "peace and security."

effected.

"French and American reinforcements, including armor, are pouring ashore. Casualties continue exceptionally light."

Affect Junction.

The junction of assault infantry which landed from the sea and the huge air-borne force indicated that the Allies had reached inland communication arteries which the parachute troops had been assigned to block, and that these henceforth would be available for the swift funneling of men and supplies into the rugged Alps of Provence in the drive northward.

American infantry previously linked up with French commandos who had landed on the flanks of the main invading force to block side avenues to the beachheads.

It thus was evident that the Allies with 48 hours after their landing had achieved an astonishing success in seizing the primary requisites for a large scale operation.

With tanks and mighty M-10 tank-destroyers ashore it was also evident that Patch was in a position to weather the greatest danger ahead—the period in the first 72 hours when the enemy might mass armored reserves to make a counter-attack.

But so far there was little evidence ..show that the Germans were ..ing for such counter-attacks.

.hunderbolts intercepted and destroyed one convoy of 50 enemy motor trucks towing field guns toward the battle area, leaving at least 42 of the vehicles in flames and the others damaged.

Fires in Nice

On the contrary, there were signs that the Germans nervously were preparing for an extension of Allied landings.

Crews of British bombers reported fires early today in Nice harbor (which the Germans already have said they were evacuating). These apparently were from German demolitions near the Italian border.

Enemy transport columns also were seen moving out of Genoa, the historic port of northern Italy where there were heavy Allied pre-invasion bombings. These were going westward, apparently to protect Nazi-held Italy behind the Gothic Line.

Smaller-scale enemy movements also were seen between Nice and Imperia, on the coast just inside the Italian border.

Other fires were reported roaring along the Italian Riviera.

"All seacoast defences have been silenced through effective air and naval bombardment," headquarters of Maj.-Gen. Alexander M. Patch reported from the Riviera beachhead.

A dispatch by Scott Young, Canadian Navy public relations officer, said mixed Canadian and American troops went ashore on Isle de Levant, off the Riviera coast, as the invasion was launched. It was believed they were the Canadian-American special service force which helped to hold the Anzio beachhead in Italy.

(The Vichy radio said new Allied landings had been made under a heavy naval barrage, and reported heavy fighting west of St. Raphael, about 20 miles southwest of Cannes.

(D.N.B. said the Allies attempted new landings on both sides of Toulon, but declared they were repulsed. Wednesday night the German radio said Nazi forces were carrying out demolitions in Cannes and were withdrawing).

Moderate Casualties.

Allied casualties were reported moderate. The Allied Command declared there was good evidence enemy losses were heavy.

Although enemy resistance has been light, "it has not been as slight as first thought," it was said officially.

Fliers reported fires roaring early to-day in Nice harbor and along the Italian Riviera west of Genoa.

These reconnaissance reports appeared to substantiate German reports that the Nazis had wrecked harbors at Nice, Cannes and St. Tropez.

Enemy radio reports indicated the Germans were fearful of landings around Genoa, Italy's leading port. Fires were seen west of there and may mean destruction of military stores.

Landing of reinforcements was taken to be exceeding all expectations, with tanks and tank destroyers now ashore

Allied Headquarters last night declared enemy air opposition remained negligible. Latest field dispatches indicated the forces moving inland still had met no heavy resistance. Allied planes provided an umbrella over the beachheads and ranged far inland, blasting a path for the advancing troops.

3,000 Prisoners.

The bag of prisoners taken in the minor clashes continued to mount. Unofficial estimates placed the total to date at about 3,000. Headquarters said 700 were taken the first day.

Allied troops apparently were trying to link up the various original landing points. Headquarters indicated progress in this direction last night, announcing contact had been established between a force of French Commandos and an American infantry division which landed some miles apart.

Field dispatches threw little additional light on the situation, but they disclosed that American paratroopers captured the large coastal town of St. Tropez, about midway between Nice and Marseille.

Correspondents reported many other coastal towns and resorts were falling rapidly into Allied hands and indicated one Allied spearhead was not far from Toulon.

(A broadcast by ABSIE—American Broadcasting Station in Europe—reported by the United States Office of War Information, quoted the Algiers radio as saying Cannes was in Allied hands. The German radio said Nazi forces had destroyed harbor installations at Cannes and Nice and were withdrawing.)

Prisoner Age 10 Taken In France

ON THE BRITISH FRONT, France, Aug. 17. —(AP).— British troops captured thier youngest prisoner in the battles of France yesterday, a 10 year old youth dressed in a German uniform.

He confessed his age between sobs and said he "never shot anyone."

He said he was a stepson of a shanghaied Russian fighting with the Germans, and that his name was Stanlius. He was found hiding in a dugout with six Nazi troops. He was incredibly dirty and frightened, but his fears soon turned to bubbling delight when the British put him through the standard delousing process.

Stanlius loved it. He showered himself with insectide powder and a few minutes later agreed that although a bath was strange, it was not too bad.

The Tommies who captured him want to adopt him now that he is fumigated.

The Italian based heavies also attacked the Yugoslav rail centre of Nis, 120 miles south of Belgrade.

Canadian Halifaxes hit Kiel in force after midnight, flying with R.A.F. formations, while 50 minutes later a smaller force of Canadian Lancasters bombed Stettin.

Other Canadian heavy bombers engaged in extensive bomber command mine-laying operations.

All the Canadian bomber squadrons were in action in the two-pronged assault on Germany. Returning Canadian crews reported a fair amount of opposition from night fighters and anti-aircraft fire.

The fighter opposition generally was lighter than expected at the widely separatd ports, however—proof of the effectiveness of the tremendous attack on airfields and parked planes in western Germany and the low countries by nearly 2,000 British and American bombers only 36 hours earlier.

8 Canadians Lost

The night's operations cost 16 aircraft, eight of them Canadian.

Stettin is the chief Baltic port used by the Germans for supplying their troops in Finland and is on the upper flank of the Russian front. The city, with a pre-war population of about 270,000 is the site of oil refineries and chemical industries.

Kiel, some 200 miles west of Stettin, is a naval base and shipbuilding centre.

Stettin was last attacked in strength by the R.A.F. on the night of Jan. 5.

"The whole port seemed to be on fire," said a bomb aimer back from Stettin. "Explosions mingled with the fires and when we left there was a huge square of flame with isolated fires creeping out to merge with the central mass."

Dreux is 40 miles due west of Paris and only 35 miles from the capital's suburb of Versailles. Chartres is 20 miles south of Dreux. Orleans is 65 miles southwest of the capital.

One American column crossed the Eure river, presumably near Dreux where it curves two miles east of that road centre, and then pounded on toward Paris.

The German report pictured the French capital as a city of chaos without food, transportation or police. The gendarmes were said to be striking.

"The churches are overcrowded and special prayers are being said at Notre Dame," said a Transocean (propaganda) agency broadcast from Berlin.

"For the first time, the intermittent thunder of guns was heard in Paris this afternoon. The whole aspect of the French capital is assuming that of a front line city.

"For the first time the German command has appealed to the population to remain calm."

Food Shortage

The food shortage was declared acute. The whole city was reported dependent on community kitchens for meager meals.

The striking policemen were said to have ignored appeals to return to duty, after walking out in protest over apopintment of a new high police official.

The capital was said to be without gas or coal and with electric current available only from 10:30 p.m. until midnight.

"More and more the face of the French capital is changing as it is being converted into a city close to the front," another Berlin broadcast said, "the whole of Paris (pop.: 2,-829,746 in 1936) is walking or bicycling to work because the last traffic means now has ceased functioning.

"Gas service stopped Thursday, so the population now is getting its food from community kitchens. Barges carrying coal to Paris on the Seine are being attacked by enemy planes, or they become the prey of saboteurs."

Dreux and Chartres, a French department of capital of 25,000 population, form the western gateway to Paris.

The Americans posed a double threat—to take Paris and perhaps also to snare between the Seine and the Channel the German 7th Army pulling out of the disastrous Falaise pocket.

Pocket Disappearing

With Falaise captured by Canadian forces, the Normandy pocket fast was disappearing with its neck narrowed to seven miles.

The Germans were retreating into the area south of the Seine, which curves from Paris to the Channel.

It was the American 3rd Army which turned north from Le Mans and brought up the southern wing of the Falaise pincers.

Now, American columns could be sent northward from the Dreux area, possibly forming a trap on the Seine. Seine River bridges have been wrecked by Allied bombs. And five spans on the Risle River west of the Seine were struck overnight. The Nazis would have the greatest difficulty pulling their armor and heavy equipment across the river over temporary bridges which likely would be easy marks for the vast Allied bomber fleets.

The push to Orleans gave the Allies a 200-mile southern flank along the Loire River. This flank is only some 350 miles northwest of the Allied offensive beating in from the French Riviera.

To hamper Allied air attacks, the Germans are sandwiching French refugees in their army columns fleeing the Falaise trap, Allied fliers reported.

Majority Escape.

The escape of the bulk of Field Marshall Guenther Von Kluge's armor already has been conceded, leaving only remnants of possibly 14 enemy divisions— some stripped to the bone—still caught west of the Falaise-Argentan escape hatch.

A dispatch from Associated Press War Correspondent Roger D. Greene said that "high British officers reflected tranquillity over the situation however, and intimated that Allied high strategy has even greater blows in store for the enemy."

menace to Krakow. Other troops to the northwest of Krosno are within 35 miles of Krakow, fifth city and ancient capital of Poland. Bitter "offensive and defensive fighting" was reported in the big bend of the Vistula River.

Continued Russian advances were reported by the Germans "west of Lake Pskov," where the Russians are compressing and hacking away at a trapped German force estimated as high as 30 divisions. Some evidence that the Soviets were attempting a flanking thrust across Lakes Peipues and Pskov was found in the German admission that "11 fully laden ferry boats" were sunk by Nazi planes.

Soviet forces west of the Vistula south of Warsaw smashed into the city of Sandominerz in the battle to expand a bridgehead that threatens to outflank the Polish capital and imperial the Nazi defences of German Silesia.

Hit 3 Weak Spots.

This development was viewed in some Moscow quarters as more significant news than the giving of ground north-east of Warsaw.

Some Moscow commentators saw the withdrawal from Ossow as the prelude to the opening of a Red Army drive to crush the Nazis in the centre. Indications were that the Russians have the situation in hand on the entire front, and that the grand strategy and offensive lies with them.

The German radio to-day said Russian troops had launched attacks south-west of Bialystok with strong aerial support and had penetrated Nazi lines at three points along the Bialystok-Loma railway.

Russian troops in Estonia captured 70 additional places in the drive beyond Lake Poskov toward the Baltic Sea.

Hurling in large groups of infantry and tanks north and north-west of Siauliai in Lithuania, the Germans mounted a large counter-blow there. A Russian communique, however, announced that the Nazis were repelled in that sector and military men apparently were not concerned over the situation there.

The Soviet bulletin stressed losses suffered by the Nazis north-east of Warsaw. It declared 30 enemy tanks, seven self-propelled guns, 11 armored troops carriers and four armored cars were left wrecked on a battlefield strewn with hundreds of Nazi dead.

In the last 24 hours the Red Army was said to have destroyed 118 German tanks in fighting all along the front.

With the fighting in France rolling at its present pace, it seems logical to those close to the government that the two Allied leaders will meet again in the not-too-distant future to plan a new major war move.

Mr. Roosevelt said he knew nothing of internal troubles in Germany that can make us feel sure the German war machine wil blow up early. We hope there will be more trouble inside Germany, he said, but that may turn out to be wishful thinking.

If we let them quit, he added, then the next generation will be told Germany won the war.

of St. Pierre.

Between St. Pierre and Falaise other forces got over the river at the village of Jort, three miles south west of St. Pierre and pushed on into wooded hilly country.

Fighting is going on in the Mezidon area and all along this eastern flank of the Canadian army where the front has blown wide open.

British troops are playing an important part in this new drive directed by Gen. Crerar.

Two days ago the ban was imposed on news of all Allied and enemy movements east of the Caen-Falaise-Argentan-Le mans line and it has not been possible to mention operations of Canadian troops attacking Falaise from the north-east while others closed on the city from the north and north-west.

The Canadians north-east of Falaise fought several stiff engagements during the last two days. After sweeping over the Laison river and getting on to high ground they advanced south to cut the Falaise-St. Pierre highway and capture thee town of Damblainville, three miles north-east of Falaise. They were counter-attacked by German armor and guns and engaged this force while other Canadians stormed into Falaise from the west and took the city.

For 48 hours the only story that could be told of the Canadian front was the operation of Canadians attacking from the west and north of Falaise. They were the only forces inside the "forbidden" line.

Tanks Fan Out.

But during that time armored cars, tanks and infantry have been fanning-out rapidly to east and south-east of the bulge in which the Canadian Army was contained between Caen and Falaise

This advance is not yet a "Patton pursuit," as the Canadians refer to the headlong thrust of the American 3rd Army to the south of them, but it marks the greatest and quickest gains made by the Canadian Army since it launched its first major offensive ten days ago.

Everywhere the Germans tried to make a stand they were beaten. As Canadian amored columns gathered momentum for further attacks, the enemy has been forced to fall back along roads leading to Lisieux which is the only main escape route leading east.

Meanwhile, Falaise is firmly held. At 1.45 this afternoon (7.45 a.m., e.d.t.) Canadian Army headquarters said that the city had fallen.

Western Canada infantry and tanks fought their way through the city during the night and this morning, but the final mopping-up of Germans holding out to the end in buildings has now been achieved and Falaise is completely in Canadian hands.

Climax of Drive.

Capture of the city is the climax to the Canadian Army drive down the Caen-Falaise highway which began 10 days ago.

Now that they have gained Falaise, the 1st Canadian Army's first full scale offnsive has been a great success.

The advance into Falaise started yesterday, putting Western Canadians into one of their bitterest fights since the battles just south of Caen.

At the north edge of the escape gap, the city was first surrounded. Canadians fought through the streets and the final mopping up of snipers soon started.

The Germans had anti-tank guns, machine-guns and rifles hidden among wrecked buildings.

The Ante river, which swings through the north-western outskirts, was the greatest obstacle, but Sherman tanks were put across and Canadian infantry worked their way over and into the streets af Falaise, covered by the fire of other tank squadrons sitting on the slopes in front of the city.

Pigott Denies Laxity Charges

TORONTO, Aug. 17.—J. M. Pigott, of Hamilton, president of Wartime Housing Ltd., said yesterday in a "letter to Toronto Board of Control that "there are no suitable lots left in Toronto", for construction of temporary wartime houses He said there was no justification for a statement by Controller R. H. Saunders at a Board meeting Monday that Wartime Housing had failed to co-operate in a program of construction of temporary housing here for servicemen and their families.

He added that a list of lots provided by the city were, "generally speaking, unsatisfactory" but that later 100 of the best lots were selected from the list and that his office had notified the city June 19 that construction would start on 100 homes and that others would be built as soon as the property could be obtained.

and nothing had been left undone to ensure victory. He added:—

"It now remains for us to make, for the post-war future, the same thorough and comprehensive provision that Canada has made for the successful prosecution of the war. Only in this way can be fully provide for the future of our fighting men."

Mr. King said that ultimate victory was "everywhere certain," though none could be sure just when the hour would strike.

"Whether the hour will come sonoer or later depends upon the continued exertions of all the United Nations," he added. "We must keep up the drive. The greater our efforts, the sooner victory will be achieved, and the smaller the cost in precious human lives."

HERE'S ANOTHER WAY TO HELP!

BUDGET YOUR SPENDING FOR VICTORY

The "Budget Calendar" will show you how—Send for free copy and join the Budgeteers!

THERE'S one simple thing you can do every pay day to strengthen the home front—and to bring Victory sooner. Plan just how you are going to spend each pay cheque before you spend it.

A big job for your dollars

Why is that so important in the war effort? The answer is simple. Your dollars—everyone's dollars—have a bigger job to do than ever before. They must help pay the enormous cost of the battle front—through war savings, taxes and contributions. But your dollars must also back up the battle front by helping to keep the home front strong. They have to buy the right kind of food, clothing, shelter and other home needs to keep your family healthy and productive. Production on the home front is what keeps the battle front going!

It's easier—far easier—to make your dollars to their wartime job if you plan your spending in advance. That's where The Budget Calendar can help you. This is a new kind of budget method that we developed as a service to Household Finance customers. So many other families are now finding the Budget Calendar helpful that we have decided to send a copy to everyone who requests it.

Here's a new way to budget

The Budget Calendar gives you a new way to go about budgeting—a way that makes your planning easy and simple. It doesn't ask you to fit your living into a fixed spending pattern—a pattern that may not suit you at all. Instead it shows you how to take the expenses you now have and how to plan to pay them with your wartime income. Family after family has told us that here, at last, is a budget plan that "really works." And it does away with tedious bookkeeping too!

Users of the Budget Calendar are invited to join the Budgeteers. Budgeteers receive a new booklet or letter from time to time to encourage them in their efforts. Their letters and questions are always welcome and receive personal answers. Special recognition is given to Budgeteers when they complete a full year of budgeting.

C.C.F. Attacks Stand Taken By Drew

TORONTO, August 17 (Special to the Examiner). — Premier George Drew has raised the flag of provincial isolationism in his attack on the Family Allowances Act. He challenges the authority of the Dominion Parliament to enact necessary social legislation on a national scale, even when it was supported by members of his own party at Ottawa, E. B. Jolliffe, C.C.F. Leader, said to-day. He issues a call for political warfare against another province.

In so doing, Premier Drew is guilty of the same irresponsible isolationism for which he denounces other politicians such as Mr. Maurice Duplessis. It may be an ingenious device for diverting attention from the record of his own Government, but it does not bring social security any nearer.

Family allowances are not a cure-all and must not be regarded as a substitute for adequate wages and a floor under farm prices. Family allowances are necessary, however, for the protection of the nation's children and for many other reasons. It is not a local or provincial problem. Family allowances can best be financed and administered on a national scale.

Just as the Tory Party 16 years ago opposed old-age pensions by raising quibbles about provincial rights, claimed Mr. Jolliffe, so today the Tory Party in Ontario plays the same old role by opposing family alowances under the cloak of parish-pump patriotism.

Unworthy Claim.

Premier Drew claims that Ontario will benefit less than other provinces from Federal family allowances. It is an unworthy and selfish claim, which fails to recognize our identity of interest with that of the whole nation in which we are all Canadians. Every tax means a heavier burden on some groups than on others every social service benefits some more than others. Premier Drew's argument is the same as that of the American isolationists who rejected the League of Nations in fear that it would help some other country more than their own.

The C.C.F. view, declared Mr. Jolliffe, is that the provinces have each an important part to play in building a better Canada, but that problems which are national in scope require a national solution. The post-war crisis will never be solved if provincial politicians devote themselves to wrangles over constitutional jurisdiction, with the Dominion Government and with each other. The times demand a more generous and broad-minded aproach to the task of creating a united and prosperous Canada.

Canadian Craft Take Part In New Landing

By SUB-LT. SCOTT YOUNG
Royal Canadian Navy

IN A LANDING CRAFT OFF SOUTHERN FRANCE, Aug. 15. — (Delayed)—(CP Cable).—Canadian assault craft touched down on two islands off the south coast of France and on the mainland itself to-day in one of the strangest amphibious operations of the war.

Landing craft from one ship carried mixed Canadian and American troops to assault the French Isle De Levant while others with combined operations personnel carried French commandos to two points on the French mainland about 25 miles east of Toulon.

All the landings were practically unopposed but fighting was developing later on Tuesday.

The strangeness came in the nature of the operations, both of them recognized in pre-assault plans as keys to the main landings in strength on the French coast a few hours later.

Both Canadian ships carried highly-specialized troops, trained for specific jobs of destruction which the Allied commanders had decided must precede a large-scale landing.

Dummy Guns.

The main objective of the troops carried by the first ship turned out to be a complete dud. Four 120-millimetre gun which could have caused considerable damage to the main landing force had they been real—which were main objective of all the landings on the Levant were two stovepipes, a piece of cardboard and a log of wood.

At the other end of the island, where there were no known military objectives, bitter fighting developed. Casualties were not low.

The phoney guns were so well camouflaged that dozens of reconnaisance pictures on which the operational plan was based failed to distinguish them from the real thing.

At the other end of the island, however, the Germans mainly used automatic weapons, backing them up with mortars.

This ship's eight landing craft delivered their troops and later medical personnel, supplies and ammunition without a casualty.

Few Came Close

As far as I can learn now, a couple of machine-gun bulets which zinged over the craft on which I travelled to the assault beaches—a craft commnaded by Lieut. Jim Flynn of Vancouver, B.C.—were the closest any of us came to getting hit.

Flynn's craft, with AB. Keith Palmer of Toronto, Leading Stoker Lloyd Martin of Wood Island, P.E.I., AB. Ed Payne of Huntsville, Ont., AB. Frank Debues of Winnipeg, Sigmn. Clem Simons of London, England, and AB. Graham Edge of Montreal, was the headquarters craft.

We carried a colonel to within about 1,000 yards of the assault beach, then transferred him to one of the silent mannualy-paddled rubber boats by which the sneak assault was made successful.

Post War Slump Is Predicted

COBOURG, Aug. 17 (ENS)—Hitler's war activities brought the employment which Canada now is experiencing, not the government, declared Arthur Williams, M.P.P., for Ontario riding, in an address Tuesday night to local C.C.F. supporters.

Mr. Williams declared that the people of Canada had tried both the Liberal and Conservative parties and found them wanting. The nation would be well advised to try the C.C.F. as a cure for their ills, he suggested.

"Hitler is responsible for the wartime prosperity we are now experiencing. Had there been no war, employment would still be a slump, there would be large relief rolls and people would be going from place to place looking for jobs," he declared.

Last Minute Effort

The Liberal party, by its own conduct during the past few years, had "cooked its own goose," and the party would surely go down to defeat in the next election, in spite of the social legislation which it had recently passed. The people we realized that when it was po[illegible]sible to rush through this [illegible]islation now, it could have been [illegible]e during hard times when it was [illegible]st needed.

The speaker predicted that, through the lack of interest on the part of the big industrialists for the common welfare, it would be impossible to find jobs for all when the men overseas returned home.

The debate on banking in the House of Commons had clearly revealed that banks have inner reserves which they do not want the public to know about, the speaker said further. When industrialists sought action from the government, the response was quick but when labour wanted anything the government adopted a policy of stalling.

Canada Designs Self-Propelled Tank Buster

OTTAWA, Aug. 17—(CP).—Canada has designed and produced a powerful new weapon of war—a 25-pounder full-tracked, self-propelled gun mount known as the "Sexton"—which already is displaying its power in France, Munitions Minister Howe announced Wednesday.

Built only in Canada, this new weapon already has been made in sufficient quantities to supply the Canadian Army, and now is being made for the British Army, he said. It has been in action in Normandy and perhaps in the new invasion in Southern France.

The Sexton travels on tracks, serves as an artillery unit in armored formations, and also is used as tank buster.

A modification of the Canadian-designed Ram tank, it actually is a turretless tank carrying the deadly 25-pounder gun. It has the same speed and manoeuvrability as the fastest Allied tanks and fires with great effect at high speed and long range.

The gun for the new mount is virtually the same as the 25-pounder which stopped Rommel at El Alamein and has been used with great effectiveness in all subsequent British and Canadian engagements. On the Sexton mounting, the mobility and usefulness of the 25-pounder have been more than trebled.

Operated as a single unit, it dispenses with the standard artillery tractor and trailer, and carries iwthin-itself its crew of six and its ammunition. Its great speed and climbing power are supplied by an air-cooled aviation engine situated at the rear. Its gun fires from a frontal position, can be elevated 40 degrees and depressed nine degrees below the horizontal.

The "blitz mount" is open topped

Man In Theft Case Escapes Police Cordon

PORT HOPE, Aug. 17—(ENS).—Although police declined to give out any information Wednesday night as to whether or not they had captured the fourth man wanted in connection with alleged tire thefts, their reticence indicated that the man had slipped through the cordon.

Two were arrested in a stolen car containing eleven stolen tires near Dale Wednesday morning after a chase by Provincial Police. A second car was found abandoned south of Mill street in Port Hope, some time later, and a third man was arrested just east of Port Hope. The fourth man was supposed to be in the area between Gages Creek and a line about three miles further east. Provincial Police drawn from as far east as Belleville searched the area, apparently without success.

Police flatly refused to give out any names or information.

Cobourg Police Catch Five In Stolen Car

COBOURG, Aug. 17 (ENS)—Five Toronto men in a stolen car were picked up Wednesday morning by Constable J. Taylor. The car is owned by Mrs. Clara Moorehead of 31 Winchester street, Toronto and until notified by Cobourg, the Toronto police did not know that it was stolen.

On the lookout for men who were the object of a search near Port Hope of tire thefts, Constable Taylor topped a car in front of the police off and on questioning them decided to hold them for investigation. The car was a coupe and when he learned that two men were riding in the closed luggage compartment, he turned the handle to the locked-position and kept the five at bay until Chief W. J. Carey arrived and placed them in the lock-up. The men are John Meighan, Lorne Phillips, Albert Giordans, John Carey and Riel Cloutier and were later taken back to Toronto.

...The building of a great car....
a great industry..a mighty war plant

In 1904 when a little group of Canadian business men decided to found a company for the manufacture of automobiles, they little dreamed what an historic step they were taking. They were convinced that the motor car would one day be an important means of transportation, though most people at that time looked upon it as a rich man's plaything. But it is doubtful if they foresaw that in forty years their little plant would grow into an industry employing thousands of men, supplying cars to millions of men and women through hundreds of Ford dealers. Little did they dream that in a future war of nations, Ford Motor Company of Canada, Limited would become the Empire's largest single source of military transport.

1904—Ford Motor Company of Canada, Limited commenced operations in a small building formerly used as a wagon factory. Seventeen men were employed, and the cars at first were assembled from parts imported from Detroit. In the first year of operation, 117 Ford cars were produced.

1908—After two years of exhaustive tests, the Company decided to standardize on the Model "T" Ford Car, using mass production methods. With increasing demand, the plant was expanded to ten times its former size. By 1912 the number of employees had increased to 565.

1913—Ford of Canada first started building its own engines thereby creating a new major outlet for Canadian raw materials. Since its introduction five years earlier, the Model "T" engine had already become famous for its simplicity of design and absolute dependability under all conditions.

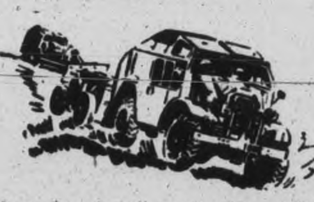
1915—By this time there was a chain of more than 550 Ford dealers and nine Ford Branches across Canada. The Company always believed it owed a debt to the public—that of providing expert service and genuine replacement parts for Ford cars as long as those cars were in operation.

1916—Plant expansion continued as demand increased. The War, 1914-1918, called for added output. In 1916-1917, production reached a new high of 50,000 units as a new branch assembly plan went into operation at Toronto, Montreal, Winnipeg, London and Saint John.

1927—After completely re-tooling the entire plant, Ford of Canada came out with the new Model "A". The car's modern design, power, speed and low cost operation won for it immediate acceptance. Buyers made their selection from several different models with color and upholstery options.

1932—Saw the introduction of the Ford V-8 engine. For the first time, a powerful, smooth, V-type eight-cylinder engine was made available to Canadian motorists in the popular price field. Its economy, simplicity and outstanding performance made it the talk of the automobile world.

1939—70% of all automobiles exported from Canada were built by Ford, more than half of the entire Ford output going abroad. The huge export business, started with the founding of the company was built up in every part of the British Empire with the exception of the British Isles.



1940—Ford of Canada was already producing a large volume of war equipment and heavy shipments were made to many different battlefronts. As early as 1936 the groundwork for the production of military vehicles had been laid in closest co-operation with the Department of National Defence.

1942—The last passenger car for the duration came off the assembly line, climaxing a series of manufacturing curtailments of the previous 12 months. Now, until Victory was won, the Company's huge production was to be still multiplied but strictly confined to war equipment and essential vehicles.

1943—Ford employees had increased to 15,637, double the number prior to wartime. 4,300 Ford employees had gone into the Armed Services. 15,000 blood transfusions had been given at the Ford Clinic. Employees had invested $10,000,000 in Victory Bonds and War Savings Certificates.

1944—Midnight, August 17, the Company's 40th anniversary—and out of its mighty war plant comes a Universal Carrier, the 27,678th of its kind, the 338,978th Military vehicle for World War II, the 1,893,162nd unit produced by Ford of Canada during its forty year history in this Great Dominion.

Premier Drew's Strange Economics

On August 8 Premier George Drew broadcast an address in which he attacked the scheme of federal family allowances, and one of his chief reasons for doing so was that the scheme "takes money from the pockets of the people of Ontario for the special advantage of the province of Quebec". Examined in cold blood this statement has extraordinary implications. Does the Premier really believe that each Canadian province should get out of the Dominion exactly what it puts into it? If so, what earthly use is our Confederation? Surely the idea of the Dominion is to form a strong country by pooling our resources, and by rich provinces assuming some of the financial burdens of the poorer ones? We cannot maintain a Dominion on the cut-throat principle that "him as has, gets".

But as it happens, the Premier is wrong about Quebec's great gains. There are three "rich" provinces in Canada—Ontario, Quebec and British Columbia. They will make the big contributions to family allowances, and they will reap the big benefits. But the other six provinces will get more out of the scheme than they will put into it. If Mr. Drew wants to attack a section of Canada which is thus being carried by Ontario, he had better turn his guns on the Maritimes and the three prairie provinces.

Here is a table in which the federal income taxes, excess profits taxes and inheritance taxes of the main provincial groups are shown, and these figures are taken from the 1943 report of the Minister of National Revenue; beside them are shown the extent of family allowances as set out in official estimates:

	Millions of Dollars Direct Taxes		Family Allowances
Maritimes	$ 51.0	3.7%	$25.0	10%
Quebec	429.0	31.1	80.0	32
Ontario	695.0	50.3	80.0	32
Prairies	87.0	6.3	50.0	20
B.C.	115.0	8.3	15.0	.6
Yukon, etc.	1.0	.3
Totals	$1,378.0	100.0	$250.0	100.0

If any province has a right to complain that it is being badly used, it is British Columbia, which has a small child population.

This table shows plainly that the surplus of taxation drawn from Ontario will not go to Quebec, but to the prairie provinces and the Maritimes. The table gives no regional figures on indirect taxation, but as it usually follows direct taxation in ratio we do not really need them to make clear our point. As for Quebec, it may be seen that Quebec's share of the family allowance money is virtually the same as its contribution to the tax yields.

Why does not Premier Drew raise a rumpus about Ontario money going to the West? Why has he no hard words for the Maritimes? We can only assume that he is following the current political fashion of abusing Quebec for real and for imagined offences indiscriminately; that is to say, he is stirring up race trouble. And why is he doing this? Premier Drew is a man of great intelligence and wide culture, and he undoubtedly knows that racial disturbances are largely manufactured, and have as little basis in fact as his assertion that Quebec is going to take money from Ontario under the family allowances scheme. What is the Premier up to?

Obviously he is trying to make trouble for the Dominion government. Premier Drew, like so many politicians, is a man of dual character. As a man he is one of the best administrators we have had in office in Ontario for a long time: as a politician he is concerned with getting his own party in power at Ottawa, by hook or crook. If he is really sincere in his fulminations against the greed of Quebec he obviously has not taken any trouble to square his statements with plain facts. If he is merely trying to make trouble he has chosen a particularly nasty way of doing it.

The Thorny Path To Friendship

Every statesman of any importance whatever, whether in Britain or the U.S.A., has said on every conceivable occasion that one of the great hopes of lasting peace lies in firm Anglo-American friendship. But the actual establishment of that friendship will be a long and weary task, for a vast amount of irrational fear and suspicion will have to be broken down on both sides. There are still people on both sides of the ocean who, as Mrs. Roosevelt once expressed it, "have never stopped fighting the war of 1812".

Recently our attention was attracted by a reprinted editorial from the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, which was written in a tone of high indignation because Winston Churchill had referred to the American presidential election in his speech at the Lord Mayor's luncheon. The editorial was headed "Churchill The Meddler", and it attributed the most sinister motives to the British Premier. What Mr. Churchill said was this: "This year 1944 is also an election year in the United States". This seems a simple enough remark, the sort of thing which any of us might say at any time. We do not think that many of our American cousins would find any fault with it. But the Pittsburgh paper rushes to say that the election is "strictly an affair that concerns the American people", and continues, "Mr. Churchill no doubt intended to call the attention of the American people to the fact that he would be gratified if they voted right". It then goes on to encourage Anglo-American friendship in these words:

"If it is the 'supreme duty' of Britishers and Americans to preserve 'good-will' for one another, as Mr. Churchill says, then surely one of the best ways of preserving that good-will is for the Prime Minister of England to keep his fingers out of our domestic affairs.

"Mr. Churchill should be satisfied at having gotten us into this war, as he declared to his approving parliament. He should not try to run our internal affairs as well.

"If we are going to perform our supreme duty as Mr. Churchill sees it we ought at least to be allowed to do it in our own American way.

"Therefore in all kindness and consideration we urge Mr. Churchill kindly to mind his own business and not try to run our politics.

"The people of the United States of America are still independent and mentally competent".

We feel nothing but astonishment as we read this, and we are very far from taking it as an expression of representative American opinion. But it does represent an opinion, and a type of thinking, to be found among small but virulent groups both in Britain and the U.S. Anglo-American friendship finds its expression in deeds, but this sort of enmity confines itself to harmful talk. Let us take care that the talk never has an opportunity to hinder the deeds.

The Valour Of Old Men

A story from Konstantin Simonoff, the Russian war reporter, tells us that Leon Blum died last year in the Nazi concentration camp near the city of Lublin; it was one of the worst of the Nazi 'extermination camps', and Simonoff said that Blum, with others, was forced to build the scaffold on which he met his death. When the former socialist Premier of France was asked why he did not escape while it was still possible to do so, he replied, "Maybe I could have, but I decided to share the fate of my people".

That noble answer recalls another. Early in the German occupation of France the Jews in a certain city were waiting in a long line, in pouring rain, to register as members of a hated and inferior race, and to learn what fate their conquerors had prepared for them. A German officer, better educated than most, noticed something familiar about one old man in the queue, and asked his name; he was Henri Bergson. Now the Nazis like to pose as patrons of culture, and so the German officer politely offered to escort the old man to his home, and furthermore, to provide him with a paper which would give him all the privileges of an Aryan. But Bergson refused; he too decided to share the fate of his people. He died soon afterward of bad diet and ill-treatment.

The old socialist was 71; the old philosopher was almost eighty. Both were Jews; both were men of valour. The war will not tell us any tales of individual bravery greater than theirs.

NOTE AND COMMENT

What we really need is a child labour law which will prevent children from working their parents to death.

Where Field Marshal Smuts spoke of "the comity" of nations, our old Borstal pal on the Brantford Expositor quotes him as saying "the comedy" of nations. This, we feel, must be filed under the heading "Inspired Errors".

The Revised Bank Act

By B. T. RICHARDSON

OTTAWA: The banking system of Canada has been scrutinized at length and in detail by members of the House of Commons committee on banking and commerce, since it commenced its historic 1944 investigations on March 21, and a number of important changes have been made by Parliament. These amendments occasioned lively debate in committee, and later in the House, but the major controversy in the banking comittee lay in the issue of control of banking policy as a chief agency of social progress.

Banking inquiries of previous years have marked crucial changes in the policy and structure of our banking system, and in our thinking about money and banking. But none could have felt so keenly a sense of urgency in seeking the true operating principles of our society in a period of transition.

Few Canadians will labour through the 1,700 pages of evidence which measure the industry of such members of the committee as attended faithfully when not engaged in electioneering and other occupations. This material will be suitably bound in imitation leather and entombed upon an obscure shelf of the parliamentary library for curious students of the future to consult and obtain, with compassion, a sense of the intellectual and economic conflicts of our times.

One who glances through the evidence will find that some today believed that the key to progress lay in tinkering with the money system. More scandalized at the thought. Some spoke highly of the banks their thoughts went little beyond that. Some spoke ill of banks and bankers and they, too, had little more to say.

THE belief that banking is crucial to all hopes of an abundant life is one of the prevailing elements of political faith in Canada, judging from the time parliamentarians since Confederation, if one could estimate the total, have spent on it. Good words for bankers, unless accompanied by protestations of personal integrity on the part of the speaker, have been rare in our politics for 25 years, and seekers for truth have been forced to become familiar with the dull papers of prophets and oracles like C. H. Douglas, Maynard Keynes, Irving Fisher, Frederick Soddy, G. G. McGeer, Silvio Gesell, and their countless camp followers, not excluding writers of leading editorials in the Ottawa Citizen and the Western Producer.

Byways of our politics have become strewn with livid quotations torn bodily from literature that ranges from the Old Testament to the speeches of Mackenzie King and last month's issue of the Bank of Nova Scotia monthly review. Monetary debates have become the dumping ground of undigested allusions to usury, robbery, financial sin and the promise of salvation. The latest debate added greatly to this sediment, as one may see by looking at the speech of Mr. McGeer in the House on August 9, and the speech of Mr. Blackmore on the same date.

But one is struck, in reading the 1944 banking debate, that the era in which uplifters scream bloody murder at the sight of a banker, is passing away. Since the last war we have had a period of collectivism in some parts of Europe and other sections of the globe. The techniques and consequences of bank control through public policy need not be taken on faith. The evidence is available.

During that time Canada was never shaken from its course in which progress relied on the free play of national energy with the state on the sidelines interested in curbing abuses. The distrust of governmental tyranny, upon which democratic liberty is founded, has remained strong in Canada. Still no industry in Canada has come to be as tightly controlled and regulated as a part of public policy as banking—unless it is the handling of poisons and explosives.

THE central function of commercial banking, the creation of credits, is tightly controlled by Sec. 59 of the Bank Act, and has been for many years, though not as tightly as since the establishment of the Bank of Canada. This section requires banks to maintain a reserve of not less than five per cent of its deposits, the reserve to consist of Bank of Canada notes or a deposit in the Bank of Canada. Operations of the Bank of Canada, in buying and selling securities, directly govern the size of these reserves, and therefore the scope of lending practiced by the banks.

An attempt by Mr. McGeer to amend Sec. 59 by placing control of bank lending directly under a board consisting of three men—the Prime Minister, the Minister of Finance, and the Governor of the Bank of Canada—was defeated in the final stages of debate, without a recorded vote. Mr. Ilsley said such a scheme "places a virtually impossible task upon a government board."

In extending bank charters for ten years, Parliament approved a series of reforms. Chartered banks will lose finally, by Jan. 1, 1950, the right to issue notes, and this right will be vested entirely in the Bank of Canada. Maximum rate of interest or discount charged by a bank has been lowered from seven to six per cent. Ships and equipment afloat may in future be taken as security for a loan to make ship repairs. Borrowing on the security of seeds and fur-bearing animals was authorized, in an extension of Sec. 88. Guarantees up to ten per cent were provided for banks making loans for the purchase of farm equipment and the making of farm improvements.

Improvements were made in the form of bank statements, and in connection with inside reserves the banks must report to the Minister of National Revenue, as well as to the Minister of Finance, for purposes of examining their tax position. Persons of moderate means will have a better chance of becoming a bank director under the amendment lowering share-subscription qualification to $1,500 in some instances.

THE PUZZLER

From the Shell Magazine, London, comes the following story:—

The works manager at a large factory was a firm believer in the value of "pep" notices, as an incentive to production. One morning two fitters arrived at the factory to find themselves faced with the latest addition to this gallery of verbal energizers, the new notices reading:—

ONE MAN
ONE JOB

This did not seem clear to one of the men, who scratched his head in bewilderment and said to his partner: "Wot the blazes does 'e mean: 'One man, one ruddy job'?"

"Why," said his friend, "it's simple. Don't you see, one ruddy man, one ruddy job!"

"Well," replied the inquirer, "if that's wot 'e means, why the blazes don't 'e say so?"

THE POST-WAR WORLD —By Goldberg

Last Minute Jam In Parliament

(Toronto Telegram)

THE haste with which members of the House of Commons, sweating in the torrid heat of an Ottawa midsummer, are now enacting legislation involving hundreds of millions of dollars is a reflection on Parliament. At the expense of a careful examination of very important bills the members are now attempting to make up for the time they wasted in puerile debates in the early months of the session.

The government itself is the chief culprit for the delay in bringing in its program forecast in the Speech from the Throne, but the private members cannot escape blame. If the members in all the parties had any real grasp of the manner in which public business ought to be conducted they would demand and insist that an end be put to the annual repetition of performances in which the most important legislation of the session is held over until the sweltering summer days arrive.

A comparison of the time spent in debate on the various items on the agenda of the Commons gives an indication of the lack of balance in the work of the session. Owing to the insistence of Prime Minister King that the war cabinet should have a day in mid-week free from House duties the chamber sat only 24 hours a week up to and following the Easter recess. As a consequence of the time then lost it is now sitting morning, noon and night, 48 hours a week.

There has been complete lack of logic in the distribution of time in the various debates.

The House spent 60 hours over a ten-day period in debating the address in reply to the Speech from the Throne and the net result was an engrossed address thanking His Excellency for coming to Parliament Hill and delivering the speech written for him by the Prime Minister. Two days were spent discussing changes in the House rules and no decision was reached, days of debate having taken place on bills of minor importance.

Contrast this futile time-wasting with the unwise haste with which legislation of great importance has been put through the House in recent weeks:

The "baby bonus" legislation, which commits this country to an annual expenditure in perpetuity of $200,000,000 or more, was discussed intermittently over six days. Total debating time devoted to it was 34 hours. Almost half the membership of the House was absent when the principle of the legislation was adopted. Only ten hours debate took place on the $200,000,000 appropriation to place a floor under farm prices. This was legislation which called for the most careful consideration, but it was rammed through in little more than a day.

The scandalous condition in which important legislation is delayed until the closing days of the session and then jammed through in a few hours has been repeated in recent years. Voices have been raised in protest, including Opposition Leader Graydon's, but little heed has been paid to it by the Prime Minister. Handling of the nation's business in this manner calls for the severest denunciation, in order that public opinion may force the government to revise its methods and see that important legislation is introduced at the commencement of the session—not at the end of a session.

An Instinct For Fine Words

KEATS certainly had more of the penetrative and sympathetic imagination which belongs to the poet, of that imagination which identifies itself with the momentary object of its contemplation, than any man of these later days. It is not merely that he has studied the Elizabethans and caught their turn of thought, but that he really sees things with their sovereign eye....To me one of the most interesting aspects of Keats is that in him we have an example of the renaissance going on almost under our own eyes, and that the intellectual ferment was in him kindled by a purely English leaven. Hee had properly no scholarship, any more than Shakespeare had, but like him he assimilated at a touch whatever could serve his purpose. His delicate senses absorbed culture at every pore. Of the self-denial to which he trained himself (unexampled in one so young) the second draft of Hyperion as compared with the first is a conclusive proof. And far indeed is his "Lamia" from the lavish indiscrimination of "Endymion". In his Odes he showed a sense of form and proportion which we seek vainly in almost any other English poet, and some of his sonnets (taking all qualities into consideration) are the most perfect in our language. No doubt there is something tropical and of strange overgrowth in his sudden maturity, but it was maturity nevertheless. Happy the young poet who has the saving fault of exuberance, if he have also the shaping faculty that sooner or later will amend it!

As every young person goes through all the world-old experiences, fancying them something peculiar and personal to himself, so it is with every new generation, whose youth always finds its representatives in its poets. Keats rediscovered the delight and wonder that lay enchanted in the dictionary. Wordsworth revolted at the poetic diction which he found in vogue, but his own language rarely rises above it, except when it is upborne by the thought. Keats had an instinct for fine words, which are in themselves pictures and ideas, and had more of the power of poetic expression than any modern English poet. And by poetic expression I do not mean merely a vividness in particulars, but the right feeling which heightens or subdues a passage or a whole poem to the proper tone, and gives entireness to the effect. There is a great deal more than is commonly supposed in this choice of words. Men's thoughts and opinions are in a great degree vassals of him who invents a new phrase or reapplies an old epithet. The thought or feeling a thousand times repeated becomes his at last who utters it best. This power of language is veiled in the old legends which make the invisible powers the servants of some word. As soon as we have discovered the word for our joy or sorrow we are no longer its serfs, but its words.—From "Among My Books" by James Russell Lowell.

Letter To The Editor

TOWNSHIP CLERK OF CAVAN

Sir,—Having read with interest from a recent issue of the Peterborough Examiner, the proceedings of Cavan council July meeting of which the main issue of that meeting was the appointment of a township clerk and they are reported to have appointed a hardware merchant of good character and ability, a resident of Millbrook. Since that meeting I have discussed this appointment with a number of ratepayers and some individuals who were present at that meeting and we are at a loss to know what this man had over the other two applicants, viz.:

Applicant No. 1—

A descendant of a pioneer family of Cavan township whose father had served in the municipality and he himself had served as councillor, Deputy Reeve, and Reeve, and retired honourably, is a ratepayer, resident and has education and platform ability surpassed by few.

Applicant No. 2—

A descendant of a pioneer family in Cavan township, who has served as councillor of the municipality, who at the request of the present council carried on successfully the duties of the township clerk due to the illness of the regular clerk now deceased, has been resident and ratepayer all his life. Who in World War I enlisted, fought overseas, wounded and honourably discharged, who during his short term of office proved his ability to fill the position.

The ratepayers of Cavan township would like to know:

1—Why this position should be given to a non-resident and non-ratepayer?

2—Why not a man acquainted with the municipality?

3—Why not a man with agricultural knowledge and viewpoint?

4—Why not a returned soldier who above all else should receive consideration?

5—Why should this appointment be made behind closed doors as I am informed all visitors and officials were cleared from the council chamber?

Respectfully yours,
A TAXPAYER AND RESIDENT.

A Bible Message

Then came to Jesus scribes and Pharisees, which were of Jerusalem, saying, Why do thy disciples transgress the tradition of the elders? for they wash not their hands when they eat bread. But he answered and said unto them, Why do ye also transgress the commandment of God by your tradition?....

And he called the multitude, and said unto them, Hear, and understand: not that which goeth into the mouth defileth a man: but that which cometh out of the mouth, this defileth a man.... Then answered Peter and said unto him, Declare unto us this parable.

And Jesus said, Are ye also yet without understanding .... For out of the heart proceed evil thoughts, murders, adulteries, fornications, thefts, false witness, blasphemies: these are the things which defile a man. (Matt. 15: 1-3, 10, 11, 15, 16, 19 20.)

Draw nigh to God, and he will draw nigh to you. Cleanse your hands, ye sinners; and purify your hearts, ye double minded.... Humble yourselves in the sight of the Lord, and he shall lift you up. (James 4: 8, 10.)

Unconsidered Trifles

A wealthy woman asked an assistant in the wool department of a big shop for instructions on how to make a dog's sweater.

"How big is the dog?" asked the salesgirl. The woman's illustrations were not very helpful.

"Perhaps you'd better bring the dog in," suggested the girl behind the counter.

"Oh, I can't do that," said the customer. "It's to be a surprise for him."

The famous actor John Drew had shaved off his moustache to play a part and the result was that his appearance was completely different. Shortly afterwards he met Max Beerbohm in the vestibule of a London theatre and could not remember who Beerbohm was. Beerbohm had the better memory.

"Oh, Mr. Drew," he said. "I'm afraid you don't know me without your moustache."

A very small country boy was in New York for the first time. Taking an elevator to the top of a skyscraper, the child and his father had shot up thirty stories at breath-taking speed, when the little lad asked, timidly:—

"Daddy, does God know we're coming?"

The two men had been partners in business for many, many years. But now the partnership was about to be dissolved, for one of the two lay dying.

The sick man called his partner to his bedside.

"I know I haven't much longer to live, old man," he said. "But before I go I've got a confession I must make. During our years in business together I've swindled you out of thousands of pounds. Will you for give me?"

"That's all right," said the other, cheerfully. "Don't let it worry you. I poisoned you."

Big Job Ahead

Those people who talk glibly of mass unemployment and glutted markets after this war have not the slightest conception of the tremendous rebuilding task which awaits the world. More than half of Europe will have to be reconstructed.

Canada and the United States, with their industrial productive capacity unimpaired, must play a major role in that undertaking.—Financial Post.

No Bean Soup!

Where is the navy bean soup of yesteryear? Where, in a great rich, luxurous city that provides every delicacy known to the human fancy, can navy bean soup be had? We don't know. We wish we did. Still less do we know why, in this day of perfect co-ordination among the military services, the soup of the navy bean should be denied to our gallant doughboys of the Army.—New York Times.

Enduring Fame

Even so, Miss West may take heart, for her place in history is secure. Inflated life jackets will surely continue to bear her name when the names of the critics who panned her are long forgotten.—NEA Service (Cleveland).

Preparations Are Going Ahead For Dominion-Provincial Meet

OTTAWA, Aug. 17 (CP)—Believed already fairly well advanced, plans are still going forward for the proposed Dominion-provincial conference which will discuss a re-arrangement of financial and other relations between the Federal Government and the provinces.

It was understood that Prime Minister Mackenzie King's decision to postpone the meeting until after the next Federal election will have no effect on preparations being made.

Meantime, amazement at Mr. King's decision, announced in the Commons Monday night, was expressed yesterday by Ontario Treasurer L. M. Frost, who arrived in Ottawa yesterday expecting, he said, to meet Federal officials in connection with the conference.

While Mr. King said in his announcement that he had postponed the meeting because he felt the needed co-operation would not be forthcoming until after the election, Mr. Frost said the Ontario government had provided the "fullest" co-operation and that his visit here was "in fact to provide even closer co-operation."

"We are not looking at this from a political standpoint," Mr. Frost said. "We view the whole matter from a business standpoint. But above all, we are concerned with the interests of our people. We have great plans for the interests of our people and as soon as possible we want to get our privileges back — the privileges we ceded the central government to help win the war."

There was no government comment on Mr. Frost's remarks.

At Regina the decision to delay the conference won the commendation of Premier T. C. Douglas of Saskatchewan yesterday.

Supports Premier

While I am naturally anxious to see the conference held as soon as possible," Mr. Douglas said, "nevertheless, I think the prime minister is probably correct in postponing the conference until after the elections. Whatever Federal government attends the meeting should be in a position to carry out commitments made at the conference.")

Work of drawing up an agenda for the conference and assembling statistical and other information is in the hands of D. A. Skelton, an official of the Bank of Canada. He has been assisted by provincial treasury officials from all provinces except Ontario.

One of the big pre-conference preparation jobs is to bring up-to-date the information collected by the pre-war Royal Commission which toured Canada studying Dominion-provincial relations.

The commission report included a broad study of the financial resources of the provinces in relation to their constitutional responsibilities. War conditions, however, have changed the picture considerably and alterations will be necessary.

FIREBOATS BATTLED BLAZE—Fireboats and tugs are hurling streams of water into the roaring inferno that is eating up tons of vital war equipment at Pier 4, Hoboken, N.J. More than 100 firemen and coastguard men were injured battling the blaze which destroyed the 1,100-foot pier, engulfed two lighters and three barges, causing damage estimated at between $2,500,000 and $4,000,000. The fire began with a series of explosions that rocked the waterfront.

Minister Denies Story In Maple Leaf

TORONTO, August 17 —(CP) — Rev. George N. Luxton, rector of Grace Church On-the-Hill in Toronto and recently appointed Dean of Huron, said Wednesday statements he made in June to Toronto Synod of the Church of England in Canada about venereal disease in armed forces were incorrectly interpreted in the Maple Leaf, newspaper published for Canadian forces in Italy.

Dean Luxton was quoted in Maple Leaf as having said that the attitude of some medical officers in the services on venereal disease was "we know you can't be good but be careful." He was quoted also as having said prophylatics were distributed in some units and that "we should insist in Christian idealism among medical officers instead of peddling this unsavory attitude through the forces."

A letter to the Dean from Col. C H. Playfair of the R. C. A. M. C. asked for a retraction on behalf of army medical officers. This letter was printed in Maple Leaf. Dean Luxton, now on holidays at Craigie Lea, Ont., sent to the Canadian Press a statement on the question along with his reply to the letter from Col. Playfair who comes from Hamilton.

In his statement, Dean Luxton recalled that in his Synod speech he expressed great admiration for the work of medical officers are doing with the men and added:

"It is a pity that the criticism of a few of their number who are beginning a new and deplorable procedure should have been so rewritten in the Maple Leaf report that it is made to read as a general criticism of the whole group for doing what every sensible man would conceive to be their plain duty. I regret deeply that the medical officers have been distressed by such a message of discourtesy and disrespect and I am eager to dissociate myself from it."

The Maple Leaf account "summarized out of it the whole point I was trying to make," said Dean Luxton's letter to Col. Playfair.

"Of course a medical officer must protect his men from venereal disease. The established practice of providing prophylactic materials to men who apply for them and of letting all the men know they are available is entirely reasonable and to be commended by all of us.

"The point that I made in my Synod speech .... was that in some of our Canadian camps the medical officers have been distributing automatically to men about to go on leave these same materials, the clear implication being that a serviceman on leave normally need these materials... our chaplains, faced with this situation, have spoken to me of their frustration in knowing that this practice was being followed....

"I hope that you will investigate this situation in each of the services and initiate steps to discontinue the practice."

Tank Expert Resigns From British Army

LONDON, Aug. 17—(CP) —The British army has lost one of its best-known tank experts in the retirement of Lt.-Gen. Sir Giffard Le Quesne Martel, an able field and staff officer and an inventive genius rolled into one.

Gen. Martel, who commanded the 50th (Northumbrian) division in France in 1940, was appointed commander of the Royal Armored Corps when the British forces left the continent and his successful recreation of the armored forces was responsible in no small measure for later vitories in North Africa, Italy and Normandy.

French Troops Hail Invasion

By BILL BOSS
Canadian Press War Correspondent

WITH THE 8TH ARMY IN ITALY, Aug. 17 (CP Cable)——News of the Allied South France invasion produced no surprise among Canadian troops in Italy because French troops have been so enthused over the prospect for months past that they have been inviting all and sundry, including Germans, to come along.

The new blow was something less than an open secret.

Reports from Ottawa that the Canadian Army might reunite in France had caused some speculation about the possibility of Canadians participating in the landings and fighting through to effect a junction with Canadian troops in Northwest France but obviously that now is off the books.

Canadian correspondents on the new invasion included Doug How of The Canadian Press, C. M. A. Malkin, Winnipeg Free Press, and Peter Sturzberg, CBC. Sgt. Howard Rutsey of Toronto and Cpl. Joe Graves, both reporters for the Maple Leaf, Canadian Army newspaper, also went along.

Over-Optimistic

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 17 — (AP).—Signs of the times is one in the display window of Jeweler John M. Roberts reading: "Service star pins—one-half price." Roberts optimistically said: "Yes I feel the war is nearly over. It's time to get rid of them."

NEW YORK, Aug. 17—(AP) — The Tokyo radio announced that Premier Kuniaki Koiso's cabinet met to-day in extraordinary session to hear a report by Yonezo Maeda, Minister of Transportation and Communications, on shipment of planes and plane parts.

The broadcast was recorded by the Federal Communications Commission.

Enemy Missing As Troops Land

ROME, Aug. 17 (AP)—Allied landing craft carried French and American troops ashore in southern France on both sides of Frejus, 33 miles southwest of Nice, without any sign of enemy opposition as far as could be ascertained from the air, returning airmen said today.

Lieut. Robert Kimball of Cincinnati, a bombardier, reported his formation's target was the Frejus road. Landing craft were aiming for shore on both sides while big warships pumped shells into the town, he said.

The Mediterranean Allied air force yesterday broke all previous records for sorties flown in its operations supporting the invasion of southern France, an air force announcement said.

Officials May Abolish Jr. Hockey Rule

TORONTO, August 17 —(CP) — Officers of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association met here last night and unanimously decided to recommend to the executive that the clause in the Association's rules which allow junior branch champions to strengthen with four players at the end of the season be deleted.

If this recommendation is approved by the executive, the nine branch presidents, branch junior champions will not be allowed to add four players from other clubs to their roster as they enter the inter-branch playdowns leading to the Memorial Cup, President Frank Sargeant of Port Arthur explained.

The officers also decided to recommend that the Association's injury replacement clause be deleted except with reference to goalkeepers. In recent years, C. A. H. A. clubs have been able to obtain replacements for any injured players. However, if the executive approves only goalies can be replaced in future and such injured goalies will have to produce medical certificates to prove they are unable to finsh out the season.

Mr. Sargeant said he and other Association officers will meet National League directors tomorrow to discuss rules and N. H. L.-C. A. H. A. relations.

To eliminate punch-drunk or deteriorated boxers from the ring, President Abe J. Greene of the National Boxing Association yesterday proposed at his Washington, D.C., office a system of periodic psychiatric and medical examinations for fighters. He urged that managers be made responsible for reporting a boxer when there are indications of mental or physical trouble. Greene's statement followed the recent case of Len Franklin who was killed in a New Jersey bout following a routine pre-fight examination.

The Sports Round-Up

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.
Associated Press Staff Writer

NEW YORK, Aug. 17 (AP)—Soldier ball players in the Salt Lake City territory can't play under their own names for other than their camp teams, but nobody has objected to their using "flags" in semi-pro games.... Thus Frank Lamanna (Braves) has become "Werner" on special occasions and Clarence (Hooks) Iott, San Antonio and Browns, has appeared as "Hooks," "Winner" and "Stewart."....Before playing its first intercollegiate football game in 1881, the University of Kentucky had to agree not to use players more than 17 years old. How times haven't changed!

Today's guest star:

Don Donaghey, Philadelphia Evening Bulletin: "Rather than have no football at all, Princeton will compete 'informally' this year. Could that mean that instead of losing their pants each Saturday, the Tigers just won't wear any?"

One-minute sports page:

San Francisco's Vic Picetti, who played in the All American boys baseball game here, has had one bona-fide $10,000 offer from a major league club and talked to so many scouts he can't remember all of them.... Jimmy McDaniels, who gets a Garden main-bout shot tomorrow, worked in a brewery for a few months after his graduation from high school but quit to concentrate on boxing. That reverses the more usual course of giving up boxing to concentrate on breweries.

20 Pairs Left In Lawn Bowling

TORONTO, Aug. 17 — (CP) — Twenty pairs were left today to fight it out for the Townsend-Clark Trophy, emblematic of the doubles championship of the annual tournament of the Ontario Lawn Bowling Association now being staged here.

The 20 were all that remained of 158 pairs who had entered the first round of the event yesterday morning. And among those eliminated was last 'ear's doubles championship pair, C. A. Fage and Gordon Fleming of West Toronto.

Those eliminated in play for the premier doubles trophy entered the Birks-Ellis Ryrie competition and if defeated in that secondary event they continued to play in two consolation groups. Ply in the Birks-Ellis-Ryrie trophy event passed the second round last night.

Tournament officials are hoping to complete all doubles play today leaving tomorrow, the tournament's final day, for singles.

Also, two rinks competitions remain to be disposed of today—for the Ontario trophy and the Toronto trophy—both of which were left not completed Tuesday night when play in the Ontario trophy entered the final round and the Toronto trophy play reached the quarter-final stage.

Westclox Girls Take First Game Of Playoffs From Aircraft

Behind 3-hit pitching by Isobel Bullock, Westclox won the first game of the senior play-offs from Aircraft Wednesday evening at Ashburnham Bowl 2 to 1. Aircraft chased in one run in their section of the 9th inning, to keep the Westclox outfit from giving them a complete white-washing.

Westclox gained their first run in the third frame, when Viola McLean scored on a single into left field by Majorie Hawthorne. Another run came in the seventh, when Nona Whetung scored on a hit by Marjorie Hawthone. The Aircrafters only counter was effected as Norma Strickland singled into left centre field to score Margaret Batley, who had been stealing bases to third.

Watrous Finds Tax Slashes Golf Winnings

TORONTO, August 17 —By the time Al Watrous had returned to his Oakland Hills Golf Club at Birmingham, Mich., his Maple Leaf Open prize-winning cheque had melted from an original $3,000 in Canadian funds to $2,295 in U. S. currency.

As soon as Watrous picked up the $3,000 first-prize cheque from President L. E. Messinger of Scarboro Golf Club the slicing process was under way.

Johnny Canuck, as represented by Dominion income tax authorities, [illegible]ied 15 per cent of the $3,000 from the Watrous spoils, leaving him $2,550.

Since you can't buy groceries and clothing at Birmingham, Michigan, for a wife, three daughters and two sons with Canadian currency without taking the discount treatment, it cost Al 10 per cent of his $2,500 to convert his Canadian bundle into U.S. greenbacks. That was another $255 slice, leaving $2,295.

Despite the $705 chop from the original $3,000 purse, Watrous said he wasn't mad at anyody.

Toronto Sweeps Twin Bill At Jersey City

(By Associated Press).

If Buffalo Bisons' current display of power is any indication of the future, the International League play-offs may well be thrown into chaos, with the Herd coming out on top.

For the fourth straight game the Bisons unleashed a vicious 22-hit attack as they smothered Syracuse, 11-6, last night. Big Eddie Kobesky led the offensive with four hits, one of them his 21st home run.

Meanwhile, Newark Bears lost a chance to climb into a tie for the lead as Rochester shaded them, 3-2. Joe Page started and had to be relieved by Ed Marleau, as Jack Burman pushed over the winning runs in the eighth with a single.

Toronto Maple Leafs swept their second consecutive double-header from Jersey City, 1-0 and 11-5. The high spot was a one-hitter by Leaf pitcher Harry Jordon in the opener, with Whitey Lookman singling for the Jersies in the fifth.

The nighcap was featured by an eight-run first inning for the Leafs. The Little Giants obliged with four errors in that frame, as the Leafs struck seven of their 15 hits. Danny Gardella continued his potent stickwork with a homer for the Giants in the fifth.

Called-Up Again

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 17 — (AP) — Film acton Alan Ladd, who served 10 months in Khaki before receiving a medical discharge last October and who later was classified 1-A, was notified by his draft board today to report for army duty Sept. 4.

Athletics May Clip Browns On Last Lap

By JACK HAND,
Associated Press Sport Writer.

Mr. Baseball from Philadelphia may have the last say in the American League pennant race, although Connie Mack's Athletics today were buried in the bottom half of the standings, he watched the A's put a 4-2 crimp in the Browns last night in the opener of a four-frame series. St. Louis boasted only a 9-7 season edge in games with Philadelphia with six to go.

Russ Christopher stopped the Brownies last night for the second time in a row and his fifth straight victory at Jack Kramer's expense. The Brownies' 6½-game lead was not affected.

Detroit and New York closed in on second-place Boston. The Tigers took the Red Sox, 4-2, on Rudy York's 12th homer with two on in the seventh. The blow spoiled the first big league start of rookie Rex Cecil from San Diego who stepped out of a California plane to gain a relief decision over St. Louis last Sunday.

New York moved to within a game of second and 7½ of St. Louis on a dramatic ninth-inning homer by Bud Metheny with two on that doomed Cleveland, 11-8. Ed Lopaz hurled Chicago to a 7-2 victory over Washington although Johnny Niggeling fanned 11 in eight innings for the losers.

In the National, St. Louis set a modern record for reaching win no. 80 on the earliest date by shutting out New York Giants 5-0.

Pittsburgh took sole possession of second place when rain washed out its game after two innings and Cincinnati fell before Brooklyn's Curt Davis, 3-1, snapping the Dodgers' five-game losing streak.

Bill Nicholson became the first National Leaguer and third big leaguer to hit two grand slam homers this season when he walloped No. 27 with the sacks loaded as Chicago thumped Boston, 11-3.

McSpaden And Nelson Score Again

SPOKANE, Wash., Aug. 17. — (AP).—Favorites, led by the tournament hotshots, Harold McSpaden of Philadelphia and Byron Nelson Toledo, O., crashed through to one-sided victories Wednesday in 36-hole first-round matches of the 1944 United States Professional Golfers' Association golf championship.

McSpaden flashed the most sizzling golf of the round in overwhelming Bruce Coltart, Absecon, N.J., 7 and 5. The Philadelphian tossed a five under-par 67 at Coltart to lead 4 up at the 18th. Coltart took a 71. McSpaden continued his brilliant play with a third-nine 33 against his rival's 35, where he stood 6 up.

Nelson, the No. 1 pretournament choice and medalist with a 36-hole qualifying total of 138, took the measure of Mike de Massey, San Jose, Cal., 5 and 4, and he finished three under par for the day. On the first 18 he carded his third successive 69 for the tournament, and held a 5-up lead at half-way station, He was 4 up at the 27th.

The United States Open duration champion, Craig Wood of Mamaroneck, N.B., breezed in with a 5-and-4 decision over Jimmy Dangelo, Muskogee, Okla., but a former national open kingpin, Tony Manero, Greenwich, Conn., had a tougher struggle.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By SYD THOMAS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO, August 17 — (CP).— Compared with the United States, Canada has been considerably behind the times as far as High School athletics are concerned. Since the war especially, organized inter-school sport programs have become scarcer than ever in Canada, with transportation problems and enlistments of the upper class athletics taking their toll.

Sport is big business in United States High Schools, with well-equipped gyms and trained physical directors the rule, whereas in Canada things are taken more casually. Except for a few of the larger cities where full-scale programs can be readily organized, High School sport always has been on a haphazard scale. Not that there are not inter-city leagues, and provincial championships competed for, but as far as full-fledged physical programs are concerned, it's a sad case.

With the emphasis now being laid on national physical fitness and organized athletics, it would seem that High Schools would be a good place to start. After all, the High School youngsters will provide a good groundwork for that future happy physical state that is being given such prominence.

It's appalling:

While the subject of national physical fitness, Maj. Ian Eisenhardt, national director, has a word of cheer and a ray of hope for the middle-aged and others not especially inclined to athletics who were afraid they might be pushed into violant programs of chinnings and push-ups. The major doesn't opprove of sudden, violent physical purges of that nature. In an address at Montreal he told the story of a fortyish but fit lad of his acquaintance. Asked if he took much exercise to keep in trim, he explained the secret of his success thus: "I get all the exercise I need acting as pall-bearer at the funerals of my friends who take too much exercise."

Incidentally:

There is no little heated discussion around Toronto over the action of the services forming their own football league this fall. When Toronto Navy dropped out of the Ontario Rugby Football Union's five-team loop, the other clubs did not take to it too kindly, but they'll carry on just the same.... Vancouver baseball fans will have a stake in the new frigate H.M.C.S. Capilano—named after a storied river, chief community in coast history. Proceeds of an exhibition game at Capilano Stadium will be turned over to the ship's comforts fund.

Coastal Doors Unlocked By Commandos

By GEORGE TUCKER,
Associated Press War Correspondent
Distributed by The Canadian Press.

ABOARD ADMIRAL LYAL DAVIDSON'S FLAGSHIP, August 16—(Delayed)—(AP)— The navy got 'em here but it was the commandos who unlocked the door.

Under protection of booming naval guns, tens of thousand of American and French troops toured across the beaches of Southern France along 40 miles of front today but only after desperate bands of troops had slipped ashore six hours before, scaled almost unscalable cliffs and overwhelmed the crews of formidable coastal batteries so that troop transports could approach the jumping-off point with minimum danger.

Silenced All Guns.

The plan was so imaginative in conception and daring in execution it was originally ruled out by the navy as being impossible, but the army insisted it could be done and tough ranger-commando type boys made good by capturing the islands of Levant and Port Cross just off the mainland and silencing all guns before daybreak.

While this heavy cruiser and scores of other cruisers, battleships and destroyers of the Allied navies, including one tiny Greek destroyer, manoeuvred four giant convoys into position, the troops slipped into small boats and were escorted into a maze of rocky inlets by a torpedo boat floatilla led by Lieut. Gilbert Reid of Kalamazoo, Mich.

"Well get anybody ashore that wants to go ashore," the big blond skipper said. The first wave hit the beach at 12:30 a.m. and marked the landing area with signal light. By 1:30 succeeding waves were clambering up the cliffs and from that moment it was a matter of waiting until they signalled the guns were silenced.

Like dark blurs in an inky sea we could see the outlines of warships as they patrolled lanes. Suddenly gunfire broke out off our port and twin tongues of flame leaped across the water. It was a destroyer.

A message from the destroyer said she had been chasing a ship which refused to identify herself. The destroyer brought her guns to bear on the fleeing target and scored a direct hit with the first salvo. The enemy tanker leaped into flame and became an inferno which quickly lit up the summer sea before she sank.

The same destroyer soon brought her guns to bear on another enemy target and after a brief interval signalled: "Target dead in water. Crew abandoning ship."

From time to time flares or star shells burst in the sky but no enemy craft came near us and no shells from land-based batteries fell in our vicinity. In fact it was too easy, we simply couldn't believe it.

CANADIANS BLAST ENEMY U-BOAT — These smiling members of a crack R.C.A.F. squadron stationed in Iceland, sighted and attacked an German U-boat after a gun duel in which they pitted a pair of light calibre machine guns against the enemy's cannon . . . and won. The Canadian lads were engaged in a routine flight, gathering "gen" on the weather when they spotted the German submarine. After a perfect straddle of depth charges had been dropped, only wreckage and acres of oil marked the place where the sub had been. From Left to Right they are: Flight Sergeant Earl Tilander, wireless-air-gunner, 18 Rhyl Ave., Toronto; Flying Officer Bert Hunter, co-pilot, Langley, B.C.; Flying Officer Tommy Cooke, D.F.C., pilot, Clinton, Ont., and Dauphin, Man.; Warrant Officer G. McMacken, who manned the aircraft's machine guns, 290 Furby street, Winnipeg; Flight Lieut. Eric Wisken, nacigator, Island Falls, Ont., and Flying Officer Peter Ficek, wireless air gunner, Fort William. (RCAF Photo)

Cardinal Sends Canada Thanks

By BILL BOSS
Canadian Press War Correspondent

FLORENCE, Aug. 17 (CP Cable — A message to the "noble and valorous people of Canada" and expressing thanks to them for sending their sons to liberate Italy has been issued by Elia Darindal Della Costa, Archbishop of Florence.

"Canada is a country of special interest for me," the Cardinal said today in an interview. He said he hoped Canada and the Allies would help Italy to re-establish herself both materially and in the old place in their friendship.

His interview was granted in a study less than a mile away from German machine-gun positions. Armed Partisans guarded the entrnace to the Cardinal's palace and elsewhere other patriots were making a final check to ensure what the area was entirely free from snipers.

The Cardinal said he was a friend of Cardinal Villeneuve of Quebec. Both were nominated to the College of Cardinals at the same time and received their red hats from Pope Pius XI in the same ceremony at St. Peter's.

Prisoners Sing Marching Along

By MAURICE DESJARDINS
Canadian Press War Correspondent

ON THE FALAISE ROAD, Aug. 17 — (CP Cable) —There is a dusty drama of defeat along this road to-day. Hundreds of German prisoners are being marched northward on tank-made tracks running parallel to the Falaise road.

Many are singing. It's like a scene from a newsreel. Photographer Larry Earl of the Montreal Standard, runs ahead of the file taking several shots.

One prisoner seems happier than the rest. He shouts "Vive La France! Vive La France"; he doesn't want to appear narrow about the thing, so then he adds "Vive Toute Le Mond! Vive Tout Le Mond!" (Long Live Everybody.)

Later we stop for tea at a Polish battalion headquarters and see a strange sight. A Polish despatch rider is keeping close watch over nine newly-taken prisoners, but he could lay his Sten gun aside for there is no fight left in these dirty soldiers he is guarding.

Only two of the line are Germans —unsmiling, 'teen-aged. The others are five Poles and two Russians. One Russian says he'd like to fight with the British against the Germans.

New Brunswick Forest Fire Wipes Out 72 Residences

MINTO, N.B., Aug. 16 (CP)—Almost surrounded by forest fires since last Saturday afternoon, Minto residents and other volunteer crews prayed for rain Wednesday, while fighting to avert damage following destruction of 72 homes in residential districts outside the town limits. More than 300 women and children have been evacuated from danger areas.

Starting at 2 p.m. Saturday near Ripples Station, the fire roared along at a two-mile-an-hour clip until it reached the residential section south of Minto at 8 o'clock that night. Since then, flames ate their way around two sides of the town. Shifting wind confused attempts to fight the fire along any particular front.

Early today the chief exit from Minto was northward toward Chipman although, with caution, it was possible also to leave by the highway to Fredericton.

More than 300 men and boys have volunteered as fire-fighters and a large amount of equipment has been rushed to the district but more crews and more equipment were needed.

The loss to date, in addition to dwellings, include coal mine shafts of the Miramichi Lumber Company, Harvey Welton Company, E. S. Crawford and the Avon Coal Company, mining and lumbering equipment, and about 25 square miles of forest, including valuable timber. All buildings in Minto proper have escaped damage so far. No estimate of the financial loss has been made.

Most heavily hit was the Avon Coal Company property at Rothewell, where 37 homes were destroyed as well as the shaft, ramps and store houses.

Most of the evacuated women and children are sheltered in the Minto Consolidated School building. Others have been given quarters in the tabernacle at Hardwood Ridge and the Roman Catholic Church at North Minto.

A serious fire also continued to burn north of Moncton, in the Bantalor and Canaan-coal branch district, where railway property has been destroyed and residents evacuated.

SHOWS BOYS UP.

At the high diving tower at Inverlea on Wednesday evening a little girl of about 9 years of age made the older swimmers feel a bit ashamed of themselves as without the slightest hesitation she continually plunged from the top shelf of the tower into the water. Several boys, a bit doubtful about taking the drop, could be heard being chided with "that little girl did it."

CAR DAMAGED.

After a garbage collection wagon overturned in the city yard, while a teamster was turning it around, the horses ran away, and a car owned by James McDonald, Westcott street, was damaged. The left rear and left front bumpers, the spare tire carrier, and the rear portion of the car were damaged. The horses ran east on Townsend, then turned south on George street.

CROWDED SPOT

With the warm evenings experienced during the past week, Inverlea Park has taken on the appearance of Grand Central station, with the crowds of people gathering there seeking relief from the heat The benches bordering the river are always occupied, and many people have started to bring suppers down to the Park, and stay-over for the evening. Tre river itself at Inverlea is also well filled at most times, and late at night, many people coming off various swing shifts take advantage of the cool waters, while in the morning, workers finishing the graveyard shift also like to "go in for a dip."

MORE FLIES.

Another reason for hot weather-haters to grouse is that it has increased the fly population greatly. It's a fact that the hot weather is just what the nasty little flies love, because it helps them greatly to hatch their eggs.

BANK CLEARINGS

Bank clearings in Peterborough for the past week ending to-day again passed the million dollar mark when $1,011,746. was reported by the secretary of the Clearing House.

TWO WOUNDED

Gnr. Wallace George Simpkins, R.C.A., of Lindsay has been wounded, today's casualty list reveals. He is the grandson of Mrs. Clara Ryall, R.R. No. 2, Lindsay. Also reported wounded is Pte. Edward George Trembley, son of Mrs. Conel Trembley of Coe Hill.

NOT THE SAME

The Reginald Whitehead mentioned in Wednesday's police court news is not the Reginald Whitehead who works at the C.G.E., and lives at 174 Lansdowne street.

NO POLICE COURT

There was no session of the police court today, due to business being skimpy for the local force during the night, and the magistrate is sitting in court in Haliburton.

MORE CANOES

An increase in popularity of the canoe is indicated by the number of canoes on the Otonabee River. During the past two nights, canoes were in a particularly great number along the river and in Little Lake.

BICYCLE DAMAGED.

A bicycle parked on Charlotte street at the curb was damaged Tuesday when a car, driven by the son of Ralph Adamson, R.R. 2, Keene, who was with his mother, ran over it. The bicycle was owned by Samuel Murphy, 548 Elm street. Both occupants of the car said they did not see the bicycle.

Uptown Recreation Centre Changed To Charlotte Street

As an investment in facilities and accommodation for men returning from the war, especially as an adjunct of provisions during the period of rehabilitation, the uptown recreation centre in the east George street block, north of Simcoe street, will be transferred to the vicinity of Charlotte and Aylmer streets, with additional hostel quarters for thirty to forty men.

The property that has been rented is on the north side of Charlotte street and comprises the former wine shop premises which were at one time used as the Empire Theatre; the adjoining laundry and the entire second floor rooms and apartments, extending to the corner.

"We expect to have the renovation and remodelling completed by the first of October," Captain Velma Graham, Salvation Army Auxiliary supervisor for the uptown area in Peterborough, informed the Examiner to-day. "One reason for the change in location of the recreational facilities is that it has always been felt preferable to have such quarters on the ground floor, if possible, instead of being on a second story with increased hazard of fire.

In addition, the period of rehabilitation is approaching. Men will be arriving here on their way home, and it has been felt that we should have adequate accommodation for them.

More Activities.

In the former theatre, on the ground floor, there will be recreation rooms ,including lounge, stage, dressing rooms, and equipment for motion pictures. The upper part of the building that was used as the gallery of the theatre will be converted into a lounge for women, such as the C.W.A.C. and the assisting hostesses.

There will also be a library and writing room in the central building. The laundry will be thoroughly renovated and will be used as a snack bar and kitchen."

Work Underway.

Captain Graham said that the work was now in progress, "and we think we shall have here a recreational centre which will receive general approval and will be a comfort to the men of the services during thier week-end leaves, and later when the war is over and they are on their way out and home."

The Salvation Army assumed recreational undertaking for the men in uniform at the request of the Kiwanis Club in the beginning when that kind of accommodation was originally projected. Then, the work was carried on under the Army's Red Shield auxiliary services department.

The Dominion government assumed the main auxiliary services overseas and at home, and in the changes that are being made in the Peterborough recreational centre the government will bear the costs, but the Salvation Army continues in its assignment as supervising this centre.

Kiwanis Carnival Plans Completed

Two nights of fun and entertainment will be presented by the Kiwanis Club this Friday and Saturday, and the experiences of many old members are being joined with a number of novel ideas by newcomers to the club, to bring to Peterborough people the finest Carnival ever presented by this well-known service organization.

Outstanding feature of the Carnival will be the presentation on Friday night of Captain Jack Young of Hollywood, famous for his representation of President Roosevelt in a number of motion picture hits including "This is the Army," "Woodrow Wilson," "Mission to Moscow," and "Yankee Doodle Dandy."

Captain Young will be introduced to the public by His Worship Mayor James Hamilton at 8.30 p.m. and he re-enact his role from "Yankee Doodle Dandy." Playing opposite Capt. Jack Young, will be Dr. Cliff McKee, enacting the part of George M. Cohan. Dr. McKee has put in a great deal of work on behalf of the Carnival, assuming the chairmanship of the general committee in addition to his regular club duties as director of music and performances.

The draw for the Dodge Tudor Sedan will take place on Saturday evening. All reports indicate a very large sale of tickets on the car and bicycle, the latter to be drawn for on Friday evening and cub members look for a bumper crowd to be present when the draw for the car is made at 11 p.m. Saturday.

The Carnival committee has been fortunate in assembling a fine array of booth prizes, including wool blankets, towels, poultry, fruit, bacon and eggs.

Even the smallest child has not been overlooked in the Club's desire to present the best in entertainment. Live ponies and a miniature merry-go-round will be on the grounds to provide rides at nominal rates, for the youngsters.

This will be Peterborough's annual opportunity to boost the Kiwanis Club in their work on behalf of under-privileged children and the local company of Sea Cadets.

Warsaw Children Aid Victims Of Robot Bombs

Time and opportunity waits for no man, so it is a fine thing to see young children take advantage of the leisure that school holidays afford, and the opportunity that the ill effects of war presents, to do something on behalf of the victims of bomb attacks on Britain.

This year there seems to be a little more widespread interest in the needs of those afflicted than that which prevailed at the same period of last year, itself an indication that they are thinking in terms of more ofr others nd less for self, unwittingly building in themselves a much stronger character of citizenship, which can hardly fail to be reflected in further good in their later years.

For the second time in a short while, this column on behalf of the Peterborough and District British War Victims Fund, is able to report on the activities of young children from the district outside of the city, this time the story concerns three young girls at Warsaw, who sold homemade cooking and cut flowers at a store in that place, doing their bit that other people less fortunate than themselves, might have some help in their time of need.

In this way, Marlene Darling, Marie Drain and Dorothy Jackson have chalked up at least one good deed to their credit for the summer recess from school duties, and the $7.50 that they made is listed in their name today.

The penny boxes in the Canadian Bank of Commerce periodically make their appearance in this column to give assistance to the fund, the latest in an amount of $5.30 being also credited to them in this day's report, making a total of $2,318.08 that has come from this one activity from the forty boxes throughout the city in its interest.

Visit Gladiolus Show

This Thursday evening will see the finale of the Gladiolus and Aquarium Show in the market Hall, and it surely is a place worth visiting, the display of Gladiolus on exhibit far supercedes that of last year, and all of these beautiful blooms will be sold at the close of the show to give further aid to the fund.

For this purpose Messrs. Jim Wharry and Andy Rutter are giving their services, the sale to follow immediately after his worship the Mayor has made the draw for the prizes of the evening, and in addition one may view all kinds of tropical fish in the various aquariums placed on exhibition by the members of the Peterborough Aquarium Society, of which C. H. Bacon is president.

The young soldier trained in many parts of Canada and the United States, including Fort Benning, Georgia. He went overseas during the summer of 1942, and has since been attached to the Toronto Scottish Regiment. Mr. Nice received a postcard recently from his son, stating he was in France.

A brother, Pte. Allen Nice, is with the Canadian Army overseas.

Peterborough Board Sponsors Annual Picnic For Blind

Riverside Park was the setting for a get-together Wednesday afternoon, when approximately thirty blind people and their friends gathere for the annual picnic for the blind, sponsored by the Peterborough Advisory Board, Canadian National Institute for the Blind. In previous years, this annual event was usually held at Fee's Landing, but transportation difficulties made it impossible this year. Therefore, some of the sightless people who were accustomed to attend were unable to come to Peterborough.

Sandwiches and cake were served with the compliments of the local Chapters of the Imperial Order, Daughters of the Empire, soft drinks were donated by Coca Cola Company and Boorman's, ice cream by 'Silverwood's Ltd., with prizes and gifts distributed by the local Board for the Blind.

Mrs. E. V. Morphet, convener of refreshments, was assisted by: Mrs. R. Whalon, Mrs. F. Lynch, Miss A. Grant, Mrs. G. K. Fraser, Miss B. Lytle. W. C. Hughes, chairman of the local Board was absent, but his duties were capably handled by T. T. Rodger, who took charge of the program. Mr. Rodger was assisted by Sgt. G. Puffer, G. K. Fraser, M.P., John Bradshaw and F. Lynch. Prizes were awarded to winning contestants and each blind person in attendance received a small gift.

G. K. Fraser, M.P., spoke briefly to the picnicers, and suggested that anyone knowing of any individual who has gone blind or is suffering from impairment to vision, should notify the Institute for the Blind, because in many cases, the Institute is able to provide preventive and curative treatment. William McDougall, himself blind, moved a vote of thanks to the local Board and all those who had contributed towards making the picnic a success.

H. W. Henry, district field secretary of the Institute for the Blind was in attendance and addressed the group. Mr. Henry stated that although some curtailment of social entertainment for the blind had been necessary because of war time conditions, nevertheless, the local Board would do everything possible to maintain the annual summer picnic to which the blind folk look forward each year. He conveyed the best wishes and greetings from the National Council and Colonel E. A. Baker, Managing Director of The Canadian National Institute for the Blind.

The first contest conducted in the afternoon, which served to get everyone in the fun and to get things off to a good start, was a broom passing contest. Contestants formed a ring, and the broom was passed from one player to another while Walter Wilson played his concertina. When he stopped, the player holding the broom was counted out, and left the circle. The final winner in this event was Mrs. A. O'Reilly. Other competitions included the familiar cracker eating contest, with Robert Renwick and Miss Noreen Fraser as winners, and a toothpick race, with Mrs. A. O'Reilly again winner. In the pop bottle contest, Robert Renwick downed a bottle of pop in the shortest time to win the prize.

The complete list of prize winners is as follows: Mrs. P. Houren, Mrs. A. O'Reilly, Mrs. W. Thompson, Miss Shirley Butcher, Miss Noreen Fraser, Miss Genevieve Sedgewick, Mrs. E. Heasman, Miss Mary Considine, W. McDougall, R. Renwick, J. Martin, W. Wilson and A. Brown.

Gnr. Cecil Hully Injured Overseas

Serving with an anti-aircraft unit in France, Gnr. Cecil Frederick Hully, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hully, 133 Stewart street, has been officially reported injured in action, and is now in a hospital Mrs. Hully reported today. Pte. Hully's injuries were described as shoulder fracture and lacerations of the scalp.

The 27-year-old soldier enlisted in December 1939, just three months after Canada entered the war, and after training in Vancouver and Victoria, went overseas in 1941. Prior to enlisting, he was employed at the Canadian General Electric Company.

A brother, Ordinary Seaman Arthur Hully is now believed to be in Eastern Canada after seeing action in the Atlantic during convoy movements. Another brother, 18-year-old Walter, is in Kingston today, intending to enlist in the forces. Mrs. Hully does not yet know whether her third son to join the Canadian forces has succeeded.

Sgt. Herbert Coombes Ill With Malaria

Sgt. Herbert Coombes, whose wife lives at Elcome Crescent, after being wounded in Italy in May, is now in hospital with malaria, according to word reaching his family.

The son of Mr and Mrs. W. H. Coombes, 283½ Park Street North, Sgt. Coombes formerly worked at the Peterborough Lock Company

Two brothers are also serving in Canada's armed forces, Fred in France, and Wallace with an infantry unit stationed in Debert, Nova Scotia.

City Gives Leopard Skin To Band

Peterborough's gift of a leopard skin to the brass band of the Canadian Women's Army Corps is being formally presented in London, Ontario, this afternoon.

Mayor Hamilton was in telephone communication Wednesday afternoon with Brigadier MacDonald, Officer Commanding Military District No. 1, arranging for the presentation at a military review today. It was suggested by Mayor Hamilton that Judge Joseph Wearing, formerly of this city, might be available to act as the representative of the citizens of Peterborough in making the gift to the C.W.A.C. Band.

The band visited Peterborough toward the end of June. Their companion C.W.A.C. pipers were equipped with a leopard skin for the girl playing the bass drum, and Mayor Hamilton noticed that the bass drummer in the brass band had been overlooked in this detail. As an appreciation of the visit of the band and of their service as an auxiliary to the Examiner, Mayor Hamilton ordered a leopard skin from Wm. Lech and Sons Limited.

The city council has received several letters from officers of the C.W.A.C. and also of its band thanking Mayor Hamilton as representing the citizens for their cordial welcome and kindness extended to them in their engagement here. A warm acknowledgment of the leopard skin gift was the subject of a later C.W.A.C. letter.

8,000 Bags Of Milkweed Pods Wanted

From Peterborough County alone 8,000 bags of milkweed pods are needed this year to fill life jackets, formerly filled with kapok, a silky seed-pod fibre that came from Java before the Japs took over that island.

The floss from the ordinary milkweed, swamp-milkweed, and showy milkweed is extremely valuable in the filling of life jackets to save the lives of our sailors and airmen. Last year a great contribution was made through the picking of milkweed leaves, however, only the pods of the ripened milkweed plant are wanted this year. The pods may be picked as soon as the seeds in the pod have turned brown, but not after the pods have opened and the floss has blown away. The ideal time for picking the pods is in early September, when the pods are at the best state of ripeness and the floss has not been blown away.

A great contribution to Canada's war effort can be made this year by those who will pick milkweed pods. After the fall of Java the entire supply of kapok used for life jackets was grown in India, but only limited quantities in that country were available for Britain and the Dominions. Along with the county of Peterborough, Durham, Hastings, Victoria and Northumberland Counties are each expected to pick 8,000 bags of this vital product.

Arrangements for bags that the pods will be picked in and the collection of the bags will be arranged by the Agricultural Supplies Board, and the payment of 20 cents a bushel bag will be made.

Some of the instructions issued to those who will pick milkweed are that the pods should be picked in a mesh bag or onion sack.

The pods must never be let stand in any other type of container for more than a short time. After picking the bags should be hung up on a well-exposed fence, as plenty of sun and wind hasten the drying process of the pods. They should be placed at least a foot from the ground. Neither too much or too little of the pods must be placed in a bag. After they have been thoroughly dried, which takes from two to five weeks of hanging outdoors, the bags should be brought into the house or shed and piled or stacked on shelves. They should not be placed on the floor for more than a few hours, as mildew and rot will set in and spoil the pods.

Announcements will be made later as to the arrangements made for the collection of the bags of pods, and where empty onion bags may be obtained. This is a chance for everyone to participate in a war job that can and does save lives. No airman or sailor will die because the homefront could not supply enough milkweed floss to build a life jacket.

GETS THINGS DONE—Sgt. Alf Pink, now stationed at the Peterborough Training Centre, is the moving spirit behind the regatta to be held at Inverlea Saturday afternoon. Formerly a well-known skier, swimmer and skater, Sgt. Pink served overseas with the Royal Canadian Dental Corps, and was posted to Canada for duty when his medical category dropped. This is believed to be the first regatta ever held at Inverlea, and this hard-working soldier is getting splendid co-operation from the Parks Commissioner, City Council and merchants.

REPORTED KILLED — Lieut. Jack Couper of the Cameron Highlanders, who was reported missing June 8 in Normandy, has now been reported killed, according to word received by his parents. Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Couper, 247 Engleburn avenue.

Lt. Jack Couper Reported Killed Overseas

Reported missing in action in Normandy June 8, Lieutenant Jack Couper of the Cameron Highlanders is now listed as killed in action on that day according to a telegram from the military authorities in Ottawa received by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Cooper, 247 Engleburn avenue.

The only information affording some degree of definiteness of the circumstances of the action in which Lieutenant Couper was fatally injured was forwarded in a letter to his mother by Captain J. P. C. MacPherson, his company commanding officer, written from the field on July 3.

Its text follows: "I have been holding off writing to you about Jack for this length of time, trying as thoroughly as I could to get all the information possible before sending it to you.

"I am second-in-command, or was, of Jack's company. I took over command on Major Hill's death I landed at the same time as Jack on "D" day, and saw him for the last time that night (June 6. He was fine then and raring to go. The next day his platoon went forward with one of our infantry battalions (presumably the Glengarrys), and ran into some heavy opposition. You will appreciate that I cannot mention names of places. Suffice it to say that the place Jack got to is now in enemy hands.

Wall Collapses

"The information I have been able to gather is chiefly from an Non-Commissioned Officer of another unit with whom Jack's platoon was working, as all of our men who were with Jack at the time have been evacuated as wounded This Sergeant told me that he was hit by shrapnel and Jack came over to attend to him. As he was examining this man's back, another bomb burst whoch tore down a section of wall behind which the two of them were, pinning them to the ground.

"The Sergeant managed to pull himself out from under Jack, who, he says, appeared to be very severely wounded. What happened after this is rather confused in this man's memory, but he is under the impression that Jack was picked up with other wounded and taken back. We have been unable to trace Jack through medical channels over here, but it is possible he might have been evacuated to England without record, as any kind of documentation was very difficult in those first hectic days.

"The battalion is making every effort to trace him, but so far without success. I am afraid that is all I can tell you. I only wish it could be more of better news, I would like also to add that I have nothing but the highest praise for Jack's work that day. This is not only my word, but that of others who saw him. He was always at the front of everything, and a splendid example to all.

Deepest Sympathy

"His brother officers and the men of his cherished platoon join me in offering you our deepest sympathy. I do wish I could offer you more hope, but I have given you the facts as near as it is humanly possible for me to establish them and they must be very dificult for a mother to bear.

"If there are any questions which you have that you think I might be able to answer, please don't hesitate. I am at your service and in the meantime, I shall certainly let you know by quickest possible means if I gather any further informatwion. May I offer a prayer with you that through some miracle Jack may still be all right and receiving medical care."

Lieut. J. C. Couper enlisted with the Prince of Wales Rangers (A.F.) in March, 1942 and went overseas in the following October. He was employed in the purchasing department of the Quaker Oats Company, and a graduate of King George School and Peterborough Collegiate Institute.

His father, A. S. Couper, is collector of taxes at the city hall.

War—4 Years Ago

(By The Canadian Press)

AUGUST 17, 1940—President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Mackenzie King conferred at Ogdensburg, N.Y., on defence of Western Hemisphere R.A.F. blasted military objectives in north France, Holland and Belgium while the Germans attempted no mass raids over Britain.

Milk Supplies Face Rationing Due To Drought

"Peterborough's milk supply will have to be rationed in another week if we don't get rain right away, and improvement in the volume of deliveries from the dairy farms," Alderman W. J. Ovens of Campbell's Dairy suggested to The Examiner this morning.

"A few weeks ago, we had a surplus of milk we could sell here and there. This week we are down to rock bottom. I have never seen such a sharp shrinkage in such a short time. We are now feeling the accumulated effects of the long drought."

A similar report came from "Sunshine Dairy." Protracted lack of rain plus heat and drying winds have seared the pastures and left the grass parched and without food content for the cattle.

Sanitary Inspector MacPherson remaked this morning from his connections with the dairies that adults can help the community of voluntarily rationing their milk consumption until the volume rises again.

"Milk is so important for the health of children that the adults should leave it for the younger folks. It will only be for a short time, and if we can lighten the worries of the dairy men these day it will be a real help."

"Scotty" Grant Has Shell Wound

Company Quartermaster Sergeant David Carry Grant, Scottish-born member of the Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry Highlanders, who lived in the city for eight years before joining Canada's active forces, was wounded in France on August 10, a telegram received by his mother, Mrs. Josephine Grant, 343¼ George street, made known today. He was hit by shell fragments in the left elbow, but how serious the wound is was not disclosed.

A member of the Prince of Wales Rangers (R.F.) during the years he lived here and worked for the Scott Lumber Co., C.Q.M.S. Grant, known to his acquaintances as "Scotty," enlisted with the Highlanders in 1940 and went overseas with them a year later. He got to Normandy on D-Day. This is the second time the 37-year-old soldier has been wounded, since he suffered a bullet wound in his hip while participating in manoeuvres two years ago.

The Grant family came to Peterborough from Greenock, Scotland, in 1929, and C.Q.M.S. Grant, after living in the States for two years, brought his wife here and made the city his home in 1932. His wife and two children are now back in Scotland.

An older brother of the wounded soldier, Spr. William Grant, R.C.E., is also serving overseas; and a brother-in-law, Pte. Mallory Reid, R.C.A.S.C., is now in England. C.Q.M.S. Grant's sister, Mrs. Reid, is living with their mother here

Tomato Crops Reported Good

A good quality of tomatoes is expected when the crop begins to come in, according to E. S. Ford, of the Canada Packers. Although the tomatoes have not started to come in yet, a few are expected either Friday or Saturday, and next week, the business will be in full swing.

"We are looking forward to a good crop," Mr. Ford told the Examiner today, "although I can't say as yet to what extent the hot weather will have lessened it. It is likely the hot weather will choke off the late tomatoes that were small in forming," he said.

He said most of the tomatoes that come into Canada Packers come from the Port Hope district, and for that reason, the canners are unable to give the fruit the day-by-day inspection they usually do.

With regard to the help situation, Mr. Ford said many girls and housewives were offering their services, although some can only take part-time work. High school girls have volunteered, but because they are going back to school in the autumn more help will be needed then, he said.

"We can use as many workers on this job as we can get," he said. "We are just nicely compiling lists now of women and huosewives who are coming in, but many more will be needed before the season is over," Mr. Ford declared.

Fined For Speeding

John A. Knox was fined $5 and $2.50 costs for speeding on Tuesday. Some damage to the motorcycle driven by Police Constable A. Clarke, who was attempting to check the speed of the truck driven by Knox, was reported.

6 Novices Take Final Vows Mount St. Joseph Ceremony

With the recurrence of the great Feast of the Assumption, August 15, a congregation which filled the spacious Chapel of Mount St. Joseph witnessed once again the impressive ceremony of reception of the Religious Habit and the pronouncing of the Holy Vows.

Promptly at 9:30 a.m. the postulants entered the chapel in bridal procession accompanied by six charming little girls who acted as train-bearers and attendants. The scene of this colorful procession amid the strains of appropriate organ music, approaching an altar artistically decorated with tapers and flowers, made a most impressive beginning to a very solemn ceremony.

His Excellency, the Most Reverend J. R. MacDonald, D.D., Bishop of Peterborough, celebrated the holy sacrifice of the mass, assisted by Rev. V. Corkery and Rev. K. Malane. At the conclusion of the mass, Rev. Father Conlogue, C.Ss.R., who had previously completed two eight-day retreats for the Sisters of St. Joseph, delivered an oration on the significance of the Feast of the Assumption, and the bearing that the virtues of Our Blessed Lady should have on the lives of all good religious people. He exhorted them to imitate these virtues in order to ensure a happy life and more particularly a happy death.

The young women who received the Holy Habit were: Miss Rita Ryan of Kearney, Ont., to be known in religion as Sister Mary Cabrini; and Miss Marie Duggan of Fenelon Falls, to be known in religion as Sister Mary Cordis.

Immediately after this reception, seven novices who had experienced two years' novitiate, pronounced their first vows. These were: Sister Cecilia, Sister Magdalen, Sister St. John, Sister Agatha, Sister Anna Rita, Sister Teresita, Sister Hilary.

Six other novices who had completed five years' novitiate pronounced their final vows. These were: Sister St. William, Sister St. Rose, Sister Honora, Sister Sheila, Sister Margaret, Sister Marcella. At an earlier mass eleven novices renewed their holy vows for one year and will continue further training in preparation for final vows.

Throughout the entire ceremony suitable music, hymns, and psalms were provided by the Sisters' Choir.

Besides the officiating clergy the following were present in the sanctuary: Right Rev. F. J. O'Sullivan, D.P., V.G., P.P., Rev. J. Killen, Rev. J. Greenan of Immaculate Conception Parish; Rev. J. T. Finn, rector, St. Peter's Cathedral Parish; Rev. J. J. O'Brien, P.P., Rev. F. M. Grant, D.C.L., Rev. J F. Coughlin of Sacred Heart Parish; Capt. the Rev. J. Smith, Toronto; Very Rev. J. V. McAuley, V.F., P.P., Lindsay; Rev. J. J. Guiry, P.P., Port Hope; Rev. J. J. McCarthy, PP., Douro; Rev. J. J. Collins, P.P., Campbellford; Rev. L. Cleary, P.P., Victoria Road; Rev. K. Corkery, Peterborough; Rev. H. Archambault, P.P., Britt; Rev. P. Butler, P.P., Grafton; Rev. J. Walsh, P.P., Kinmount; Rev. C. Kay, Lindsay.

Peterboro Man Weds In Kendal

A pretty wedding was solemnized in Kendal United Church recently, when Charlotte Rosella Pearl, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Hoy of Kendal, Ontario, was united in marriage to Donald Carver, son of Mr. and Mrs. Russel Oke of Peterborough. Rev. J. McLaughlin officiated.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, chose a gown of white sheer over taffeta with long full sleeves, round neckline, a shoulder-length veil, and carried a bouquet of white and pink gladioli.

She was attended by her sister, Miss Hazel Hoy, gowned in pink lace over taffeta with shoulder-length veil and bouquet of pink gladioli. Miss Jean Hoy, as bridesmaid, was frocked in pink lace over taffeta with shoulder-length veil, and carried a bouquet of mixed gladioli. Helen Hoy was flower girl in white organdie, and carried a nosegay of pinks and phlox. Mr. Archie Hoy, brother of the bride, was best man.

The wedding music was played by Mrs. Lawson of Toronto, and during the signing of the register Miss Jean Holden of Fraserville sang "I Love You Truly." The ushers were Mr. Lawrence Winslow of Millbrook, cousin of the bride, and Mr. Bill Hoy, brother of the bride.

The reception was held at the home of the bride, where her mother received in a rose flowered crepe dress and white accessories, and a corsage of gladioli. The groom's mother received in a biege two-piece dress, with brown accessories and a corsage of red roses.

Later the couple left on a motor trip to Toronto and points west. The bride chose a green crepe dress and black accessories. On their return they will live in Peterborough.

Guests from Oshawa, Peterborough, Millbrook, Fraserville and Curtis were present.

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

THE LUNAR transits for this day show a fairly lively and prosperous state of affairs, with both business and private affairs under promising conditions for pleasant and profitable relations. It would be well under this aspect to concentrate the efforts on gaining the support or approbation of those in influential positions, as these may be disposed to tide over a few menacing moments. The contacts may result in enhanced popularity or prestige in both business and personal objectives.

If It Is Your Birthday.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a fairly progressive and pleasant year, in which their position is strengthened or enhanced by the personal intervention or substantial and friendly offices of those in power and position, either in financial, social or commercial affairs. Seek these, with discretion and tact and many minor anxieties may be disposed of.

A child born on this day may be energetic and talented, and should win the good will of superiors or those in influence in public relations.

SUMMER STAINS

For some reason or other, summertime seems to present the greatest number and variety of stains on clothing to contend with, than any other season. In addition to the regular stains incurred by spilling things on the best bib and tucker, leaning up against freshly-painted walls, or sitting in a dusty spot, the summer bugaboos of grass and perspiration stains manage to get in their dirty work, too.

Perspiration, in any season, is an ever-present problem, but the oppressive humid heat of recent days seems to be just made to get everyone perspiring freely. Although most summer frocks are washable, perspiration stains often are stubborn, and hard to remove. Anxious to conserve materials, the housewife doesn't want to rub the offending spots too vigorously because of the danger of weakening it. However, she does want to remove it if at all possible.

If the gentle sqeezing in warm, sudsy water has failed, here's a method to try. Dampen the discolored portion with water, and hold the dampened material over an open bottle of household ammonia, so that the fumes can penetrate. If the stains are old, soak the spots in lemon juice for a couple of hours, then rinse in clean water. For white materials, a bleach, such as hydrogen peroxide, to which a few drops of liquid ammonia have been added, usually turns the trick. In this method, the material is stretched over a bowl of steaming hot water, and the peroxide-ammonia solution is gently rubbed into it with a clean cloth.

Grass Stains Difficult

Grass stains are frequently encountered after a family picnic or hike, and generally tend to be disagreeable unless handled with caution. With washable clothes, the first method is the soap and water bath, gently squeezing the suds through the material. If this fails, try using a soft brush, and rubbing it vigorously across the stains, after a good rich lather has been worked up with the soap and water. The stains still persisting, sponge them carefully with a chlorine bleach, remembering however, not to overdo it, since several brief applications of this are much better than a single dose. With silk or wool material, sponge the stains with clear water and then with hydrogen peroxide.

Pepper Relish

A reader has requested a recipe for a green pepper relish, but as yet, one is not avalable. There are, however, some recipes for relish which use both red and green peppers, in equal amounts, and several housewives, who do a great deal of pickling, have said that there is really no reason why green peppers could not be substituted for the red ones called for in the recipe. Outside of the color the red peppers provide, there should not be any great difference in the taste or consistency.

Here is a tested recipe for a pepper relish: Take 12 red and 12 green peppers, and 12 onions. Cut the peppers and remove seeds; peal the onions, and put all through the meat chopper. Put the chopped peppers and onions in a saucepan, and cover with boiling water, letting it stand for 10 minutes. Strain the water off, and add two cups of sugar, four tablespoons of salt and three cups of vinegar. Bring these ingredients to a boil and let them simmer for about 40 minutes. Put in sterilized jars and seal.

Speaking of green peppers, here's a recipe for a green pepper jelly which should be a hit. Ingredients: 12 large green peppers, two large lemons or three small lemons, a little salt, and one and one-half pounds of white sugar. Method: Put the peppers through the meat chopper or grinder after the seeds have been removed. Place them in a cooking dish; cover with cold water; and bring to a boil. Take them off immediately as soon as the boiling point is reached; drain, and put peppers back into the kettle, covering them with white wine vinegar. Add the lemons, and bring to a boil, boiling for about one and one-half hours, or until the mixture becomes thick. Add the sugar, and boil for another 10 minutes. Take out the lemons before bottling the jelly in hot sterilized jars and sealing. If it can be spared, an extra cup of sugar is recommended. Incidentally, red peppers can be substituted in this recipe, to make red pepper jelly.

Pepper Sauce

While we're in the pepper mood, here are some recipes for pepper sauce and pepper pickle which are handy. One recipe for pepper sauce calls for 12 red or green peppers, 18 onions, 2 pints of cider vinegar, two cups of brown sugar, and two tablespoons of salt. This chopped mixture is boiled for 25 minutes, and then sealed while hot. Another recipe for pepper sauce required 12 green peppers, and 12 large onions. They are chopped fine, and covered with boiling water for 20 minutes. After draining dry, add four cups of vinegar, four cups of white sugar, and three teaspoons of salt, and let simmer for 20 minutes.

A recipe for a pepper pickle, somewhat similar to a pickle relish, calls for 12 sweet green peppers and 12 red peppers and 14 onions. After they have been put through the chopper, add one cup of sugar, three cups of vinegar and a teaspoon of salt, and boil the mixture for 10 minutes. Pour into hot sterilized jars and seal.

Peach Preserves In Demand When Children In Family

By MARY MOORE.

Send Johnny down cellar for a jar of fruit for supper and what does he come up with? Peaches, nine times out of ten. Everyone who cans at all cans peaches and, as only the best methods are good enough, here are up-to-the-minute directions from the Consumer Section of the Dominion Department of Agriculture.

A six quart leno (heaped) basket of peaches should give about 6 quarts of canned fruit. The peaches should be fully ripe but not over-ripe and bruised spots must be carefully removed. Under-ripe peaches will be poor in flavour and colour when canned.

Syrup

Peaches are only mildly acid and a thin syrup (1 cup sugar to 2 cups water) is recommended through this proportion may be decreased or increased a little to suit individual taste. For a 6 quart basket of peaches add 3 cups boiling water to 4 cups sugar. Bring to boiling point, skim and keep hot.

Canned Peaches—Cold Pack

Test sealers for leakage. Wash, rinse, and keep hot until ready to use. Sort peaches for size and maturity. A much better pack is obtained if fruit is uniform. Blanch, peel, halve and remove pits. As fruit is peeled drop in brine (1 teaspoon salt to 1 quart cold water) to prevent discoloration. Peel only sufficient fruit for 2 sealers at one time. Drain and pack in hot sealers, cut side down. Fill containers to within ¼ inch of top with hot syrup if spring or screw top sealers are used and ½ inch of top for vacuum type sealers. Remove air bubbles by running a knife down and around the inside of the sealer. Adjust wet rubber rings and tops and partially seal screw top and spring top sealers. Completely tighten metal bands on vacuum type sealers.

Process:

Boiling Water Bath — Pints 20 minutes, Quarts 25 minutes.

(The oven is not recommended for processing peaches packed cold. See Hot Pack.)

When time is up, remove sealers from the processor, tighten the tops on screw and spring top sealers. Cool all sealers right side up, away from draughts. Test the screw and spring top sealers for leaks when cool by carefully tilting each sealer and revolving it in the hands. Vacuum type sealers with metal lids are tested by striking the top lightly with a metal spoon. There should be a clear ringing sound.... not dull. If sealers are airtight, label and store in a cool, dark place.

Canned Peaches—Hot Pack. .. , ..

Blanch peaches, remove skins, halve and pit; slice if desired. Drop in brine. Drain. Simmer 5 minutes in syrup. Pack at once into hot sealers to within one-quarter inch of the top with screw and spring top sealers, and one-half inch with vacuum type sealers. Remove air bubbles by runing the blade of a knife down and around the inside of the filled container. Adjust rubber rings and tops on sealers, partially sealing screw and spring top sealers, completely tightening metal bands on vacuum type sealers.

Process:

Boiling Water Bath — Pints 15 minutes, Quarts 20 minutes.

Thermostatically controlled oven, 275 degrees Fahr (not recommended when vacuum type sealers with metal lids are used).

Pints 25 minutes. Quarts 30 minutes. Complete as for cold pack method.

HAND-MADE AND HOME-MADE—Not every little fashion run up by loving hands at home achieves a high-style, hand-made appearance. ENQUIRY COLUMN

By MARY MOORE

Conducted by MARY MOORE

QUESTION: On behalf of our Scout Master, who is also my husband, the Scouts and myself, I want to express our sincere appreciation of your help with the food problem. The boys were able to get a grand camp site close to a sandy beach on Lake Erie and are having a marvellous time. A group of mothers went for a visit today and found out to our chagrin that the boys were doing very well without our help.

They had even a large soft-drink cooler complete with ice to store the perishable foods. They served us a delicious supper: baked ham, pan-fried potatoes, a large salad, bread and butter, cake and ice watermelon and coffee. It was good and we all enjoyed it very much.

At dusk we had a weiner roast and sing-song around the camp-fire. I wonder now what we'd have been served if we'd been expected.

When you find the space for it would you please publish your recipe for nine-day pickle. I've mislaid mine and want to make some this year.

If you come to our city we would love to have you visit our Scout Troop.—Alma A.

ANSWER: It is a little disconcerting but pleasant to find young people so capable,—however it is what you devote most of your time to accomplishing so it should show results. I shall be glad to help again at any time, and to accept your kind invitation.

Nine-Day Pickles

Cut 7 lbs. (4 or 5 inch) cucumber into ½-inch slices. Soak in salt water (about 1 cup salt ger gallon) for 3 days. Rinse off and add fresh brine each day for 3 days longer, rinsing off each day. On seventh day, scald for 2 hours in enough weak vinegar to coverabout 2 quarts, containing 1 oz. alum, then drain and discard this weak mixture. Prepare 3 pints fresh strong vinegar, 2½ lbs. sugar, 1 oz. each celery seed, whole allspice, stick cinnamon, and a few cloves if desired. Tie spices in thin cotton bag. Pour this mixture over pickles, bring to simmering simmering point and pour into a 2-gallon crock. These are ready to eat within a week, but keep indefinitely if kept cool and covered.

QUESTION: I have read your interesting column and was very pleased with the recipe for making chocolate syrup. This is certainly easy to make and greatly enjoyed. What I have found is that 2 dessert spoons of the chocolate syrup to one glass of milk is too much and have got good results with one dessert spoon. I would like your comments regarding this and would be interested in hearing if any of your other readers have found this 2 dessert spoons too much. This is certainly a wonderful syrup.—B.G.

ANSWER: I was glad to have your letter, for it brings up a point a lot of people are interested in. There are those chocolate lowers who enjoy a rich cocoa drink, but of course there are many who prefer a milder chocolate flavor. This is purely a matter of personal taste.

For example in preparing a drink for small children, you would not likely wish to make it as rich with syrup as a drink for adults. Also, with sugar rationed, many people would perhaps use less syrup now then when sugar is in plentiful supply. It is a matter of each individual suiting the mixing of their drinks to their preferences and circumstances.

The recipe which seems to please a great number of people is

Chocolate Syrup

Mix together, dry, ¾ cup granulated sugar and ½ cup of quality cocoa. Slowly stir into them ¾ cup boiling water, mixing well. Bring this syrup to boiling point and boil 1 minute. It is best to stand over it the whole minute, so that it is not overdone. This keeps very well if covered and kept in refrigerator.

Use two tablespoons syrup to each 8-oz. glass milk to make Chocolate Milk, or vary in accordance with individual taste. The syrup is also good over ice cream.

THE TEA HOUR GOSSIP . . . .

The following recipes are for the normal diet and may be served either for lunch or dinner. These recipes served with some light dessert make a very satisfying meal and one that is easily digested.

Savory Veal Birds.

1 to 1¼ lbs. veal steak (cut very thin), 1¼ cups soft bread crumbs, ½ cup chopped celery, 2 teaspoons of chopped onion, salt and pepper, ⅛ teaspoon sage, 5 tablespoons butter, 2 chicken bouillon cubes, 2½ cups hot water, 3½ tablespoons flour, 1 cup of thick sour milk.

Trim veal and cut in 6 portions. Combine crumbs, celery, onion, salt and pepper, sage, and 3 tablespoons melted butter. Dissolve the bouillon cubes in the hot water and add 3 or 4 tablespoons of this mixture to the dressing. Shape the dressing in 6 rolls wrap a piece of veal around each and fasten with toothpicks. Roll in flour and brown in remaining butter. Place in a buttered dish. Add 2 tablespoons flour to the drippings in the pan, and mix well. Add remaining chicken bouillon gradually and cook, stirring all the time until thick. Pour over veal rolls, cover and bake in a moderately hot oven (375 degrees F) about 50 minutes. Uncover and bake 10 minutes longer. Remove veal birds from gravey and take out toothpicks. Mix the sour milk with 1½ tablespoons flour and add to the gravy. Cook over a low heat until thickened. Serve with veal birds.

Red Cherry Betty.

2½ cups pitted, sour cherries, 3 cups corn flakes, 2-3 cup brown sugar, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, ½ teaspoon nutmeg, 1 tablespoon butter. Drain cherries, reserving syrup. Mix cornflakes, sugar, cinnamon, nutmeg. Place alternate layers cornflakes mixture and cherries in baking dish, dot with butter and add ¼ cup cherry syrup. Bake in a moderately hot oven 20 minutes. Any kind of fresh fruit in season may be used in place of cherries. This may be served with cream or thin custard sauce.

Cheese Apple Cake.

Make a baking powder biscuit dough, rolling out to about ½" thickness. Pat into greased pan 9" x 9" x 1½", sprinkle generously with grated Canadian cheese. Top with overlapping peeled apple slices. Sprinkle with brown sugar and cinnamon, dot with butter and bake in a hot oven (400 degrees F) for 35 minutes. Serve hot with coffee cream.

This Week's Best Wartime Recipe

Contributed By Mary Moore Readers

Contributed by Our Readers.

Dear Mary Moore: I have some Danish friends who make some very good dishes, that we Canadians would do well to copy. I was canning some fruit with this neighbour, and stayed for a meal there and she served what she called Danish Goulash. It is like a beef stew with onions, but has bay leaf in and a little sugar that makes it taste diferent enough to tell about.

Danish Goulash.

(Sent in By Mrs. Q. J. Wright).

Two or 1½ lbs. top round steak cut ¼-inch thick, ¼ cup butter or drippings, ⅛ teaspoon pepper, 2½ teaspoons salt, 4 medium-sized onions, 1 tablespoon brown sugar, 3 bay leaves, 4 tablespoons flour. Wipe meat with damp cloth and cut in ¼ or ½ inch cubes. Saute them in the melted fat. Add the pepper and 2 teaspoons of the salt. Add the onions after the meat has sauteed for 10 minutes— onions should be sliced paper thin. Continue searing for five minutes stirring constantly. Add two cups boiling water, sugar, remaining salt, and bay leaves. Cover, bring to boiling point ,reduce heat and simmer 1 hour. Remove bay leaves. Thicken stew with the flour which should be mixed to a smooth paste with 6 tablespoons cold water. Cook until thick, stirring. Serve over hot mashed potatoes on hot platter garnished with parsley. M. W.

Thanks. This is good with veal too —if you use veal replace the bay leaves with 1 teaspoon paprika. This goulash is also good served over fluffy boiled rice.

WOMEN CRAVE FOR SYMPATHY

One Of Their Curious Characteristics Is The Morbid Desire For Pity

One of the most curious characteristics of the feminine sex is the morbid craving that women have for sympathy. They would rather be pitied than to be envied and the happiest one are not those who are sitting pretty on top of the world, it is those who have a grievance that entitles them to be wept over and "poor-Maryed" by their friends.

Considering that pity is bound to be tinged with contempt or at least to carry a certain sense of the superiority of the pitier for the pitiee, it is hard to understand why it is women's favorite dish. But it is and it goes a long way to explain many of their strange reactions to life.

One is, why women endure invalidism with so much more patience than men do. This is generally attributed to their moral heroism and their uncomplaining fortitude but the truth of the matter is that most of them so long as they are not in actual pain, are having the time of their lives in being objects of compassion. They literally enjoy poor health, as the old country phrase used to go.

How Do They Stand It?

If any group of women, no matter how husky they look, nor what good appetites they have, nor how many miles they can walk around a golf links or a department store, the favorite topic of conversation is their ailments. And any sister who hasn't had a major operation, or who can't speak of her poor nerves or her bad heart and doesn't rate at least a "you poor dear, I don't know how you stand it" is always regarded as "queer."

One of the subjects that is a matter of perpetual wonder to us is why women stand mean husbands. We all have women friends married to men who are drunkards and philanderers and who beat them and whom they have to work and support and we can't understand why they don't leave them. The real reason is they get so much pleasure out of being sympathized with that it more than compensates for their sufferings.

Furthermore, wives put sympathy at the head of all the virtues that a husband can possess. It isn't that Friend Husband does that counts with them. It is what he says. As long as a man takes his wife window-shopping and tells her how sorry he is that he can't doll her up in finery, she is perfectly content to wear her old duds. It is only when he growls over buying her a mink coat that she thinks of divorce.

But the worst phrase of women's mania for being pitied is when their desire for sympathy makes them tell things about their own children that they should have died rather than make public. Many a girl and boy lose their good names because Mother exaggerates some silly escapade into a crime just because she wants to be wept over, and to indulge her martyr complex.

Canadian Aircraft

Then we hung around inshore until daylight, listening to sporadic fire and hanging closely over radios for expected directions to act as gunnery spotter for an American cruiser of our task force.

The instructions never came, however, as the cruiser bombarded in daylight when the crew were able to make their own range corrections.

Pick Up Wounded

At daylight we went in on the beaches and spent the rest of the day picking up wounded and unloading supplies.

Roughly the same procedure was followed by other craft commanded by Lieuts. Jack Davie, Duncan, B.C., Gordon Hendery, Westmount, Que., George Nuttal, Calgary, AB. Bill Lee, Oshawa, Ont., AB. Ken Osborne, Saint John, N.B., and Leading Seaman Pete Duchnicky, Fort William, Ont.

Lee's craft took medical personnel to the beaches about 2:30 a.m.—an hour after zero hour—but scattered fire forced him to pull off again and delay his landing until 4 a.m. With him were AB. Herb Smith, of British Columbia, Ray Parsons, Windsor, Ont., Terry Melanson, Moncton, N.B., and Stoker Vernon McIntyre, Louisburg, N.S.

Hold 51 Seats

EDMONTON, Aug. 17 —(CP) — Final returns from the Alberta general election August 8 last night gave Premier E. C. Manning's Social Credit government 51 of the 57 seats at stake. Three members-at-large to represent Alberta personnel in the armed forces overseas will be elected later.

and provides armor protection for the crew to approximately shoulder height all round, with higher and heavier shielding in front. Equipment for the crew includes machine guns which can be fired free or from mountings, as well as sub-machine guns and rifles.

Each vehicle is fitted out with wireless equipment permitting the crew to talk to each other, to crews in orther armored vehicles, to headquarters and to distant establishments.

Mr. Howe said in his announcement that Canada could "rightly take pride in the inventiveness of her engineers and skill of her workers in turning out this Canadian weapon."

Credit Is Divided

Much of the credit, he added, was owing to the army engineering design branch and the automotive and tank production branch of the Munitions Department.

Many of these Canadian "tank" buster" already have been turned out by the Government-owned tank arsenal in Montreal.

Before undertaking this contract, the arsenal delivered 1,940 Ram medium cruiser tanks, as well as a number of Grizzly M4-A1 tanks the Canadian version of the United States Sherman, and a few other types of tracked vehicles.

The guns are produced by the Sorel gun plant, which has made more than 3,000 since the spring of 1941, including 1,684 units on standard mobile carriages.

The Canadian Ram, from which the Sexton was developed, was designed by Canadian engineers. Manufactured from the spring of 1941 until the summer of 1943, the Ram incorporated the best features of British and American medium cruiser tanks, plus several purely Canadian innovations, including the one-piece cast-armor upper hull.

Bride-Elect Tendered Shower

HASTINGS, Aug. 17 — (ENS). — Miss Doreen Fleming entertained about thirty guests at a cup and saucer and tea-towel shower in honor of Miss Ona Hoard, a popular bride-elect of early September.

The living-room was artistically decorated in a color scheme of pink and white. The table was centred with "a bride's cake," and the streamers were caught at each corner in a bow.

The evening was spent in making a scrap-book for the bride, and in assembling a cook-book for her, containing the favorite recipe of each guest. Then the bride-to-be was asked to come forward, and an address was read by Doreen Fleming. The bride was assisted in unwrapping her gifts by Muriel Oliver. The hostess served a dainty lunch.

Motley Army Lands On Riviera French Are Happy To Be Home

BY DOUG HOW

ABOARD H.M.C.S. PRINCE DAVID OFF SOUTHERN FRANCE, Aug. 15 — (Delayed) (CP) — The landing-craft nosed into the silent beach. Soldiers poured ashore and disappeared in the darkness—and the French were home again.

Canadian and British sailors landed these French Commandos on a beach east of Toulon six hours before the giant main assault broke against the Riviera beaches a few miles farther east.

Little assault craft travelled the unprecedented distance of 13 miles, literally inching the last quarter-mile to complete the success of an operation that depended on stealth and worked perfectly.

I went in with a craft under Lieut. George Allin of Edmonton, a veteran of the North African, Sicily and Normandy campaigns, and returned seven hours later to his mother ship which came through the Normandy operation two months ago without a casualty, and did the same thing here.

Suspense and Pleasure

As a trip it was a mixture of suspense, monotony and pleasure climaxed by the almost unbelievable ease of landing that gave all appearances of catching the enemy napping.

These French troops, returning to fight on their native soil, went in with the heavy task of knocking out gun positions on rocky Cap Negro, and machine-gun positions on the beach, and seizing high ground dominating the coastal road to prevent the Germans from reaching the main assault beaches to the east.

They went in full of pride in the knowledge that theirs was a spearhead position and with their colonel's admonition that each man must be good for 10 Germans.

In reality they were a heterogenous mixture but they were French in leadership and spirit. They ran the complete gamut of French resistance these four years in exile.

There was one man who kept saying he would be home with his wife in three days. He knew the coast as a man who had sailed it for years.

Then there was a lieutenant who escaped from France in 1943— a 55-year-old Algiers businessman—and a 15-year-old Corsican who won the Croix de Guerre for guiding the same Commandos ashore at Corsica and who now is a full-fledged Commando himself.

There was also Lieut. Andronikoff Andronikachvili, a foreign Legionaire and the son of a White Russian general. And probably for the first time on a Commando raid there were two women—Rachel Howell-Evans of Somerset, England, and Joan Pryke of London—two English nurses who managed to get on the surgical team that joined the Commandos.

Dancing Berbers

There were dark Arabs, Berbers who danced native African to the music of bamboo futes, Frenchmen who had fought with the British 8th Army and Frenchmen who had first sided with Vichy and then swung to the Allied cause.

American liaison troops were along, including Pte. Emile Fauteux, Berlin, N.H., native of St. Odilon, Que. There was also a British correspondent who found himself landing on the same beach where he became engaged some years ago.

From the time the Prince David and her sister ship came to a stop 13 miles offshore, this was a strange expedition.

Everything was dominated by what could happen. A naval captain had warned it was bound to be tough and an admiral confessed fears that the Germans knew both when and where the landing would take place. We passed within three miles of Levant Island, assaulted by a task force later. With the exception of American torpedo boats there was no immediate protection.

It was a starlit moonless night, and the little landing craft labored almost noiselessly for 3½ hours through gentle seas. For more than half an hour we were within sight of the island, but nothing happened. And our hearts jumped again when an aircraft flew low overhead—but passed on.

To the west of our beach the Germans kept dropping flares both before and after our landing. As the first Commandos went ashore on Cap Negre ahead of the main body there was a scattering of small arms fire, but that was all.

Bombing of Marseille.

In the distance over the horizon a faint glow reflected the bombing of Marseille, 47 miles to the west.

Until we were within to miles of shore we were guided by American torpedo boats. Then they halted and Lieut. George Buckingham of Montreal, the Prince David's flotilla officer, took over.

The entire journey had seemed long, but nothing like the last half-hour. We waited for a signal from a reconnaissance officer who had gone in a kayak, but it seemed an eternity in coming.

At last the craft crept ahead in single line and ghosted in so slowly it was a surprise when AB. H. Woof of Hamilton, Ont., lowered the ramp and Frenchmen started to lope ashore.

Five men who had been towed behind in a ruber boat cut themselves afloat and paddled ashore.

As we backed away flares continued to our west. There was an ocasional burst of machine-gun fire around Cap Negre, but still nothing serious happened.

The Prince David, commanded by Cmdr. T. D. Kelly, Victoria and Toronto, combined with a sister ship to make Canada's naval contribution to this new landing.

LAWN BOWLING

By HERB MARTIN

The ladies' annual open trebles tournament has come and gone and while the attendance was not up to the usual, the bowling more than made up for the small entry.

The committee is offering no excuses for the fall off in the entry but we think that they would be justified if they did just kind of blame it on the excessive heat of the past ten days.

Those of us who were privileged to watch these games came to the conclusion that the brand of bowling was just about the best that we have seen in many summers.

The tournament was billed for 1.30 p.m. but the ladies thought that it would be better bowling in the evening and so delayed the starting until 3 p.m. This thoughtful gesture was appreciated by all.

It was shortly after eleven o'clock when the prizes were given out and all went home feeling tired and happy.

The first three prizes went to Peterborough rinks while Lindsay carried off fourth prize.

The winning rinks were: first, Mrs. G. Spence, Miss J. Walker and Mrs. C. Renaud skip. Each received a pair of bath towels.

Second: Mrs. F. Hall, Mrs. R. Hendry and Mrs. H. R. Martin, skip; and each received a table cloth.

Jerries Know When To Wave White Flag

WITH THE R.C.A.F. IN FRANCE, Aug. 17—(CP)—The latest story in the front line is about two captured Germans who told their interrogator they were minding their own business in their own particular slit trench when they sighted a Lancaster flying at tree-top height and coming in their direction.

The two scared Jerries climbed out of their holes.

"Achtung," said one Jerry. "It is now time for us to use V 5."

"And what in Fuehrer is V 5?"

"V 5," answered his comrade, "is a long pole with a big white flag tied to it."

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

WHEN NOT TO PASS

IF THERE is one time that a player should not pass, it is after his partner's informatory or take-out double finds him with a weak hand. The weaker it is, the more imperative is a bid of some kind from him. Passing such a double should not be done except for the purpose of beating the enemy's contract with strength in his declaration. To pass a double when you are weak is to give the opponents a present of a lot of points they could not score otherwise.

North: ♠ K Q 3 ♥ Q 9 7 5 3 ♦ 9 ♣ Q 8 3 2

West: ♠ J 10 4 2 ♥ A K J ♦ K J 10 5 ♣ K 4

South: ♠ A 8 7 6 ♥ None ♦ A 7 6 4 ♣ A J 10 7 5

(Dealer: South. Both sides vulnerable.)

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Dbl	Pass	Pass
Rdbl	Pass	Pass	Pass

Nothing about the action on that deal is more interesting than the various kinds of passes. North's on the first round was a sound one, with a good fit for his partner's suit and moderate honor strength. East's first pass was terrible. With such a weak hand, it was obligatory that he bid 1-Heart. He should have passed only if loaded with clubs.

South's redouble was smart enough, giving his partner an opportunity to take it out if by chance he did not fit clubs, especially good action since he could fit either of two other suits emphatically if East had made a pass with strong clubs, what is known as a "business pass" or "penalty pass."

West's pass on his second turn was also good stuff, telling his partner that he would take the responsibility if his partner used his judgment. North was so pleased, with his club fit, that his second pass was far and away his best move. The last pass of the hand, by East, was so bad it hardly deserves being commented upon. If he would not bid those hearts after the double, he now could not dare leave in the redoubled contract.

South took all but three tricks, scoring 80 for his redoubled contract, 1,200 for three extras redoubled at 400 apiece, and 50 for making the contract, a total of 1,330 points, due to East's unsoundness. If he had bid 1-Heart either his first or second turn, the score for either side would have been mere peanuts on this deal.

Fliers Destroy Lurking U-Boat On Lucky Tour

By FO. TED MOSHER
R.C.A.F. Public Relations Officer.

WITH THE R.C.A.F. IN ICELAND. — "It was just the luck of the game that on this day we went looking for weather and found a pig boat." That's how crew members of an R.C.A.F. Coastal Command aircraft sum up their recent successful attack on a German submarine.

FO. Peter Ficek, 28, of Fort William, Ont., was first wireless air gunner on the aircraft and was prominent in the gunfire duel which preceded the attack.

"The sub twisted and turned like a scared rabbit," he said. "It corkscrewed, went into tight circles, and tried every trick of evasive action except submerging. Officers were watching us through binoculars from the bridge. Eventually an explosion was seen and the U-boat sank quickly in a smother of foam. Our depth charges had caused a delayed explosion for some reason or other."

FO. Tommy Cooke, D.F.C., 24, of Clinton, Ont., and Dauphin, Man., was captain, and FO. Bert Hunter, 24, of Langley, B.C., was co-pilot. Other crew members were. F.-L. Eric Wisken, 28, of Island Falls, Ont., navigator; FO, Ficek, first wireless operator air gunner; WO. G McMacken, 33, of Winnipeg, Man., second wireless operator air gunner; F.-Sgt. Earl Tilander, 20, of Toronto, third wireless operator air gunner; Sgt. Eric Hill of Minot Mines, B.C., and Sgt. T. E. Hoosen, Edmonton, the flight engineer.

Pleasure Jaunt.

On the day of the attack the aircraft had been asigned to a "met flight."

"More or less of a 'Joe' job, it consists of gathering samples of the weather along a given track so the other boys will know just what brand of deviltry to expect from the elements that particular day," FO. Hunter explained. "The station authorities had also thrown in a short anti-sub sweep for us as well, after we had finished the met flight—as a piece of cake after the dose of castor oil, you might say."

"Generally we go out looking for subs and run into dirty weather instead," F.-L. Wisken remarked, "but this day we went looking for weather and found the pig boat."

FO Hunter sighted the enemy, the attack alarm was sounded in the aircraft, and the plane went into a shallow dive. As they headed straight for the target, flashes of cannon fire stabbed at them from two gun posts on the U-boat conning tower and flak burst to port and starboard.

"We were only aware of it vaguely," FO. Cooke said. "We were out to get that sub ahead of anything else."

Gun Duel.

WO. McMacken was gunner in the nose position and he pitted his two machine-guns against the two 20-millimeter cannon on the sub. His gunfire sent the sub cannon crews tumbling down the conning tower hatch.

Depth charges were dropped and the big flying boat swooped on and upward. FO. Ficek swept the sub gun positions and conning tower hatch with intermittent bursts of fire. Then the U-boat sank.

The patrol plane remained at the attack scene for several hours, long after several relief aircraft had arrived. Quantities of wreckage and several acres of oil seemed to indicate complete destruction of the target.

SUB CAUGHT IN NUTCRACKER—"The sub twisted and turned like a scared rabbit...eventually an explosion was seen and the U-boat sank quickly in a smother of foam," said crew members of a Canadian Coastal Command flying boat, describing how they successfully attacked a German pig-boat off Iceland recently. The above photograph was taken just after the aircraft passed over the submarine on its first run. Note the plume from the charge exploding on the far side and the "quivers" of the two depth charges entering the water on the near side, indicating that the submarine was caught between the explosions. Enemy gun crews previously had been swept from the decks by intense and accurate machine gun fire from the Canadian aircraft. FO. Tommy Cooke, D.F.C., of Clinton, Ont., and Dauphin, Man., was captain, and FO. Bert Hunter, of Langley, B.C., co-pilot. (RCAF Operational Photo)

Secret Papers Find Ridicule Strong Weapon

By FRANK LOWE
Canadian Press Staff Writer.

LONDON, August 17 — (CP).—They're reminiscent in appearance of high school newspapers Canaditn 'teen-agers put out with little equipment and boundless enthusiasm, these papers that preach the gospel of truth in occupied Europe, but the message of resistance and hope they carry makes up for the crudeness of their structure.

Now on display here, these samples of Europe's underground press represent the resistance movement in 10 occupied countries. No two are alike—not only do they differ in language but their make-up ond means of printing have no similarity. Hatred of Germany is the lone consistent note.

All are makeshift affairs. Put out under the constant threat of the Gertapo with death the reward of a by-line, they are mimeographed sheets, in most cases printed on two sides of rough paper.

A few, though, are more pretentious. Those are the ones put out by men and women who have been fortunate enough to find a hand press and a couple of cases of type. True, in such cases the type is not always uniform, with the result that in print a word will look like this: "UNdeRgRounND." But does not matter.

Fooled the Germans.

Most clever of all the samples—which come from Belgium, France, Poland, Greece, Luxembourg, Norway, Denmark, Holland, Czechoslovakia, and Yugoslavia — is a faked copy of the German-controlled Le Soir from Belgium. So cleverly did the underground copy the official product that their resistance paper was delivered by the unsuspecting Germans themselves.

Strongest weapon of these papers is ridicule. Hitler, Goebbels, Goering are held up in crude caricatures and in stinging articles as the colossal frauds they are. This ridicule is, for the most part, not bitter—a surprising fact considering how the people responsible for the papers have suffered.

In fact, the only underground paper consistently tough in its outlook is the Yugoslav sample. There ridicule is replaced by grim exhortations to kill the invader and the fighting ardor is heated with atrocity stories.

One paper, De Frie Danske claims to have a foreign correspondent in Berlin itself and gives his sobering accounts of the Nazi capital under fire their largest space. Circulation of this secret paper is said to be 100,000— a figure many Canadian papers would be glad to claim. Other underground papers claim circulation figures that range from the 192,000 of Combat, a French resistance paper, to 2,000 for the average pamphlet type.

Couldn't Happen

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., Aug. 17—(AP).—When L. L. Mauldin returned from a west coas. war job, he reported his house had been stolen. Not at all, said the district attorney. The house couldn't be stolen because New Mexico has no such statute regarding houses. Hence common law would prevail. Hence, the house would be considered real estate, and since real estate is not considered movable, the house-lugging-away can't be considered theft.

English Members Expect To Be Recalled

By DOUGLAS AMARON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON, Aug. 17.—(CP).—Members of Parliament, at present on a seven-week holiday, are in the unusual position of having everyone, including themselves, hoping that their period of leave may be curtailed.

For when the House adjourned, against the wishes of some members, it was on the understanding that it would be reconvened at short notice should the end of the war become imminent. A Daily Mail poet expressed popular sentiment on this score when he wrote:

"Sirs, you deserve a holiday—
"You had an awful lot to say ("Sometimes too much, we fear).
"And yet, we hope they'll spoil your 'vac';
'We do not mind you rushing back
"If only it's to cheer."

Labor members, many of whom argued against a seven-week recess, won't be caught short if there are sudden developments for the administrative committee of their parliamentary party plans to meet at frequent intervals to keep in touch with events.

It's just a straw in thqe breeze but most members feel confident they will be recalled before Sept. 20, when the recess ends.

Home Secretary Morrison has eased the ban on overseas travel and announced he will consider applications from wives of men permanently stationed overseas people returning to their homes within the Empire or Allied countries, and people who want to visit their homes either in Britain or in Eire.

Australian People Vote Saturday On Post-War Problems

CANBERRA, Aug. 17.—(CP). — The Australian people go to the polls Saturday to decide whether the government of Prime Minister John Curtin should be given additional power for five years after the war to handle post-war problems.

When war started the Commonwealth government passed the National Security Act which gave it wide powers for the conduct of the war which in peace-titme would be within the jurisdiction of state governments. It was similar to a law passed in Canada, the War Measures Act. Both measures terminate when the war ends.

The Commonwealth government and most of the State governments, however, feel that the wide powers of the Central government will be required in the post war period. A division of opinion, however, developed over the extent on the added powers so it was decided to hold a referendum on the question.

Although the referendum was set for Aug. 19, voting now is taking place among servicemen serving outside Australia. In Canada more than 2,000 servicemen are entitled to vote. Australians in the United States with a vote will send their ballots to Ottawa to be counted. Dr. W. A. Wynes, official secretary at the Australian High Commissioner's office in Ottawa, is returning officer for North America.

Seamen Note Too

Besides fighting personnel, merchant seamen and war correspondents may vote. Australian diplomats abroad are not permitted to cast ballots.

Australian jurisdiction is divided between the Commonwealth and State parliaments in much the same manner as it is divided in Canada between the Dominion and Provinces. In some respects, however, the Canadian Federal government has a broader jurisdiction than has the Australian Central government.

Australia, however, has the power to amend its own constitution whereas in Canada any changes in the British North American Act have to be made by the British government at the request of the Dominion government.

After the six Australian States federated in 1901, the Central government was given peace-time powers in 39 specific matters which ranged from trade and commerce to civil and criminal law.

The Commonwealth government now is asking for 14 additional powers which will carry over five years after the war ends.

They are:

1 Re-instatement and advancement of war veterans and the advancement of service personnel who have died or been disabled as a consequence of war.
2. Employment or unemployment.
3. Organized marketing of commodities.
4. Companies laws so that they will be uniform throughout the Commonwealth
5. Trusts, combines and monopolies.
6. Profiteering and prices (but not prices or rates charged by state or semi-governmental or local governing bodies for goods and services).
7. The production and distribution of goods with certain limitations requiring approval of state governments.
8. The control of overseas exchange and overseas investments.
9. Air transport.
10. Uniformity of railway gauges.
11. National works, but the central government must receive the consent of a state government before starting work in any state.
12. National health in co-operation with the states.
13. Family allowances.
14. The people of the aboriginal state.

Division of jurisdiction between the Federal Government and the Provincial Governments, in Canada, for instance, does not coincide with the divisions between the Federal and State Parliaments in Australia.

There has never been any disagreement in Canada as to the Federal Governments authority to look after the welfare of war veterans or their dependents. However, in the case of employment and unemployment there is required cooperation with the provinces.

Air transport has been declared by the courts as within the jurisdiction of the Canadian Government and the Government there has never encountered difficulty in carrying out national works.

Health is a provincial matter, but Indians are wards of the Dominion Government.

Most of the personnel of the station are now R.C.A.F. and it is expected that personnel will be entirely R.C.A.F. within a month. Training of fleet air arm personnel will continue.

Claim Bulgaria Seeking Peace

LONDON, Aug. 17—(CP)— The German Transocean Agency said to-day in a Berlin broadcast that the Bulgarian parliament would hold an extraordinary session tomorrow to hear a statement on the nation's foreign policy.

There have been unconfirmed reports from Turkey and other Mediterranean listening posts recently that Bulgaria was seeking a way out of the war. One unverified Istanbul report said the Bulgars were seeking to negotiate an armistice through Turkey.

CANADA'S NAVY

In 1939 - 15 SHIPS
In 1944 - 650 SHIPS

THAT'S WHY GASOLINE IS SHORT!

WITH more than 43 times as many warships as in pre-war years ... with naval needs for fuel oil and other petroleum products increased more than 2300% over 1939 requirements ... with more ships and faster ships patrolling the seas—the war-time oil consumption of Canada's Navy has far outstripped anticipated demand.

Canada now has her own "flat-tops", providing air cover for convoys. She has swarms of nimble anti-submarine craft that circle slow-moving cargo boats—often travelling twice as far each trip as the merchantmen they are protecting. She must re-fuel numbers of Allied ships which call at Canadian ports.

All the fuel oil for these naval enterprises—together with all the gasoline and other petroleum products needed by Canada's Army, Air Force, war industry, agriculture and essential transportation and civilian use—must come from one common petroleum pool. If our fighting men are not to go short ... if our limited supplies are not to be spread dangerously thin in places where they are urgently needed—then we, on the home front, must draw as little from the pool as possible.

Remember, the equivalent of 6 gallons out of every 10 gallons of gasoline used in Canada come by ocean tanker. We are not self-supporting for oil and every gallon we use needlessly or wastefully not only robs Allied sailors, soldiers and airmen of "fighting" gas and fuel oil—but diverts precious tanker transportation. Remember this. Remember—petroleum powers the attack—not a drop must be wasted.

HUN RESISTANCE CRUMBLES IN SOUTH

Allies Drive Close To Toulon Port

7,000 Prisoners Captured Count Incomplete

By EDWARD KENNEDY
Associated Press Staff Writer

ROME, Aug. 18 (AP) — Enemy resistance in Southern France was officially reported crumbling today before the advance of Allied forces, now consolidating into a mighty striking force by the union of all the elements landed on the Riviera beachhead from the sea and air.

German prisoners, including a general and his staff, were estimated to total 7,000 with the count still incomplete.

Maj.-Gen. Alexander M. Patch's forces struck inland through the valleys of the Maritime Alps and spread out 50 airline miles along the coast both east and west.

Last official reports placed them within 10 miles of the once great French naval base of Toulon and within six miles of Cannes. German broadcasts hinted that the resort town already had been penetrated.

Hold Lateral Road

The Allied forces already possess a big chunk of the main lateral road across Southern France, which in this area parallels the coast about a dozen miles inland. They were a considerable distance along the road that runs into the Rhone Valley by way of Aix-en-Provence, [illegible] miles north of Marseille.

Reds Poised For Drive Into Prussia

2 Weeks' Battle Smashes German Resistance

By DANIEL DE LUCE,
Associated Press Staff Writer.

MOSCOW, Aug. 18 —(AP) — Gen. Ivan Cherniakhovsky's 3rd White Russian Army, poised on the very frontier of East Prussia, was reported massing to-day for a crossing of the Szeszuppe river which would carry Soviet forces onto German soil for the first time in this war.

(A Reuter's News Agency report said the river has been crossed).

The forces of the 37-year-old tank expert, after battling for two weeks against fresh Nazi infantry and armor in Western Lithuania, succeeded in smashing German resistance and advancing to the east Prussia border yesterday, a Soviet communique announced.

The Germans launched a futile assault northwest, west and southwest of Siauliai in Lithunania.

Soviet front reports said enemy losses were heavy as the Nazis threw in waves of tanks and infantry in an unsuccessful effort to break through into the area of the 3rd White Russian Army. Gen. Ivan Bagramian's 1st Baltic Army joined Gen. Cherniakhovsky's flank guards in the stubborn battle.

East Prussia, where decisive battles of the First Great War were fought, was threatened by three powerful Russian Armies along a front nearly 200 miles long, extending from Northern Poland at a point South of the Suwalki triangle northward beyond the Niemen river in Northern Lithuania.

The 3rd White Russian Army was reported 40 miles east of the rail city of Insterburg and 85 miles from the East Prussian capital city of Konigsberg, both astride its direct western route. It captured 30 settlements in the last 24 hours.

The Szeszuppe river, a tributary of the Niemen ,is the north-eastern frontier of East Prussia for more than 25 miles. The Red Army push was believed concentrated north of Eydtkuhnen from bases at Vilkaviskis.

Meanwhile Soviet offensives in Estonia and west of the Vistula bend south of Warsaw scored new successes, while east of the besieged Polish capital continuing Nazi counter-attacks were repulsed.

Believe It Or Not

London, Aug. 18 (CP)

SWEDEN, hotbed of stories which may or may not be true but which at least are always interesting, provides this pair of believe-it-or-nots.

The current Viennese joke about the German retreat from Russia is that when German soldiers heard that Hitler was coming to Russia to visit them "they love him so much they ran 120 miles back to greet him."

The other story deals with shortage of military reserves in the German army. Deaf and dumb troops are said to be on garrison duty in Norway where also blind telephone operators are being used.

All Escape Routes To Paris Believed Severed
New Trap Forms Near Rouen

Canadian Troops Practically Complete Trap Of Germans Beyond Falaise
Poles, British, Canadians Stage Advances

LONDON, Aug. 18—(CP).—American tanks thundered into the immediate environs of Paris today in what appeared to be a new round-up of German forces retreating toward Rouen on the Seine, and Canadian troops virtually sawed off the Falaise pocket. The Canadians accomplished the sawing-off by stabbing to within two miles of Chambois, seven miles northeast of Argentan and nine miles west of Gace. These attacks by Canadian, British Polish, Belgian and Netherlands' troops had the effect of lengthening the narrow funnel through which the Germans were attempting to escape.

British troops advanced four to six miles beyond Troarn along the Normandy coast toward Le Havre, taking Varaville, four miles beyond the Orne and two miles from the coast, and three other villages, St. Julien, Le Faucon and Ecots.

Polish troops, advancing six miles northeast out of Trun, captured Les Champeaux.

S. S. troops were in the van of the flight ahead of them.

Cross River

In the bottom of the pocket, meanwhile, British and American troops rapidly closed out the gap, crossing the Rouvre River against only slight resistance.

"American armored patrols are operating in the vicinity of Paris," said a correspondent with the United States forces, and the German radio declared the American columns were waging a "war of movement" within 12 miles of the French capital.

The Paris radio had been off the air 24 hours, a possible indication that the Germans either were destroying communications facilities in Paris or that the situation was so chaotic that radio channels were unable to operate.

The Americans were within sight of the Eiffel Tower, and Partisians continued to hear the roar from the gunfire which would spell their liberation from four years of Nazi rule.

With but one good bridge available for flight over the Seine, the shift of the German retreat toward Rouen was taken to mean that their escape route to Paris already had been closed, and that the Seventh Army was unable to defend Paris.

The German 7th Army was estimated to have been educed to between 40,000 and 100,000.

"We are pushing eastward along the whole of our northern sector," headquarters said in announcing the coastal thrust by the 1st Canadian Army in Eastern Normandy.

Urges Labor To Adopt Political Plan

TORONTO, Aug. 18 — (CP) — C. H. Millard, Chairman of the Political Action Committee of the Canadian Congress of Labor, today issued a 29-point manifesto of the C. C. L.'s political objectives, defining as the keystone of the program the provision of useful jobs at union wages for every man and woman able and willing to work.

Mr. Millard, an executive member of the C. C. L. and C. C. F. member of the Ontario legislature for York west, said in a statement summarizing the 3,300-word "labor program for political action" that the program had been prepared at a Conference attended by representatives of nearly all the largest unions affiliated with the C C L.

Stating that "organized labor must once and for all definitely adopt a positive political attitude" to provide security for workers, the Manifesto said:

"While our Congress had endorsed the C.C.F. as the political arm of labor in Canada and recommended to Congress unions that they become afiliated with it, organized labor as represented in our congress must adopt its own definite political program."

The program asked a general program of social security, including

600 Wounded Soldiers Reach Halifax

HALIFAX, Aug. 18 —(CP)—Hundreds of Canadan servicemen, most of the survivors of the bloody battle of Normandy, were trooping ashore today from the Canadian Hospital Ship Lady Nelson in port with more than 600 of the Dominion's fighting men from the land, sea and air force.

Laden with one of her biggest complements of the war, the Nelson carried besides the veterans of France, men wounded in Italy, air fighters of the R.C.A.F., a few navy men and the customary quota of men injured in training or sent home from Britain through illness or lowered category.

While an R.C.A.F. band beat out hot jive at the dockside, they walked or were carried down the gangplank to waiting hospital trains. The trains were to leave later in the day for the interior.

The great mass of new arrivals were men who had lived through the fierce early fighting on the Norman beaches.

The spirits of the returning troops were buoyed by cheering news from the fronts.

Only three days in France was the battle-life of Pte. Albert Picard of New Westminster, B.C., who lost a leg and a hand when a mortar bomb landed three feet from him. "It's tough to last only that long after years of training," the young soldier said, "but when you think of the fellows who never got past the beaches, it doesn't seem so bad."

Japanese Trying To Trap Chinese

CHUNGKING, Aug. 18.—(AP).—Japanese forces in Hunan province, striking simultaneously from north and south, are making a determined effort to cut off the retreat of Chinese troops which have been attacking the vital rail junction of Hengyang from the southwest, a Chinese army spokesman said today.

The spokesman, Maj.-Gen. C. C. Tseng, declared the enemy had brought two more divisions into Hunan from the Honan and Hanking areas, giving them a total strength of more than 10 divisions —or about 210,000 men—in the area southward from Changsha.

He said the Chinese were continuing their attacks in the Ichang area and the rice-bowl segment north of Tungting Lake to prevent the Japanese from sending further reinforcements to Hunan, where he estimated the invaders would need three more full divisions before they could renew their offensive southward.

Meanwhile, Chinese forces have run up against determined Japanese counter-attacks in fighting for Tengchung and the Burma road towns of Lungling and Mangshih, three main objectives of the western Yunnan offensive, a Chinese communique said.

Planes Raking Retreating Nazi Columns

LONDON, Aug. 18—(AP).—Allied planes scourged German troops both west and east of the Seine escape barrier today and smashed a comeback attempt of the German air force by shooting down 23 enemy planes in a series of air battles.

As doughty Allied fighters slashed at swarms of Focke-Wulfs and Messerschmitts in the air, heavy bombers campaigning against German forward air bases made two big raids.

A force of heavyweights bashed the Roye field, 70 miles north of Paris.

Then a second force of several hundred heavy bombers bombarded bases at Metz, Nancy-Essy, St. Dizier and Rommilly-Sur-Seine. They also hit an airplane factory near Metz.

Use Many Barges.

The Germans were reported concentrating hundreds of river barges on the Seine for a "Dunkerque" escape attempt.

The German Air Force staged a desperate 11th-hour attack over the battle front of northern France, but met a jolting setback.

In a frantic move to stem the merciless Allied raking of retreating German columns from the air, the enemy threw up an unusually large swarm of fighters.

Polish and R.A.F. fighter squadrons took them on and swiftly shot down 16 with a single loss.

Allies Paralyze Pacific Lanes With Huge Fleet

GENERAL HEADQUARTERS. South-west Pacific, August 18 — (AP). — An Allied air and naval blockade spread creeping paralysis to-day across vital sea lanes south of the Philippines, posing an ultimate threat to all Japanese holdings south of China

Already enemy garrisons on islands scattered along a distance of 800 miles are forced to rely on the "makeshift shipping," inadequate "for even essential items such as munitions and aviation gasoline."

A graphic picture of this mounting disaster for Japan was presented to-day in a south-west Pacific communique reporting the fifth air raid this month on the Philippines and the knocking out of 23 planes at neutralized Halmahera.

Allied Headquarters said Japan's big ships no longer dare venture south-east of a line curved from the Philippines through Celebes and Ceram. In that area, extending south toward Australia, are such enemy bases as Ceram, Amboina, Boerce, the Kai, Aroe and Tanimbar Islands.

To-day's communique reported the sinking of a 1,000-ton freighter in Davao Gulf, Southern Philippines, by aerial bombing. It also told of an 87-ton bombing of Halmahera where 88 planes have been destroyed or put out of action, practically all of them on the ground, in half a month's time.

At Pearl Harbor, announcement was made yesterday of another in a steadily growing series of strikes by land-based bombers on the Bonin Islands, 600 miles south of Tokyo. The planes attacked a seaplane base at Chichi Jima Tuesday.

Death Triangle Boxes Germans

By ROGER D. GREENE
Associated Press War Correspondent

ON THE FALAISE FRONT, Aug. 18 (AP)—A battle of annihilation on the grand Russian scale blazed toward a climax tonight in the Normandy trap. The next 48 hours probably will witness the final destruction by death or surrender of Field Marshal Von Kluge's doomed legions.

"The Germans are being knocked to bits as they try to escape," British headquarters officer said. Estimates this morning were that 40,000 to 100,000 Nazis of the broken 7th Army were being sealed in a new trap by a wide encircling manoeuvre

The Germans are milling around chaotically in a triangle of death defined by Falaise, Argentan and Trun.

"The trap is closing and the circle is being completed," a British staff officer said.

Attempting to crash through the enemy's gun-studded defences in the Falaise-Argentan gap, Gen. Montgomery in a surprise coup sent his forces on a wide sweep east of the Falaise exit, and was snapping shut the steel jaws of the trap in the Trun sector.

Feld Marshal Von Kluge apparently extricated the bulk of his armies, but remnants of several panzer divisions were known to be still inside the bulge.

A headquarters comentator said "quite a few" enemy troops escaped last night under cover of darkness.

Reds Claim Finns Murdering Karelians

LONDON, Aug. 18 —(AP)—Soviet Russia's "extraordinary state commission for investigating crimes committed on Soviet soil" today accused the Finnish government of "deliberately seeking to wipe out the population of the Karelian Republic" in order to turn the area "into a Finnish colony."

Pravda, the Communist party organ, was quoted as saying: "There is no difference between the two-legged beasts of a Lublin (Poland) camp run by German Fascists and Finnish two-legged beasts of the Karelo-Finnish camps of death."

Nazi Surrender City Of St. Malo

LONDON, Aug. 18.—(AP).— Col. Andreas Von Aulock has surrendered the city of St. Malo after holding out 11 days under heavy American fire.

The German High Command announced to-day that "the garrison of St. Malo succumbed to enemy superiority."

A wounded veteran of the Caucasus fighting who pledged to turn the battle of the Breton port into "another Stalingrad," Von Aulock was reported in a DNB broadcast to have messaged the Fuehrer: "Further resistance had to cease as a result of lack of food. The fight is over. Heil Hitler."

Allied headquarters confirmed that the St. Malo citadel had fallen, but gave no indication whether Von Aulock was captured.

H.M.C.S. Iroquois In Battle With Germans In Channel

By SUB. LT. FRANK HEALY
Royal Canadian Navy

ABOARD H.M.C.S. IROQUOIS AT SEA, Aug. 18.—(CP Cable). —For the second time in less than a week H.M.C.S. Iroquois, commanded by Cmdr. J. C. Hibbard, D.S.C., went into action off the German-held port of St. Nazaire, helping to sink or damage eight enemy ships in a running fight that lasted five hours.

Only a few days earlier, the Iroquois, a veteran of the Murmansk convoy run, helped disperse a German convoy of six ships.

The engagement off St. Nazaire developed early Wednesday as the guns of the Canadian Tribal class destroyer blasted a convoy made up of a German destroyer, two minesweepers and merchantmen.

In company with the Royal Navy cruiser Mauritius and destroyer Ursa, the Iroquois chased the fleeing enemy ships so close to shore that coastal batteries got the range. Shells from big guns came close and in the middle of the action we had to alter course to avoid enemy torpedoes, so the action was broken off as the enemy dodged behind sheltering islands.

The next encounter was with a German tanker attempting to skip back into St. Nazaire. Although shore batteries opened up again, we chased the tanker into shallow water and drove home the attack The Ursa and the Mauritius joined in the chase and the tanker was left in flames and sinking.

As we steamed away, contact was made with four more enemy ships moving along the coast. Dawn was just breaking and, still under fire from the shore, we closed the enemy. The first salvoes set two of them afire. The other two beached themselves.

It was then decided to go in and finish off those two—one minesweeper and one flak ship. As we approached, I could see the crews

Snipers Infest Florence City

ROME, Aug. 18 (AP)—The tense situation in the northern portions of Florence, into which German tanks yesterday were reported to have penetrated, was described officially as much easier today, but there still was a certain amount of enemy sniping from the northwest and northeast suburbs.

Activity along the rest of the Italian front as a whole remained slight, being limited almost entirely to minor patrol clashes and artillery duels. The enemy along the north bank of the Rano, however, showed increased sensitivity to American patrols, bringing down artillery concentrations at a number of points.

Indian patrols of the 8th Army found Rosano, 1½ miles south of Pontassieve in the Upper Tiber Valley, had been abandoned by the enemy, who also appeared to have given up some outposts further east.

American mortar fire destroyed four enemy boats in the Arno river north of Lalotta, and shell-fire knocked out one German self-propelled gun.

Belgians, Dutch Join Canadians

LONDON, Aug. 18 (CP Cable)—Belgian and Dutch troops are fighting with the 1st Canadian Army in France, it was officially revealed here today.

These two groups bring the number of non-Canadian units with Gen. Crerar's army up to four. When the 1st Canadian Army was revealed to be in the field it was announced that certain troops formerly with the British 2nd Army had been transferred to fight with the Canadians, and a little later it was made known that a polish armored division also had joined the Canadians.

Germans Burn Own Villages

LONDON, Aug. 18 (CP) — The retreating Germans are burning their own towns and villages along the East Prussian border to prevent their being of use to the advancing Russians, the Moscow radio said today.

(An NBC broadcast from Moscow said the Red Army was reported to have crossed into Germany. The Red Army reached the East Prussian boundary yesterday.)

The German communique said the Russians—mopping up an estimated 200,000 Germans trapped in the Baltic States—had crossed Lake Peipas and are established on the west shore in Estonia.

The Germans also announced they had lost Vilkaviskis in Lithuania, 12 miles from East Prussia, in a heavy tank battle in which large air formations participated.

The Moscow broadcast said Soviet fliers spotted fires along the whole East Prussian frontier.

"Schirwindt is burning," one flier reported, "let them burn it. Now they are burning their own towns, not ours."

Still Blows Up, Kills 4

Jury Find Owners Criminally Responsible

ACTON VALE, Que., Aug. 18. — (CP).—A coroner's jury last night found Leo Loiselle, 51, and Louis Victor Blanchard, 34, criminally responsible for the death of Blanchard's wife and three children who died of burns suffered when a still exploded in a nearby farmhouse last March.

Both men were also burned as a result of the explosion which took place in the farmhouse cellar.

Mrs. Blanchard, 26, Angele and Therese Blanchard, two-and-a-half year-old twins, and Charles Evariste Blanchard, five, died shortly after the still exploded. Another Blanchard child, Rosaire, four, recovered after several weeks in hospital. A fifth Blanchard child, three-month-old Fernan, suffered only minor burns.

25 Families Are Homeless

3 Million Dollar Fire Sweeps St. John's

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., Aug. 18. — (C PCable.)—Loss in the four-hour fire yesterday that swept through the business district of Harbor Grace was estimated to-day at from $3,000,000 to $4,000,000.

The fire left 25 families homeless but there were no fatalities or injuries.

Control of the fire was gained by Royal Canadian Navy fire crews and civilian firemen, who hurried 60 miles to the town north-west of this capital.

Among the buildings destroyed were two hotels, the post office with all the mail, a co-operative store, a United church and a telephone exchange. Most of the buildings were wooden.

Cause of the fire was not known.

Nimitz Plans Powerhouse Drive On Japs

PEARL HARBOR, Aug. 17 (AP)—A war of trip-hammer blows from American forces based in the strategic Marianas Islands is the outlook for Japan.

It will be a non-stop affair, says Admiral Nimitz, and the thrusts in various directions will be impelled by "powerhouse tactics."

The Admiral, who is Supreme Commander of the Pacific Ocean areas as well as commander of the Pacific Fleet, made these observations at Guam, Aug. 11, two days after the end of organized Japanese resistance on the reconquered American insular possession.

A despatch from AP War Correspondent Al Dopking, at Guam, delayed for security reason, disclosed today that Nimitz made his statements at a press conference during an open discussion of the war in the Pacific.

The 5th Fleet, under Admiral Raymond A. Spruance, and the 3rd Fleet, led by Admiral William F. Halsey, are ready, Admiral Nimitz said, "to wage the kind of war he has in mind. While one strikes, the other will plan a new operaion Saipan, Hinian and Guam in the Marianas will supply the bases "to move in various directions."

"We believe in powerhouse tactics," Admiral Nimitz told correspondents. "We carry all we have. We want what we undertake to go through. We have not reached the stage where we can hold anything back"

Foreseeing rapid transfer of reinforcements from the European theatre because of the favorable situation there, Admiral Nimitz nevertheless made it clear there would be no period of waiting in the Pacific.

Germans Admit Battle Lost

LONDON, Aug. 18—(AP).—Frankly admitting that the German army has lost the battle of Normandy, the Berlin radio today forecast further large-scale Nazi withdrawals in France, but asserted the High Command was gaining time for a revolution in German armament production which would change the whole aspect of the war.

Dr. Max Krull, D.N.B. military correspondent, declared in a broadcast that "the Normandy front has been liquidated by the Germans." Transocean quoted Adolf Hitler's newspaper Voelkischer Beobachter as saying:

"The situation in France has changed from June to July, and this confronts the German High Command with decisions of a new kind. No longer can the High Command attempt to hold the present front lines by improvised means of throwing in rushed-up reserves. Decisions of a major scale are impending — taking into account the inter-relation of the campaign in the west and the general coures of the war."

Beobachter then said the Germans were going to pull out of large sections of France. The reason for this, it added, was to "maintain operational freedom" pending a "revolution in German armament production."

The Tokyo radio asserted today in a domestic broadcast that Japanese diplomats and other Japanese nationals had left Paris for Berlin yesterday as the Allied armies neared the French capital.

Then the Ursa opened up on the flak ship. A second later we joined was a direct hit amidships. We fired in the bombardment. family allowances, "as a supplement to, but not as a substitute for, adequate wages." It urged socialization of banking and financial institutions, lay-off pay in addition to unemployment insurance in the postwar period and a rehabilitation program for members of the armed services, the Merchant Marine and fire-fighters who served overseas.

A national food policy aimed at providing good, cheap food for Canadians was proposed along with immediate establishment of a food planning commission including representatives of governments, labor, farmers and consumers. A public and co-operative effort to raise the rural standard of living was urged and one suggestion was for a program of rural electrification.

Wants New Homes

Construction of 500,000 new homes is urged. Retention of goverment control of crown industries is suggested as a means of realizing full employment. Co-ordination of various means of transportation "in a single scientific transport plan. without imparing the position of the employees" is also urged.

One point in the manifesto asked that privately-owned and operated radio stations "be taken over and integrated with the national system under the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation."

Other proposals were for: a program of public works, national fuel policy, free education "from primary school to and including university," a shorter work week, removal of wage controls, a Federal Collective Bargaining Code for all industry, improvement of working conditions through establishment of day nurseries and provision for two-weeks vacation with pay, labor representation on government boards and agencies, raising of income tax exemptions to $1,500 for married men and $1,000 for single men, encouragement of union-management production committees, development of the co-operative movement, abolition of the Senate, co-operation with other United Nations in postwar problems and representation for labor at all international conferences dealing with these matters.

pede the flight of German forces pulling out of Normandy, Allied Supreme Headquarters said.

Mosquitoes of R. A. F. Bomber Command hammered at the south Germany industrial city of Mannheim during the night and mines were laid in enemy waters, all without loss.

A small force of American heavy bombers, beginning the U. S. 8th Air Forces third year of operations, continued a drive against the Germans' few remaining front line air bases with an attack today on the field at Roye, 70 miles north of Paris.

In other operations yesterday R. A. F. Mosquitos plunged a profusion of bombs into Germans fleeing toward the Seine from the Falaise-Argentan gap Allied planes destroyed or damaged more than 400 vehicles during the day despite poor weather.

R.A.F. heavy bombers atacked shipping at beseiged Brest yesterday where elements of three trapped divisions might be attempting an escape.

was narrowed to two or three miles as Canadian and Polish troops captured Trun, 10 miles south-east of Falaise, after a speedy drive which mopped up a number of towns and villages.

Lt.-Gen. Crerar, 1st Canadian Army commander, described the Germans as "very groggy." Congratulating the Canadian forces which captured Falaise yesterday, Gen. Crerar said "we shall shortly knock him (the enemy) out."

Authon was captured by an American 3rd Army armored column in a lightning drive 21 miles due east of Chartres beyond the Aunay River.

(CBS quoted the BBC as saying U.S. spearheads had reached "the outskirts of Paris.")

Can Hear Guns

Giving instructions to Patriots within the city, a supreme command spokesman said over the American broadcasting station in Europe that "the day is not far off when you will have to rise and chase out the enemy and his accomplices."

"You can already hear the guns and soon you will hear the rumble of the tanks," the spokesman added.

In the eastern surge 1st Canadian Army forces captured Bures, 1½ miles north-east of Troarn, and plunged across the Dives River occupying Bassenville, three miles north-east of Troarn.

Other towns captured in this drive on the remnants of the German 7th Army included Mezidon and St. Pierre-Sur-Dives, on the Dives River, 14 and 18 miles south-east of Caen. North of Mezidon the Canadian Army troops reached the Dives north to beyond Troarn.

Forty and more miles east of Troarn Allied bombers yesterday had wrecked most bridges spanning the River Risle.

The supreme command threw another cloak of silence over operations north of Argentan and west of Paris but it was obvious that a new trap for the German 7th Army could be formed if the Americans drove to the Seine west of Paris.

(London newspapers printed German frontier reports saying Hitler's highest military advisers had urged him to withdraw German troops from all of France in the next four weeks or risk destruction of most of his forces.)

While it was apparent that Gen. Eisenhower could not overlook a chance to capture Paris quickly, it also was apparent that the Allies are not going to commit the same error as Hitler when he concentrated on the French capital instead of sticking strictly to the military opportunity of turning west on channel ports for a quick invasion of England.

In Brittany, the long siege of St. Malo ended when the rock-bound citadel finally sent up the white flag and 560 prisoners were taken. Brittany now is cleared of Germans except for garrisons in Brest, Lorient and St. Nazaire.

Among towns overrun as Lt.-Gen. Patton's American 3rd Army surged southward was Vendome, 43 miles south-east of Le Mans.

The Allied advances placed nearly a dozen key airfields in France within Allied possession.

"I was lucky to get ashore," Sgt. Grant said, recalling how he had seen landing craft destroyed on all sides of the vessel that took him in, "the mines were knocking them off like firecrackers."

Luckiest man of hte whole shipload, by his own figuring, was L. Cpl. Mike (Curly) Golembiaski of Winnipeg, whose skull stopped a machine gun bullet but who was able to walk under his own power to the landing craft that evacuated him from France.

"I guess there just wasn't much up there between the ears to get damaged," laughed big Curly as he ponted to the scar in the back of his head where the slug had gone in, and the spot on the right side where it came out. Apparently, the bullet had run around the outside of his head, between scalp and skull.

Storm Isolates Small Village

SMITH'S FALLS, Aug. 18.—Wind of cyclonic proportions tore through the village of Easton's Corners, some 12 miles southeast of here, Thursday, smashing barns and other buildings, and causing considerable other damage.

The village is isolated, telephone and hydro wires being down, while highways were blocked with great trees, uprooted by the wind.

The gale screamed through the village for some 20 minutes. Two large barns, a silo and a new shed on the property of Harold Halpenny were flattened. A car owned by William Connors was demolished when the barn came down, while N. B. Stewart, Smith's Falls oil salesman, narrowly escaped injury when his truck was damaged.

Barns and machine sheds of Anson Halpenny and Harold Patterson were shattered by the gale, while silos on the farms of Gordon Barber, Clarence Wilson and Douglas Empri also were damaged. Many windows in the village were broken by flying limbs. Roofs and chimneys also suffered from the 'twister.' Hail fell during the storm, seriously damaging apples and other crops. The storm confined itself to a narrow swath, and there was no wind or rain in the parched district about Smith's Falls.

Allies Drive

The situation in Southern France was going so well that Mediterranean air forces were able to divert heavy bombers to Balkan targets again. Tactical aircraft swept over the skies in support of ground troops without meeting any opposition.

The Nazi command had entrusted the defence of the invasion area to two German infantry divisions, the 242nd and the 148th. The main Allied thrust was made between those two divisions, creating considerable confusion among enemy troops already battered by bombing.

While the invaders have extended their beachhead 50 airline miles along the coast, actually it is double that distance because of the tortuous shoreline.

Officially the troops were reported 25 miles inland, but unofficial reports put them beyond 30 miles.

Eliminate Fort

The last pocket of resistance on the Hyeres Islands off the coast was eliminated when big guns of an Allied battleship pounded the thick walls of a medieval fort on the island of Port-Cros.

Fall of La Napoule, coastal village four miles south-west of Cannes, gave the troops a full view of the resort city across the Gulf of Napoule.

A naval communique disclosed that aircraft carriers were being used with British and American planes not only to give cover to warships but to bomb and strafe enemy positions.

A stream of reinforcements and supplies continued to pour into the beachhead from the sea without interference, naval officials said.

Warships that bombarded the shore in the invasion operations fired almost 16,000 shells of five-inch calibre and above, and of these 12,500 were 12-inch or larger. Results were reported as "most effective in neutralizing enemy artillery."

Front dispatches said last night that infantrymen had broken through German anti-invasion defences before Toulon, which had been swung against them at right angles to the shoreland.

Surging inland in a great arc behand the 50-mile-long beachhhead, the invading French, British and American troops yesterday seized 5 strategic road centres, cutting two main highways linking the Germans in the Eastern Riviera sector with those of Toulon and Marseille.

Canadian assault troops, believed to be part of the Canadian-American special service force which fought on the Anzio beachhead earlier this year, also took part in the landings and two Canadian warships carried some of the invasion forces.

A dispatch from Sub.-Lt. Scott Young, Royal Canadian navy public relation officer, said Canadian-American assault troops went ashore on Isle Du Levant, off the coast just south of Cape Negre. Headquarters said to-day Isle Du Levant and the neighbouring Isle De Port-Cross have been cleared of the enemy.

2 Canadian Ships.

The Canadian warships were the Prince David and the Prince Henry, former luxury coastal liners which have been converted into auxiliary cruisers. Both took part in the Normanding landings as well.

Draguignan, 18 miles inland in a north-westernly direction from captured St. Raphael on the coast, was the largest town engulfed yesterday. The others were Vidauban, Le Luc, Besse and Cuers— all on a trunk highway leading southwestward to Toulon. Cuers is only 11 miles from Toulon.

Disaster In Normandy, Brittany Places Huns In Dangerous Spot

By DEWITT MACKENZIE—Associated Press War Analyst

Hitler's defeat in northwestern France has reached a magnitude that has dragged the harried corporal face to face with the urgent problem of "where do I go next?"—a tough question for the dictator who again is shouting that "Germany will never surrender." Hitler's intuition must be roaring into his ears that he ought to form a strong defensive line north of the Seine River, which runs through Paris to the English Channel. And he ought to continue that line along the historic Marne River, which joins the Seine close to the capital and flows eastward from there.

Such a line, of which Paris would form a mighty central anchor, would protect northernmost France. It would guard the vital Nazi coastal defences along the English Channel. and the launching grounds of the robot bombs. Finally—and not to be forgotten for a moment in Germany's dire peril—it would shield the Hitlerite escape route through Belgium into the Fatherland.

That's what the Nazi chief ought to do and undoubtedly intended to do. But in his stubborness to hold what he has stolen he's been crowded into an impossible position almost overnight by the disaster in Normandy and Brittany, and the invasion of Southern France.

Annihilation of enemy forces is what the Allies are after. When the Allies struck Hitler in France he had some 65 divisions for all western Europe. More than 30 of these have been terribly cut to pieces, and in some cases virtually wiped out, in the Normandy-Brittany battle.

That leaves the dictator with maybe 30-odd divisions, or say 350,000 soldiers—plus what he can salvage from the wreckage in northwest France. He can't spare troops from the volcanic Russian front.

Ford Company 40 Years Old

WINDSOR, August 18 — Ford Motor Company of Canada, Ltd., was 40 years old Thursday. The anniversary passed without ceremony as the 15,000 workers at the huge plant here finished the day with the company's war production at 338,978 military vehicles, representing more than 50 per cent of all mechanized transport for the United Nations made in Canada since war began.

The historical milestone occurred with the Ford plant concentrating on war work, for no passenger cars have been built since April, 1942.

Production totals yesterday showed that the company, in making 338,978 military vehicles, has turned out 50 different types of transport for the fighting fronts, ranging from field artillery tractors to self-propelled anti-aircraft gun trucks. Included in war production has been almost continuous output of the universal carrier, the all-purpose fighting machine which Ford alone makes in Canada. Carrier No 27,678 capped the day's production.

Including the military units, it was announced, the company has manufactured 1,893,162 Fords since it went into business in Canada 40 years ago. The start came in a wagon factory with 17 men on the payroll In the first year they turned out 117 Fords by asembling parts imported from the United States. Passenger Fords in those days were natty little bright red cars with open tonneau.

During the Ford war program, company technicians have saved more than $10 million through improvements in design, short cuts in manufacturing methods, introduction of better materials, etc. On the universal carrier alone they have made almost 2,000 suggestions which have been adopted and have saved the country large sums.

Son Of Navy Family Praised In Despatches

TORONTO, Aug. 18.— "This is very pleasant news, indeed. We are very proud of Phillip," commented Captain George D. Frewer, 196 Indian Road, veteran "sea-dog" of nearly a half-century's experience, when informed that the youngest of his three sailor-sons, Lieut. Phillip G. Frewer, 21, had been mentioned in despatches. He is a grandson of F. M. Dela Fosse, 457 Water street.

The Toronto officer was one of 22 Canadian naval officers and ratings who were decorated or mentioned in despatches for daring exploits in the English channel in the pre-invasion days. Lieut. Frewer and nine of his shipmates of the Canadian destroyer Haida were listed for a channel engagement in which a German destroyer was driven on the rocks in flames.

"We hear from Phillip regularly but he can't tell us very much," his father said. "He mentioned in one letter that the Haida was engaged in cross-channel night sweeps, looking for U-boats and small enemy surface craft."

Enlisted When 18.

Philip attended the University of Toronto Schools and "The Grove," Lakefield, and was in his second year in Commerce and Finance at Trinity College, University of Toronto, when he enlisted in the navy on his 18th birthday. He took his officer's training at Royal Roads and, upon graduation, was assigned to H.M.C.S. Prince Robert, as a sub-lieutenant. Later he was sent to Scotland where he joined H.M.C.S Haida before the Tribal class destroyer was commissioned. He has been serving on the Haida ever since, and shared in that gallant ship's great work against the enemy. She is believed to have taken part in more actions than any other Canadian warship.

The accident was investigated by Provincial Constable Russell Pollard of Port Hope.

Hospitals For Wounded Soldiers

Everyone in Canada wants our wounded soldiers to have the best possible hospitals and treatment when they come back from the fighting fronts; here in Peterborough our interest in this matter has been increased recently by the decision of the Department of Pensions and National Health to use the local Staff House as a military hospital. We have all seen this building, and we know what it is like. We are not impressed, therefore, by the assertion of Dr. Herbert Bruce of Toronto that the Government has been scurrying around, picking up any old buildings it could for use as hospitals. The Staff House is not 'any old building'; it is a fine new building with many characteristics which will make it a first-rate hospital or convalescent home. The hostel which has been taken over in Kingston as a military hospital is another new building which is well suited to its new purpose. Dr. Bruce will not convince anyone with his talk of unsuitable buildings when we can all take a walk along Monaghan Road and see what the situation really is.

But Dr. Bruce's criticism is part of a campaign to discredit the Department of Pensions and National Health, and in particular the Hon. Ian Mackenzie. The Examiner holds no brief for Mr. Mackenzie or his staff; they have made mistakes, like other governmental officials, and they have done some very good work, too. Dr. Bruce is not prepared to admit that any good work has been done, and he has put himself—or has been put by more powerful agents—at the head of an unrelenting and contumacious attack on the Minister and his Department. First of all Dr. Bruce declared that the Department had no accommodation for wounded men in Canadian hospitals; it did not take long to show that he did not know what he was talking about. Then he turned his attention to Christie St. Hospital in Toronto, and in time the Toronto morning paper declared that it was incompetent to handle its own patients; this, also, was shown to be untrue. Then the wind veered slightly, and the charge was that the hospital had not enough beds; now it has been shown that the hospital has plenty of beds. Now the charge is that the hospital is badly located.

This charge really has firm foundations. Christie Street Hospital was set up as an emergency hospital during the last war by a Union Government which was, in effect, Conservative. Why it was put where it was, nobody now knows; it is noisy, and it is in a dirty part of Toronto. It should have been abandoned for a better place long ago, and it is to the shame of the Liberal and Conservative governments which have held office between the two wars that they never moved it. But we have no record that Dr. Bruce expressed himself on this matter when Lord Bennett was in power, and when he might have done so to advantage. Nor has he paid any attention to the influence which the robot bombs have had on the hospital situation in Canada. Britain had undertaken to care for a great number of wounded Canadians in hospitals in the British Isles; now that the robot bombs have made London hospitals unsafe it has been necessary to send great numbers of London patients to hospitals in the country which would otherwise have been available to our men. That is why we have to prepare for an unexpected number of wounded Canadian soldiers in this country.

On the evidence of patients, Christie Street has an excellent staff and excellent equipment, but it is not well placed. Very well; Sunnybrook will be built to replace it, and its situation is admirable. For the rest, there are now 8,000 beds available for wounded soldiers in Canada, and 7,000 more will be ready by Christmas; the total number of beds for wounded soldiers in the Dominion will then be 200,000. The campaign which Dr. Bruce has led against Mr. Mackenzie has shrunk from a sweeping indictment of all the Department's works to a complaint that Christie St. Hospital is noisy and dirty—a fact which has been clear to anyone who visited the institution during the past 20 years. Dr. Bruce and his faction have great faith in the power of sheer misrepresentation and nagging if they think that they can alarm the people of Canada on this count, when there is so much other evidence of careful attention to the needs of our wounded men.

A Sortie In The Word War

Last night we were reading H. L. Mencken's admirable book The American Language, and happened on that paragraph in which the American scholar predicts that in time the usages of his country will supplant those of England as correct English. It may be so, and we have no intention of disputing it here, but as a fighter in the Word War we pray and trust that it will never become accepted usage to copy this passage from a recent article by the eminent columnist, Miss Dorothy Thompson:

> "If he wants to read what is happening he will have to wait until he can get a pass out to buy a paper. On account of why? On account of we are governed by men who put their parties above their country, and on account of we have some one in the legal branch of the War Department who is just as bad".

There is no reason on earth to say "On account of why?" when one simply means "Why?" But hundreds of thousands of people do it, and now Miss Thompson has put it in print. Like the clumsy "in back of", meaning "behind" it substitutes a cumbrous expression for a single useful word. Resist "on account of why?", Word Warriors, as you would the Devil, and take care that you do not say "Get thee in back of me, Satan", as you do it. "On account of", for because, is mere illiteracy, and Miss Thompson knows it.

We should like to say a word about the use of the word "alibi" as a synonym for "excuse", and also as a verb—"He alibied his way out of it". "Alibi" is a Latin word meaning elsewhere, and when a man produces an alibi in court, he shows evidence that he was elsewhere at the time the crime was committed. To call every excuse an 'alibi' merely abuses a term which has a strict legal meaning, and introduces a word into English which we do not need.

The Idiocy Of War

A report from France tells of a heavy attack on a portion of the Canadian 1st Army by 700 bombers of the Royal Air Force Command. The attack lasted for an hour, and many of our men were killed and wounded.

This attack was the result, no doubt, of some error in calculation; such errors are common in war, and many men who were in the war of 1914-18 can recall being under fire from their own artillery. It is experiences like these which bring to mind Macbeth's indictment of life as—> a tale

> Told by an idiot, full of sound and fury,
> Signifying nothing.

The soldier can experience nothing more utterly discouraging, disillusioning or embittering than violent assault from his own comrades; for the time being they are enemies, as implacable in their purpose, and as worthy of intense hatred as those who wear the enemy's uniform. But there is nothing that he can do about it. War is not an exact science, and mistakes cannot be avoided. In such predicaments the soldier, far more than the pacifist, realizes the profound idiocy of war.

Credit Where It Is Due

We have often commented in these columns on the tendency of the American press and the American newsreel editors to take the line that American forces are fighting the war single-handed. But this complaint, like so many of the kind, is general and must be mitigated in many specific instances. For instance, we have at hand a copy of the Boston Herald of August 9, the heading of which is "Canadians Loosen Caen Hinge", in the largest type, dominating the front page. The same day the Evening Item of the same city carries the line, "Canadians Breach Paris Line". The Boston Globe says "Canadians Smash Nazis"; no newspapers could possibly have given greater prominence to the good work of the Canadian forces.

This is the sort of generosity which builds up goodwill between neighbours and allies. The primary job of a good newspaper is not to pander to local patriotism, but to give credit where it is due. The Boston papers have treated Canada on this principle, and Canadians appreciate it.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Most people stand adversity better than prosperity because they get more practice with it.

Party Positions

By B. I. RICHARDSON

OTTAWA: The 1944 banking inquiry will settle a number of puzzling questions regarding the central economic problem of our times, namely, the attainment and maintenance of prosperity after the war. The average citizen, if slightly indoctrinated with monetary ideas, will want to know how the monetary reformers made out at the banking committee. They were on trial, for they have roused hopes by insisting that a life of abundance is feasible, and the banking committee provided an arena of debate in which all proposals related to money and banking could be put forward and dissected.

On this phase of the banking inquiry, one discovers some strange situations, such as Mr. McGeer arriving in precise agreement with Finance Minister Ilsley after arguing day in and day out, so the spectators thought, for changes in wartime financial policy. Mr. McGeer's performance before the banking committee was disappointing. Every time Mr. McGeer made a speech, able members of the committee had a Roman holiday with his arguments, pricking the balloons of his oratory one after the other.

One the crucial question of causes of depression and measures to avoid it, the McGeer theory sheds little light. Through hundreds of pages his jeremiad was that the load of debt left by the war will drag us all down to ruin. On the other hand, he examined the depression and blamed it on withdrawal of credit by the banks. "The banks," he said, "were behind the stock boom, and the banks were definitely responsible for the collapse that came in 1929." (P. 6274, unrevised Hansard.) So we find Mr. McGeer warning of the future because of the creation of debt; and blaming the depression on the lack of credit, i.e., the lack of debt-creation!

"ONE of the easiest over-simplifications," Mr. Ilsley had observed when he introduced the bank amendments in May, "is to blame a major depression on the lack of credit." But the monetary reformers came back again and again to this assumption.

If Canada gets a depression after this war, some causes will lie inside Canada, others outside. When he testified on this problem, Mr. Towers ventured to argue that high employment after the war might be attained by three kinds of economic activity: external trade, capital investment and domestic consumption.

There was no serious disagreement with this proposition, which has become the dominant theme of Canadian thinking about Canada's economic future and, as one recognizes immediately by examining the legislative program completed in the recent session of Parliament, the foundation of government policy.

In the speeches of John Blackmore, the Social Credit leader, one finds reluctance to accept the philosophy outlined by Mr. Towers, but no convincing alternative. In Parliament, Mr. Blackmore's function has steadily declined into that of an insistent voice saying there is something wrong with the banking system. At the end, Mr. Blackmore could only say (p. 6165, unrevised Hansard) "There must be something wrong with the banking system....What that is I believe we ought to study with the greatest thoroughness." One would think that after ten years in Parliament Mr. Blackmore would have established his case on money and banking.

The Blackmore cast of mind was plainly revealed at the banking inquiry. He is an economic isolationist, a romantic who believes heaven is only a step away, if certain conditions are fulfilled. The harsh fact that his assumptions are impossible makes little impression on the hard armor of his optimism.

"I cannot escape the conviction," he said, "that if Canada had been entirely an island separated completely from the rest of the world, it would have been possible to have devised and erected a financial and economic system in Canada which could at least have enabled the people of Canada to enjoy the results of the potential economic activities of the people of this country." (P. 6163, Hansard.)

In an editorial urging "social credit" as a simple recipe for abundance, the Ottawa Citizen recently voiced disillusion over the Social Credit group in Parliament, which has "tended to become sidetracked into negative politics."

AFTER failing to secure majority support for the principle of nationalizing the banks, the C.C.F. members were somewhat handicapped in discussing their favorite thesis in the field of money and banking, because of the rule that once a matter is disposed of by the House, that settles it for the session. The C.C.F. thesis is simply that Parliament must assume control of credit policy, not as at present through controlling the rules of the game, but through direct agents to which such control would have to be delegated. Its banking proposal shows the C.C.F. in its most collectivist mood, favouring direct bureaucratic control as we have had during the war and as we did not have during the depression. Mr. Knowles, for instance, deplored speeches that deplore "parliamentary control in the economic life of our country." Such speeches did not "face up to the alternative." But the long inquiry did reveal that many members clearly recognize the alternatives in economic organization, which are the regimentation of collectivism on the one side and the freedom of the liberal society on the other.

Against the background of the world's most ferocious war, the weight of blame to be laid upon the money system for mankind's ills is debatable. The banking committee examined the charges pro and con, and no one can say that every proposition was not examined carefully. The dire predictions of ruin unless this or that idea were accepted, were received with due respect. The devices of credit and money were re-examined and, as noted before, the controls were revised in some particulars. But Parliament turned down the idea of wholesale change.

Feeding the Armies

One of the oldest maxims of war is that an army marches on its belly. The vast scale and the mechanization of modern warfare have given food production a greater military importance than ever. Without supplies from the Dominions we should have fared ill and the total power of the United Nations would be far below its present strength. Mr. Curtin's full statement recently on the strategical basis of Australia's war effort in the allocation of labour power to the armed forces and to fields and factories sets forth sacrifices and achievements of which his country may well be proud. The proportion of Australian manhood in the forces and in essential production was 72 per cent last year, when 75 per cent was our figure. In the other Dominions, Canada, South Africa, New Zealand with their varying circumstances, the records are of the same order. — London Daily Telegraph.

The Size Of The Cake

(By GRANT DEXTER)

THESE are piping times of social progress. In recent weeks we have had family allowances and a measure for slum clearance. Health insurance is being studied and will perhaps be proceeded with next year.

In the United Kingdom there has been the Beveridge report calling for hundreds of millions sterling of increased expenditure and additional measures on education, housing and rural and urban planning. In the full employment white paper, which was debated at length in the House of Commons at Westminster in the closing days of June, the emphasis was placed on what was termed measures of "collective consumption." And still more recently the Trades Union Congress has decided to press for a 44 hour week, with no reduction in earnings.

These developments have drawn a timely comment from The Economist of July 1. It is reproduced in part herewith:

"What is happening at present is that everybody is busy disputing about the size of the slice of cake that each is to receive after the war. Labour's slice is not only to be large but regular. There is to be a slice for education and a slice for planning and a slice for health and a slice for housing, a much larger slice for the armed forces and several slices for social security. But no one is concerning themselves with the size of the cake. On the contrary, there is a universal tendency to assume that providence will take care of that. Even the Chancellor of the Exchequer, orinarily so cautious, tells the House of Commons he is sure the country will be able to secure the necessary increase of its exports by 50 per cent. But how?

"If the government have any idea of the means by which this very great increase can be achieved, they are keeping singularly quiet. Perhaps it can be done; but only by enlisting the utmost efforts of all concerned....Or again, learned discussions are conducted on the subject of distributing between different uses a large prospective increase in the national income. But on what are these spacious expectations based? It is true that there are certain indications of greatly increased productivity after the war. But to rely on these signs for a post-war prophecy would be most dangerous.... The present mood of the country is not merely to expect economic miracles, but to expend them before they arrive. It cannot be too often repeated that all the rosy dreams of the present depend entirely upon the size of the national income."

Commenting on the T.U.C. demand for the 44 hour week, the Manchester Guardian asks:

"Can we raise our wage costs by something like 20 per cent at a time when our need for competitive ability has become more vital than ever before?"

THESE comments have a direct application to the Canadian scene. Family allowances, slum clearance, health measures and the like are all highly desirable and to be striven for. But the stubborn fact remains that they cost hard cash and the cash must be obtained by the government by taxation. Taxation can only be obtained out of profits in trade. The burden may be deferred for a time by borrowing, by deficit financing, but sooner or later it must be shouldered.

The attitude of the C.C.F. in every case is one of lofty contempt that the rate of progress should be so slow and the actual measures so niggardly. The C.C.F. is not concerned with the practical problem of finding the money. The Conservative reaction is contradictory to damn the measures and then vote for them.

The Liberal attitude has been to face the responsibility of payment. Mr. King in his speech on family allowances (page 5456, unrevised hansard) emphasized the fact that:

"We in this country depend very largely on foreign markets. We are doing all we possibly can to help to secure foreign markets when the war is over."

In other words, the Liberal party is endeavoring to make sure that the national cake will be big enough to go round.

By Rocket To The Moon

(HAMILTON SPECTATOR)

AWAY back in the Eighteenth Century, Thomas Gray, famous for his "Elegy Written in a Churchyard", composed a Latin poem, wherein he limned men flying in air boats to the moon. The vision of the youthful poet became fantastic fiction in the Nineteenth Century, when Jules Verne and Mr. H. G. Wells wrote of the first voyage of discovery to our satellite.

In the twentieth, voyages to the moon were pedestrian to the imagination of youth, brought up on Buck Rogers, a hero who stepped into a planet ship for a flight to Venus or Uranus, with the nonchalance that ordinary people board a bus or train. But while most of their elders consider a trip to the moon an incredible fancy, fit only for the brains of comic strip artists and poets, there is today in England an organization of physicists, chemists and plane engineers, who regard a flight to our satellite as eminently practicable.

A chief problem of interplanetary travel is the vacuum of space. Propellers will not propel without an atmosphere. Mr. Wells got over the difficulty by fancying the discovery of an anti-gravitational element. The hollow ball which took his first men to the moon had shutters of this imaginary metal, which were closed or opened to steer the space ship to or from a planet. A more prosaic invention has solved the difficulty of travel in airless space. It is the rocket.

A rocket plane, scientists assure us, having made experiments, will travel just as well in a vacuum as in air. In fact, a rocket will travel faster in a vacuum for there is no resistance. Fifteen years or so ago, just before the depression, there was much talk of rocket experiments. In the first attempt the rocket travelled only 75 seconds. But to imaginative scientists, this was encouraging. The first flight of the Wright plane at Kitty Hawk was only 12 seconds. Today the people of London know from tragic experience that the rocket projectile is no idle dream.

On this side of the Atlantic the most noted experimenter with rockets is Professor R. H. Goddard. A physicist at Clark University, Worcester, Mass., he sent up the first liquid-fueled rocket in 1923 and continued his researches in secrecy in the New Mexican desert under the auspices of the Smithsonian Institute. When war broke out he went to Washington and disappeared from unofficial ken.

Professor Goddard has visions of shooting a rocket to the moon, where it would explode an immense charge of flash powder sufficient to be seen from the Earth. The group of astronauts in Britain have more ambitious plans. They have already designed a 1,000-ton space ship for a flight to the moon, but will try first to shoot rockets 60 miles upwards.

The moon is 240,000 miles distant, but the projected British rocket ship, attaining a speed of 20,000 miles per hour, would, it is estimated, reach the moon in 48 hours. It would carry three men, and to avoid a landing crash will be braked with auxiliary rockets. They would return to the earth from a portable landing platform.

Despite these sanguinary visions, to the reflective laymen the difficulties appear great. Very delicate calculation, in an unknown medium, the moon's atmosphere, will be necessary to cushion the shock of arrival on the moon's surface, and when the existing platforms of German rocket bombs are known to be comparatively huge affairs, what sort of platform can be compressed within the rocket itself?

Scientific ingenuity may surmount these difficulties, and others, and the Twentieth Century may yet see the wild dream of the Eighteenth come a reality. At any rate, it will be more civilized to shoot rockets at the moon than, charged with high explosive, at mothers and their babes.

Who Has "Given" Most?

Mr. Cardin argues that Canada is thus paying "tribute' 'to Britain, "a country or a people far richer at this time, and likely to remain so long after the war is over, than Canada herself." We think he exaggerates the wealth of the Mother Country. She will not emerge from this war the rich nation she was before it. She will have huge debts and obligations. Canada, on the other hand, has great natural resources and has suffered no physical injury from the war in the form of property destruction. She will emerge from the war with a heavy burden, but she will be able to carry it. Her people have been prosperous during a war in which the people of Russia and Britain have have suffered all sorts of deprivations.—Toronto Star.

A Bible Message

And they came over unto the other side of the sea, into the country of the Gadarenes. And when he was come out of the ship, immediately there met him out of the tombs, a man with an unclean spirit, who had his dwelling among the tombs; and no man could bind him, no, not with chains....

But when he saw Jesus afar off, he ran and worshipped him, and cried with a loud voice, and said, What have I to do with thee, Jesus, thou Son of the most high God? I adjure thee by God, that thou torment me not. For he said unto him, Come out of the man, thou unclean spirit. And he asked him, What is thy name? And he answered, saying, My name is Legion: for we are many....

Now there was nigh unto the mountains a great herd of swine feeding. And all the devils besought him, saying, Send us into the swine, that we may enter into them.

And forthwith Jesus gave them leave. And the unclean spirits went out, and entered into the swine: and the herd ran violently down a steep place into the sea, (they were about two thousand;) and were choked in the sea. And they that fed the swine fled, and told it in the city, and in the country. And they went out to see what it was that was done.

And they come to Jesus, and see him that was possessed with the devil, and had the legion, sitting, and clothed, and in his right mind. (Mark 5: 1-3, 6-9, 11-16.)

Unconsidered Trifles

A Land Army girl and a handsome farm lad were walking along a road together. The farm lad was carrying a large pail on his back, holding a chicken in one hand a cane in the other, and leading a goat. They came to a dark lane.

Said the girl: "Oh, it's so dark, here, that I'm afraid to walk with you. You might try to kiss me."

Said the farm lad: "How could I, with all these things I'm carrying."

"Well," suggested the girl, "you might stick the cane in the ground, tie the goat to it, and put the chicken under the pail."

A European visited a high Chinese official in Manchuria. He wished to engage the interest of the mandarin on behalf of his father, a mining engineer, who desired to acquire certain mining rights in that country.

The European had not been long in China and his knowledge of the language was limited. Accordingly he spent a considerable time endeavouring to explain in faltering Chinese the object of his visit and his father's ambitions.

The Chinese sat with inscrutable countenance while the European poured forth his tale, and at the end the visitor showed by his expression that he doubted whether the mandarin understood the purport of his message.

He was relieved of his anxiety when the mandarin leaned forward and touching him gently on the sleeve, said in faultless English accents "Tell your old dad to come and scratch wherever he likes."

It's Your Money

Sometimes we think that if more people un[illegible]derstood more clearly that the Government h[illegible] no money of its own, that everything it spend[illegible] for harbors or post offices or social security se[illegible]vices, must be paid for by the people themselve[illegible] there would be less enthusiasm for expenditur[illegible] and services—and lower taxes. Unfortunatel[illegible] very many people don't reason that way. Th[illegible] seldom think, if they think at all, about whe[illegible] government gets its money, or about where t[illegible] national income comes from, or about wh[illegible] might happen if that national income should b[illegible]come mortgaged too heavily. Their idea see[illegible] to be that the Government has some mysterio[illegible] money source of its own, that it doesn't have [illegible] cut its financial coat to its financial cloth; a[illegible] consequence all sorts of proposed expenditur[illegible] just so long as they are advanced n the na[illegible] of "progress" or of reform," are hailed with [illegible]claim—with consequent inevitable growth [illegible] bureaucracy, and costly overhead, and taxes.

An odd thing, too, is that many of the peo[illegible] who denounce "bureaucracy" are often f[illegible] among those who want more of State collect[illegible]ism demanding that the Government take o[illegible] and control and operate all sources of prod[illegible]tion. They don't seem to realize that their p[illegible]icies must lead inescapably to a horde of o[illegible]cials, to a government overhead which, un[illegible] the national income could in some way be [illegible]creased enormously, might bankrupt the co[illegible]try—this disregarding altogether the issues [illegible] personal freedom and individual initiative.—[illegible]tawa Journal.

THEATRE RECOGNIZED

The first royal licence for a theatre in England was issued in 1574.

More Decoration Shown On Fall Hats

Prepare to be dramtic, exotic, striking and definitely feminine, girls, if you want your mood to match the new fall hats now appearing on the fashion scene. It is said that it requires just the right touch to wear a hat and make it effective, so if the choice is one of the new turbans, which are bidding for top rung of the millinery ladder, get into the spirit, and be exotic and exciting. It would be practically impossible to match some of the more extreme styles, but turbans are definitely "in" and women who have a "yen" for them should start thinking of ensembles to set off this particular style.

One of the newest vogues, the asymmetric hat, would be hard to equal too, and it was designed to more or less balance the new side drapery fashions. Although they just teeter on the side of the head, and look as if they would take off in the first little wind, strategic draping and excellent styling, still manage to give them a "dramatic "effect, which is somewhat emphazised by various trimmings— a handful of sequins, some corded satin or satin flowers—seemingly placed there to heighten the suspense. It would be wise, when picking out a dress or hat with this draping, to make sure that the folds are on opposite sides, to make sure that the appearance—whether literal or imaginary— of walking at an angle, will not result.

For the woman who is not in the mood, at least at present, to be dramatic or exotic, there is a wide selection of other smart styles. Kinky felt pillboxes, for instance, bespangled with brilliants and topped with a little froth of veiling, or a sleek-looking satin pillbox, which sits at the front of the head and gives that perfect touch of elegance, are available in several colors, with tiny variations in styles or trims. There are a few sailors too, and felts with medium brims, pompadors and the always popular felt tam, set off this year with some corded satin trim.

Colors Unchanged.

Colors will not be much changed, with blacks and browns topping the list. Brighter shades which will be in demand this season, however, are moss green, which is very good, blue, rust, red, to suit the young folks, a few fuschias, and the occasional mauve. Trimming, however, has undergone a change. Whereas previousll, designers were content to decorate a hat with a swath of veiling, the occasional cliu, or a sprinkling of nice, subdued, brilliants, they have taken it upon themselves to sew all kinds of feathers, corded satin, sequins and glittering stones, cut felt flowers, and self-trimmed flowers all over the place. Veiling, although still stylish, is appearing on fewer models, and in less quantity, but it still manages to set off a style nicely.

Small Hats Losing.

The advent of the more "dramatic" hat has lessened the appeal of the little half-hat, although there are some styles available. They were striking in their own way, but there really wasn't enough of them to create the effect women are looking for this season. However, they'll be popping up again no doubt.

On the whole, the millinery forecast looks defintely promising, and with the fall nearly here, we'll soon get a chance to admire the new creations.

DOROTHY DIX . . . . .

HUSBAND, 54, WANTS DIVORCE

Middle-Aged Infatuation Is Tragic, Unhappy Mate Is Warned

DEAR DOROTHY DIX: I am a man 54 years old. Have been married thirty years to a woman whom I thought I loved. She has been a faithful wife and wonderful mother to our four daughters. But the trouble is I work in a defense factory and have fallen in love with another woman and my wife refuses to give me a divorce. Says it would be a disgrace to her and the girls.

Would it be advisable for me to leave the state and get a divorce so I can marry the woman I love? My daughters willingly will support their mother if I do but they will never forgive me and will abuse my wife.

MISERABLE FATHER AND HUBAND.

Don't Lose Self-Respect

ANSWER: Don't you think that you are playing it pretty low on your daughters to dump their mother's support on them in order that you may have the money you make to spend on another woman? It seems to me that a man can't be much more of a quitter than that.

You seem to be a more decent chap than that indicates and I warn you that if you play the dastardly trick you are contemplating on the women of your family that you will never have another minute's peace of conscience or any happiness. For you will have lost your own self-respect and that is more important to a man than anything else in the world.

If you were a young boy who had married before you were old enough to know your own mind or what you wanted in a wife, and then found some girl with whom you thought you had fallen in love, you might have some justification in asking your wife for a divorce, But such is not the case. You have been married to your wife for thirty years. You have been satisfied with her. She has been a faithful helpmate to you. You have absolutely no fault to find with her. And now you have decided that you are in love with someone else.

Can't you realize how foolish you are in wanting to swap her off for a strange woman? For at your time of life the days of ardent passsion are gone and if what you think is love flames up, it is just a flash in the pan and is soon over. Habit, congeniality, having adjusted themselves to each other is what makes for happiness in middle-aged people.

Don't throw this away for the thrill of a romance that wouldn't last a month after you were married to your charmer. Believe me, there is nothing so tragic as middle-aged infatuation.

DEAR MISS DIX: I have a son in the army who is devoted to his wife and who writes to me in every letter to go see his darling wife and comfort her in his absence." The "darling wife" has been unfaithful to him from almost the time that he left and she has climaxed her conduct by eloping with a paratrooper and leaving a letter to her mother asking her to take care of the baby, which nearly broke the mother's heart as well as my own.

What should I do? Should I write to my son and tell him about his wife? I cannot bear to think of adding anything else to what he is undergoing in this awful war.

A BROKEN-HEARTED MOTHER.

ANSWER: If your son's wife already has eloped with another man, I think that the kindest thing you can do is to write to your son and tell him about it. Tell him that the baby is in good hands as his mother-in-law has taken it. He is bound to hear about his wife. Some gossip is sure to write him. And, anyway, it is no kindness to let him go on living in a fool's paradise and dreaming of coming back to a faithless woman who has shamed him and deserted him and their baby.

THE STARS SAY . . . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

Under the current astral conditions there should be a concentrated effort made to place the affairs on a firm and solid economic and property basis, especially by use of the value of dependable sense of duty and obligation, either in business or personal contacts. Sound benefits, enhanced credit and wise use of funds may be expected by cultivating or seeking counsel from those of prestige and financial standing. Prudence, foresight and character are likely to assure promotion or possibly to secure gifts or inheritance. Be prudent in intimate or domestic affiliatons, as subtlety may cause distress.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of a year of success in placing their future and economic solidarity on a firm basis, with assured help from those in power and prestige. These may even be moved to the idea of bequests or substantial gifts, won by sense of obligation, fidelity or duty. Prudence and discretion should likewise dominate in social, domestic or affectional matters, lest there be duplicity or loss.

A child born on this day may possess much stability of character, with sound principles and aspirations, securing for it substantial rewards or encouragement from influential persons. It may inherit.

Quakers Whip Lock Girls In First Game

Quaker Oats fired the first gun in the Junior Ladies' League semi-final playoff series at Ashburnham Bowl, on Thursday evening, as they walked away with the game from Peterborough Lock by a score of 18 to 11, in seven innings of play, the game being called on account of darkness.

Twelve errors on the part of the Lock Company players gave the Quakers the openings they needed to run up the big count, although the Lock team gave a good account of itself when up to bat. The Quakers started the scoring in the first frame, and in the fourth and seventh innings, chased in as man as 6 runs during each frame.

Peterborough Lock ran in four runs in the fifth frame, followed by four more in the sixth. Isobel Varcoe in the sixth singled through short, and went to second on a passed ball. A single into right field clipped through Marg. Davall and Miss Varcoe and Mickey McFarland popped to second base, Myrtle Falls was out to Carlotta Laing, and Audrey Stinson singled into left field. Beryl Lee struck a powerful triple-base hit into left, to score Miss Stinson. Velma Crane made a beautiful running catch of Andrey Paton's fly into centre field, only to juggle and drop the ball and Miss Lee scored.

Three more runs by the Lock team in the seventh fixed their total scoring achievements for the evening at 11.

Gertie Masters pitched for Quakers, fanning none, walking one, and allowing 15 hits. Beryl Lee pitched six innings for the Lock team, until her duties wer taken over by Mickey McFarland in the seventh. The two pitchers fanned 3, walked 10, and allowed 10 hits.

Both teams had their first base assingnment well handled; Quakers with Bev. Boutette, and the Lock team, Betty McMahon.

Hitting star for the evening was Gertie Masters, who banged out a home-run into left field in the fifth inning. For Peterborough Lock, Beryl Lee's triple in the sixth was the most powerful blow mustered.

During seven innings of play, the Quaker Oats had 8 players left on bases: Peterborough Lock had 10.

Plazas Smother Switchgear In Fourth Game

The Plazas are one game from the City Senior League Softball Championship when they defeated Switchgear 9 to 3 in the fourth of the series at Riverside Park on Thursday evening. Plazas have now won three games and the Switchgear one.

Murph Chambers gambled on Akers as starting pitcher sending him back for the second night. It was not an Akers' night. The Plazas scored seven of their nine runs in the first two innings and Akers went to the showers. Harrison pitched the remaining six innings and held the Plazas to two runs and kept their seven hits well scattered.

Dave Wilson, whom Akers had beaten in the first game of the series on Monday night, pitched great ball and backed up by air-tight support held the Switchgear to one run up until the ninth innings when triples by Holmes and Brockley meant two runs for the Switchgear. Kingdon's double play in the sixth, when he pulled down Harrison's drive and then unassisted caught Mowry at second, was one of the highlights of the game. Tucker and Blewett each came through with three hits while Starr, Kingdon, Ellis and Wilson each got two. Brockley, Tompkins and Playford each got two for the Switchgear.

Mowry, the Switchgear catcher, was injured playing the last batter in the eighth innings when he was struck on the little finger by the ball and McNabb finished the catching.

Switchgear scored their first run in the third nnings when Holmes walked, Brockley singled through second and Playford singled into right to score Holmes. Their other two runs came in the ninth after Harrison, the first man up, struck out, Holmes and Brockley tripled, Tompkins was out on a ground to the pitcher who had not a chance to play on Brockley scoring. Pagett lifted a bunt which Starr caught to end the rally and the game.

Right from the first the Plazas went after Akers. Starr, first man up, singled, Burton struck out, Kingdon doubled to right, scoring Starr, Blewett singled behind second scoring Kingdon Tucker singled over third scoring Blewett, Hawkes grounded to short, Ellis put a drive past first scoring Tucker, and Conroy lifted one to centre fielder.

Wilson, Starr and Burton, the first three up in the second, all laid down perfect bunts to fill the bases, Kingdon flied out to Playford and Wilson scored on the throw in, Blewett flied out to Brockley and Starr scored. Tucker made first on a drive through short and Burton scored. Hawkes lifted a fly to Holmes at first to end the inning.

Plazas threatened again in the fourth when they got two men on, and they scored once in the fifth. Blewett was safe when Brockley dropped the fly, and Tucker singled over second scoring him. The final run came in the eighth when Blewett singled, Tucker advanced him to third on a nice hit, and he scored when McNabb dropped Hawkes' drive.

Both teams meet again this evening at 6.30 in the fifth game of the series.

Here and There in Sport

By The Canadian Press

Baseball league leaders usually pretend they don't know the score, so St. Louis Browns and Cardinals are acting surprised at their 100 applications each day for World Series seats.

Jim Bassford, advertising manger for the Cards, said at St. Louis today he was returning all requests for reservations with the explanation that none will be accepted until seats go on sale. Then he muttered something about waiting until the National League pennant was "mathematically secure."

Business Manger Bill Dewitt of the Browns also is pushing back the applications as soon as they arrive —says he'll wait until the Browns' chances are more sure, or until Commissioner Kenesaw Mountain Landis holds a meeting to fix prices.

But everyone else around here seems certain St. Louis is headed for an all-city series.

Hotels report that an amazing number of people have decided to visit St. Louis early in October — so many that reservation must be turned down.

Brantford handed an 8-2 setback to the Basic Training Centre team last night at Simcoe to even the series at one game each in the intermediate "A" playdowns of the Ontario Amateur Softball Association. The soldiers had a 1-0 margin in the first innings but soon faded.

The Grand Circuit card, featuring the $5,000 Arden Stake, was rained out last night at Saratoga Springs, N. Y., and the whole grogram was laid over until tonight.

Providing the Hamilton contenders survive the semi-finals with St. Catharines in the Ontario Amateur Softball Senior 'A' series, club managers of Hamilton and Toronto teams will arrange their own play-off schedule and sign an agreement for such arrangements. This was announced last night at Hamilton by William Thrasher of the O. A. S. A. executive.

Manager Art Ross of the Boston N. H. L. Bruins expressed confidence last night in Toronto, while attending a league meeting, that his oldest son, Flt.-Lt. Arthur Stuart Ross, D. F. C., would come through safely after jumping with his parachute from a bombing plane over Normandy. He has been officially reported missing. Another son, FO. John K. Ross, is a Spitfire pilot in India.

Tillsonburg Mounties last night qualified to meet Burlington in the second round of the O. A. S. A. intermediate 'B' playdowns by eliminating Simcoe 7-6 in their second straight victory, the tilt being decided in the 10th innings on a two-bagger by Price which scored Baskett.

Brinton Team Drubs Aircraft

A closely contested game was played on the Brinton diamond, Thursday night between the Brintons and the Aircraft of the Men's Industrial League, resulting in a win for the Brintons 11-10.

S. Craig started for the Brintons but was relieved in the sixth inning by A. Phillips. For the Aircraft Morirson pitched two innings then was relieved by Heffernan. Aircraft made a bid in the sixth innings, with bases loaded Morrison coming through with a home run. Brintons collected 11 hits, with Melville Byers leading with two doubles and a single, while Aircraft had 7 hits.

Brintons: Corbett, 1b; Kingdon, lf; Rose, cf; Byers, c; Weese, ss; Dorrell, 3b; McGarrity, 2b; Phillips, rf; Craig, p.

Wrecked Everything

DENVER, Aug. 18—(AP).—It was an ill wind all right that blew down a maple tree in F. J. Blanc's front yard. The 40-foot tree wrecked the family car, snapped three high tension electric wires, blocked the alley and damaged a neighbor's garage. A hornets' nest was smashed, too. And all five members of the Blanc family who rushed out to view the damage got stung.

NEW YORK, Aug. 18 (CP)—After every fight, welterweight Aaron Perry piles a lot of sliced fruit in a salad bowl, heaps a quart of chocolate ice cream on it and feasts on the mess. It takes him three days to work off the extra weight, which may explain why Manager Harry Garsh expects Aaron to come out of the army as "another Joe Louis instead of a "miniature" Joe.... George Munger, Penn football coach, devotes his early morning hours to canning vegetables from his victory garden, which is a novelty because gridiron tutors are more accustomed to being canned.

Babe Ruth argues that big league baseball magnates should do something to encourage eight and nine-year-olds to play ball. "That's when the players of the future are developed," he says....The Green Bay Packers have written all players on their draft list who are in service and who have school work to finish to plan on returning to the campus after the war. Says Coach Curley Lambeau: "Competition for places on major league teams will be so tough those players with unfinished school work will be better off to get a degree before risking a tryout in professional football."

Cards Seeking All-Time Win Record

BY JACK HAND
Associated Press Sport Writer

No longer content with a mere National League pennant, St. Louis Cardinals today soared after an all-time winning record under the impetus of a monthlong record of 23 victores in 27 starts.

If the Red Birds took 35 of their remaining 45 contests, Bill Southworth would have the satisfaction of tying the 38-year-old standard set by Frank Chance's Chicago Cubs who won 116 games in 1906. Since the defending Champions started to roll in high gear July 22, they have maintained a .852 percentage nad given no signs of slackening.

Chunky Max Lanier earned his fifth shutout last night as the Cards humbled New York 7-0 for the Giants 10th successive defeat. It was Lanier's 16th victory and Ewald Pyle's sixth loss with three St. Louis double plays featuring.

Pittsburg stretched its streak to 11 by trimming the Phils in a double header, 7-6 and 6-5 in 10 innings. Bob Elliott's triple scoring Jack Barrett in the eighth was the big blow in the first. In the second Pete Corcarart drove home Nick Strincevich in the 10th to let the rookie pitcher win his ninth.

Jim Tobin was belted for 14 blows before he gave way after a ninth-inning injury but his Boston Braves outslugged Chicago 7-5 Cincinnati and Brooklyn were rained out of a morning game.

St. Louis lengthened its American League lead to 7 games by doubling the score on the Athletics 10-5.

The Yankees slaughtered Cleveland 10-3, with Johnny Lindell's five hits showing the way. New York pulled into a third place tie with Detroit when the Tigers and Red Sox had to call it quits in the sixth because of rain with the score tied, 3-3.

Hal Trosky's long outfield fly scored Guy Curtwright with the only run as the Chicago White Sox blanked Washington, 1-0.

TORONTO, August 18—(CP). — It isn't every ballhawk that has a special benefit day thrown in his honor, and by the same token it isn't every player who has made himself as popular as Red Kress of Toronto Maple Leafs. This Saturday afternoon at Leafs' home park will be observed as Red Kress Day, and a purse will be handed to the popular relief player and general all-round handyman.

Red has won the admiration of the fans by his ability to play practically any position on the diamond equally well. About his weakest choice is catching, but he has done that too on scattered occasions. Besides all that the Red coaches Leafs, which in itself makes him quite a busy man since the Torontonians have been rather disappointing this year.

More race Alger:

There have been many stories of bargain horses among the saddle-race gentry, and now Dave (Regina Leader Post) Dryburgh comes up with the story of a bargain basement harness racer. Brownie Hal is the name of the horsey hero bought about a year ago by Walter Welsh of Regina.

Welsh picked up Brownie Hal and another horse, Garnet Bond, for $86. They had never raced and were being used as substitute draught horses on a fram near Kincaid, in Saskatchewan. Now Brownie Hal has turned into one of the top double-gaited horses around the harness circuits, trotting and pacing with equal ease, and has won $1,000 in purses so far.

106 Players In Singles Of Lawn Bowling

TORONTO, August 18 — (CP).— With a heavy tournament schedule set for to-day, last day of the Ontario Lawn Bowling Association's 11th annual championship meet, officials were cheered by clear skies. Royals Split Doubleheader

By The Associated Press.

The torrid fight between Newark and Baltimore for the International League pennant was cooled off a bit by the weather last night which limited the schedule to a twin-bill between Jersey City Giants and Montreal Royals. It resulted in a draw—the Giants winning the opener 8-1 and the Royals taking the nightcap 9-1.

Ken Miller of the Giants held the Royals to four hits in the opener to notch his seventh victory. He was aided by Steve Filipowicz who drove in two runs with a single and double. He also scored twice himself.

Wildness on the part of young Bob Howison, who walked 12 men and hit another, helped the Royals to gain an easy second-game victory. Everyone in the Montreal line-up scored at least once except Shortstop Stan Breard and Pitcher Jean Roy.

With all other clubs idle, attention was centred on Eddie (Shovels) Kobesky, Buffalo's hard-hitting outfielder. He not only leads the league in batting with a mark of .326, but has also realized his aim since joining the Bisons three years ago—to bat in 100 runs in a season. A two-run homer last Wednesday gave him a total of 103 R.B.I.'s, second only to Howie Moss of the Orioles, who has 112. In 1942 Kobesky knocked in 75 and last year raised his total to 89.

Vern tSephens, Browns—Touched off four-run spurt in seventh inning with 15th homer in St. Louis' 10-5 edge over Philadelphia.

Jim Tobin, Braves—Posted 13th victory although belted for 14 hits and tossed in double, driving in two runs of Boston's 7-5 margin over Chicago.

Wood And Byrd Are Eliminated

SPOKANE, Wash., Aug. 18. — (AP).—While the two tournament hot shots breezed through to easy victories, two other name players were tumbled out of competition Thursday to provide the upsets of second-round matches of the 1944 United States Professional Golfers' Association championship.

Byron Nelson, Toledo, O., and Harold McSpaden, Philadelphia raced through the 36-hole matches, the former walloping Mark Fry, Oakland, 7 and 6, and McSpaden taking the measure of Fred Annon, Mamaroneck, N.Y., 8 and 7.

Their victories were expected, therefore it was just so much routine, but the dumping of the duration United States Open champion, Craig Wood of Mamaroneck, and Sam Byrd, Detroit, furnished the thrills for a gallery that numbered more than 3,000.

Art Bell, lanky San Francisco power hitter, ousted Wood by a 3-and-2 count. It was no more surprising than the 2-and- decision posted by Charles Congdon, Tacoma, Wash., over Byrd, the former New York Yankee outfielder.

Nelson fired his fourth consecutive 69 against the par 72 Manito course in the morning round with Fry, yet held only a 1-up lead because of his rival's 71.

The Oaklander had a blow-up, which included a streak of hooked drives, on the third nine when Nelson built up a five-hole margin.

Reports Dutton Will Retire

TORONTO, Aug. 18 —(CP)—The Globe and Mail says today that Mervyn (Red) Dutton soon will officially decline the presidency of the National Hockey League to which he was elected at the annual meeting of the league last spring.

Yesterday Dutton said he will make an announcement as to his plans early next week in Montreal. He has been managing director of the league since the death in February, 1942, of the late President Frank Calder.

One-Mile Swim To Feature Inverlea Regatta

A one-mile swim will be the feature attraction of the Inverlea Regatta, at Inverlea Park, Saturday afternoon, and a silver cup donated by the Sergeants' Mess of the Training Centre No. 32 will be awarded the successful candidate.

The first regatta to be held at Inverlea will get underway at 130 in the afternoon, and under the leadership of Sgt. Alf Pink, who recently organized a very successful regatta at Mount Julian, Stoney Lake, a full afternoon of sporting events will take place. There are valuable prizes donated by Peterborough stores, and the Sergeants' Mess besides donating the silver cup for the mile swim, has also donated two additional cups, to be awarded for other events.

Swimming, diving, from the new 30-foot diving tower recently built, boating and other sporting events will be the main attractions of the Inverlea meet. In addition, the Sea Cadets' Band will be present to supply music, and refreshment booths will be operated with the proceeds going to the Peterborough British War Victims' Fund. An outdoor theatre will accommodate those who wish to see an interesting program of motion pictures, with the films coming from the National Film Board.

During the Regatta, 15 lifeguards will be on guard, not including Ruth Choate, regular lifeguard at Inverlea, who will also be at her post.

A 30-foot starting wharf has also been built for the event, which, if comment about town means anything, will be the biggest Inverlea day yet!

Organizer Sgt. Alf Pink told the Examiner that anyone wishing to enter the mile swim, or other events, should report to him at the bathing house at Inverlea. The Regatta is at Inverlea Park, Saturday, August 19, at 1:30.

Mayor James Hamilton, Parks Commissioner Butcher, and the members of the city council, have given the Regatta their full co-operation, and through their interest in the event, the diving tower and starting wharf was built.

Ontario Farm Chemistry Council To Be Formed

POPLAR HILL, Ont., August 18 —(CP). — Premier Drew in an address yesterday at the annual picnic of the Middlesex Federation of Agriculture announced plans for the establishment, in the fall, of a group to integrate all research work in the realm of Ontario agriculture. The groups will be known as the Ontario Farm Chemistry Council and will be supported by the Provincial Government.

Mr. Drew, who was accompanied here by Agriculture Minister Kennedy, said the body would be made up of scientists, farmers and manufacturers who will co-operate with the Ontario Research Foundation, research organizations in universities, and independent research groups in bringing to the farmers of Ontario the benefits of the latest developments in agricultural science.

The Premier added, the county agricultural committees already set up by Mr. Kennedy will be the medium through which the findings of the Council will be passed on to the farmers.

"What we have learned through science and research during the war is going to prove invaluable after the war," he said. "Only four years ago Germany was threatening to batter Britain into a defenceless condition by her products of research. Now we are seeing the day when we are doing the same thing to her."

CANADIAN CORVETTE LOST—Sinking of H.M.C.S. "Regina" while on invasion duties was announced today by Hon. Angus L. Macdonald, Minister of National Defence for Naval Services. The "Regina" is the 17th Canadian war vessel to be lost since the outberak of the present war. Casualties include two dead and 27 missing. H.M.C.S. "Regina", pictured here, had previously seen service in the North Atlantic and Mediterranean. While serving in the latter area, she engaged and sank an Italian submarine with gunfire and took 21 prisoners. One of the first of the revised corvettes, the "Regina" was commissioned in January, 1942. (RCN Photo)

J. Hawley Safe When Regina Sinks

Steward William (Jim) Hawley, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Hawley, 125 Hilliard street, the only Peterborough boy on the corvette H.M.C.S. Regina, has been listed as one of the survivors following the sinking of his ship which was announced today by Hon. Angus MacDonald, Minister of National Defence for Naval Affairs.

H.M.C.S. Regina was lost going to the assistance of a merchant vessel in difficulties in invasion waters, after being damaged itself. This is the 17th warship and the seventh corvette lost by the Canadian Navy in this war. Two members of the crew are dead and 26 ratings and one officer are missing.

A second district seaman, Leading Stoker Eric Cook, son of Robert Cook, 36 Catherine street, Belleville, was also saved from the sinking.

After the Regina was damaged while manoeuvering into position to aid the stricken merchantman, a course was steered for shallow water in an attempt to beach the corvette, but 40 minutes later the order to abandon ship had to be given. The commanding officer of the vessel is Lieut. Jack W. Radford, R.C.N.V.R., of Grand Lake Road, Sydney, N.S. He was appointed to the post Sept 1, 1, 1943.

U-Boat Success

One of the first revised corvettes which succeeded the old "Flower" class, H. M. C. S. Regina was commissioned in January, 1942. Among her early duties in the spring of that year was a successful search for survivors of a merchant vessel. She was attached to western escort forces until the fall of 1942, when she underwent modernization and refitting at Sydney.

Early in 1943, shortly after beginning convoy escort duties between the United Kingdom and North African ports and proceeding far into the area of active hostilities, Regina had an encounter with an Italian submarine, bringing it to the surface with depth charges and engaging it in a spectacular running gun duel. Terrific fire from the now lost man-of-war quickly took the fight out of the Eyeties,¼ and the sub sank soon afterwards, Regina picking up 21 prisoners. The seaman to report the submarine first was killed in action on the Regina's last voyage. Also known dead in connection with the loss is a rating from Regina, Sask., the corvette's name city. He is Supply Assistant Johr Charles Rathbone, 822 Robinson street, Regina, who is reported to have died in hospital.

At Work On D-Day

H. M. C. S. Regina was assigned to invasion duties in April, and spent the month of May overseas in exercises preliminary to the invasion of France. Since D-Day she had been actively engaged in escorting convoys carrying munitions and supplies to the Allied forces in France.

The Peterborough survivor, Seaman Hawley, 18, has been attached to the Regina since last December. He enlisted in February, 1943, training at Kingston and Esquimault before going overseas. For several months he served aboard the Annapolis, lend-lease destroyer which was a sister ship of the St. Croix. Writing home two weeks ago, Seaman Hawley mentioned that he would never forget D-Day.

Premiers Oppose Preliminary Conference

OTTAWA, Aug. 18 (CP)—Premier E. C. Manning of Alberta was the only provincial premier to support a suggestion by Premier George Drew of Ontario that a preliminary meeting be held to discuss the agenda of the proposed Dominion-provincial conference, it has been disclosed in an exchange of correspondence published in the Commons votes and proceedings.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King announced last Monday that the conference would not be held until after a Federal general election.

Mr. Drew made the proposal on March 21 in a letter to Mr. King and said the preliminary meeting he had in mind was for the purpose of reaching agreement on steps to establish an effective basis for co-operation between Dominion and provincial governments.

Drew Insists

In reply, Mr. King said this would involve consideration of the subject matter of the conference itself. On April 1 Premier Drew wrote that he was more convinced than ever that a preliminary conference was needed and in reply on April 6 Mr. King said he would ask the other premiers to let him have their views. He did this by distributing copies of Mr. Drew's letters.

On April 13 Premier Drew wrote: "It seems to me that any conference back to the premiers of the other provinces for a further expression of opinion merely causes unnecessary delay in view of the wish they have already expressed that we should have such a meeting."

He asked that an invitation be extended without delay for a meeting.

Mr. Manning, only provincial premier to make extensive suggestions and comments on the draft agenda for the conference submitted to the premiers by the Dominion Government, supported the idea of a preliminary meeting in letters of April 12 and June 7.

No comment was made on it by Premier Adelard Godbout of Quebect, John Hart of British Columbia or McNair of New Brunswick.

Premier D. B. MacMillan of Nova Scotia wrote that he could not "at the moment see the necessity for a preliminary meeting."

Could Use Mail

Premier S. S. Garson of Manitoba said he thought it "should be possible to settle this agenda by correspondence."

Premier J. W. Jones of Prince Edward Island said his government felt that a preliminary conference was "quite unnecessary and could accomplish nothing effective."

Former Premier W. J. Patterson of Saskatchewan, also said he thought a preliminary meeting "hardly necessary."

The longest exchange of correspondence was with Mr. Drew, much of it relating to the Dominion's request that a provincial treasury officer come to Ottawa to assist in preparing financial and statistical data. H. E. Brown of the treasury department was the man suggested on Feb. 28 in a letter from A. D. P. Heeney, clerk of the Privy Council, to Mr. Drew.

On March 6 James F. Cassidy, secretary to Mr. Drew wrote that it "would not be possible to give Mr. Brown or at anyone else instructions until the general basis of the conference is understood."

On March 21 Mr. King wrote to Mr. Drew saying that all other provinces had responded favorably on sending a treasury official and it was not contemplated these officers would be asked to consider questions of policy. He hoped the Ontario government would make Mr. Brown's services available.

On March 25 Mr. Drew wrote that "before any attempt is made to prepare the financial or factual details it seems to me that we should have some understanding in regard to simple matters of procedure as between the Dominion and provincial governments."

On March 29, Mr. King submitted to Mr. Drew a list of headings on which it was desired to have prepared comparfable statistics for all Provinces. He said Mr. Brown's assistance was desired in getting the statistics into a form suitable for the conference.

Financial Summary.

The headings included an overall financial summary for all Governments, Federal, Provincial and Municipal for the years, 1933, 1937, 1939, 1941, 1943; outstanding debt analysis, all Governments; subsidies, grants-in aid and other inter-Governments transfers; Dominion and Provincial revenues from personal and Corporation Income Taxes and Succession Duties; Welfare Outlays; Unemployment Relief Outlays; Transportation; Agriculture; Utilities; Public Buildings; Natural Resources.

Premier Drew wrote April 1 to say that Mr. Brown could not be spared from his work and wanted to know more about what was proposed.

He suggested it was not so much a matter of facts and figures as of working principles and repeated his earlier suggestion of a preliminary conference.

On April 6 Mr. King wrote that he regretted Ontario could not lend a senior official, but said the work of preparing financial material was progressing rapidly with the asisstancee of officials of the other eight Provinces. Its completion would be made more difficult without similar assistance from Ontario.

Lots of Letters.

Premier Drew replied on April 13 that he had made "no suggestion that the Government of Ontario does not find it possible to lend the services of a senior official. I said that Mr. Brown could not be spared."

In a telegram on April 15 Mr. King said if he was right in assuming that Ontario was prepared to send an offical he would be obliged if the Ontario Treasury Department would advise D. A. Skelton, secretary of the Cabinet Committee on the Conference, so Mr. Skelton could arrange immediately for the visit of the official to Ottawa.

On June 12 Mr. Drew replied that he had not answered the telegram as it was in reply to a letter of his own. He said Mr. Skelton had discussed the information required with the Treasury Department and there had been "no lack of co-operation."

The next reference was on July 27 when Mr. King informed Premier Drew the statements submitted by Ontario needed "considerable adjustments requiring informed interpretation." He asked co-operation. Mr. Drew replied that Provincial Treasurer Frost would be in Ottawa and would see Mr. Skelton.

Garson Resents Drew's Remarks

WINNIPEG, Aug. 18 (CP) —Preported the Federal family allowance mier Stuart S. Garson of Manitoba today urged post-war changes in Canada's taxation structure but supbill in opposition to views expressed by Premier George A. Drew of Ontario.

Addressing the silver jubilee convention luncheon of the Canadian Weekly Newspaper Association, Mr. Garson charged the Ontario premier had "hit" the Prairie provinces and the Maritimes, not Quebec, and challenged the accuracy of Mr. Drew's calculations.

(Mr. Drew, in an Ontario network broadcast Aug. 9, charged that the allowance bill, with an initial cost of $200,000,000, was an "obvious bribe" on the eve of the Quebec general election.)

"Premier Drew said the people of Ontario would be called upon to pay in Federal taxes nearly 5 per cent of the family allowances, but would receive much less than this in benefits.

Mr. Garson declared that the Ontario Premier, in his calculations, included Federal taxes that were not within the power of a Provincial Legislature, and by the same method of figuring Quebec would pay 33 per cent of the cost of family allowances. He quoted the Toronto Financial Post estimate that Quebec would receive back 32 per cent.

Mr. Garson said the Prairie Provinces, "on Premier Drew's basis," would pay between six and seven per cent of national revenue and receive back 20 per cent of the family allowances. "But I challenge Premier Drew's figure of 50 per cent for Ontario's share as being inaccurate and unreliable for the purpose for which he has used it."

NICE PROFIT.

Rotary Club of Ottawa made $37,277 (net) from a lottery on a new house that cost around $10,000. Other expenses brought the total outlay to $16,578. And the winner was a bachelor, proving nothing perhaps except that chance is also blind.

STAFF LOCKED OUT.

The staff of the Liquor Control Board's store this morning found its door of entrance locked by a safety device which presumably one of the customers set during the usual rush of business Thursday. The exit door was barred on the inside, and the only means of entry was by the emergency of removing the pane from above the south door. Joseph Gaskell was elected for the job.

Charge Against Woman Is Dismissed

Appearing before Magistrate O. A. Langley in police court this morning, Harold Redmond was remanded until August 21 on a charge of vagrancy. Bail was fixed at $200 for himself and $200 surety.

Fergus Mongraw pleaded guilty to theft of one meat loaf and two boxes of cheese from the Canada Packers, but was remanded until August 21.

Laverne Killingbeck pleaded not guilty to a charge of breaking into the office of Dr. J. C. Smith, Lakefield, and committing theft, and was remanded by request until August 25.

Entering a plea of guilty by writing, John J. Courneyea was fined $3 and $2.50 costs on a charge of taking hold of another vehicle while riding on his bicycle on Highway No. 28.

The second time in court since June 15, 1944, Charles Curry was remanded after pleading guilty but failing to make any statements, on a charge of failing to support his wife. Mrs. Curry told the court since her husband was in court last June on a similar charge, she had received no money from him. She also charged he had abused her physically, and she said he told her he would rather spend a year in jail than give her any money.

Mrs. Gladys Kent and Mrs. Alma Ronco were each fined $5 and $1 costs when they pleaded guilty to causing a disturbance on Charlotte street July 25. A similar charge against Mrs. Ruth Bouvaire was dismissed after evidence disclosed she had taken part in the disturbance only in her own defence. W. J. A. Fair represented Mrs. Bouvaire, and many witnesses were called.

Marie Gahagan, Sherbrooke street, testified Mrs. Bouvaire had not started the disturbance, and that she pulled another woman's hair only in her own defence. D. A. McGillis, proprietor of the Hotel Champlain, stated he watched the rumpus from the doorway of the hotel, and saw it proceed down Charlotte street. He also said he did not see Mrs. Bouvaire in the women's beverage room the night of the disturbance. Mrs. L. L. McGuire, police matron, said she was driving on Charlotte street the night of July 25, and she noticed a crowd of about two or three hundred people milling around the rumpus, and she also said she could hear much profanity being used.

Other witnesses bore testimony that Mrs. Bouvaire did not create the disturbance, and Magistrate Langley dismissed the charge.

PETERBOROUGH MAN RELAXES IN INDIA — These Eastern Ontario airmen seem to be trying to figure out how they could transpose into golf balls some of the crude rubber on which they are leaning at a rubber plantation factory "somewhere in Ceylon." Members of the Tusker squadron, a Royal Canadian Air Force Catalina flying-boat unit, the airmen were guests of tea and rubber planters when this picture was taken and shortly afterwards they played a round of golf with badly-battered balls on the planters' nine-hole course. On the Left is Cpl. George Rickards, 206 Bell street, Ottawa, organizer of a monthly excursion of about 25 squadron airmen as guests of British planters, while on the Right is Flight-Sgt. Ken Moffatt, son of Mr. and Mrs. Art Moffatt, formerly of 186 Hunter street. Besides inspecting the plantations, the boys are granted golf and tennis facilities of a country club operated by the planters. Afternoon tea, a buffet luncheon and dancing are provided by the planters to round out the day's fun. (RCAF Photo)

Glover-Dobbin Play Saturday

The second and final round of the Glover-Dobbin Trophy will be held Saturday afternoon at the Peterborough Golf and Country Club acting as hosts to the players from the Kawartha Club.

As usual, no green fees will be charged and both teams are asked to turn out as large a field as possible.

The Kawartha Club carries into the second round an advantage of 23 points earned in defeating the Peterborough Club 53-50 three weeks ago.

The players are asked to be on hand as soon after one o'clock as possible, and an attempt will be made to match players from each club as closely to their handicaps as possible.

Some of the draws at the Peterborough Club are lagging behind and the match and handicap committee issues fair warning that an effort must be made to bring all draws up to date this next week-end or tardy players will be scratched.

In the club championship George Abott tops one bracket with last year's champion, Stanley Payne, in the bottom bracket awaiting the outcome of matches between Joe Watson and Orlie DeGraw and Herb Bradburn vs. Russel Kitchen.

The semi-finals of the Macdonald Trophy find Hubert Chown waiting for W. S. Cowle and Gordon Maniece, while Bill Lloyd and John McKercher must play this week-end to attain the final round.

In the Stratton Trophy, Gord. Whatman waits for C. V. Elliott and Andy Rutter to finish their match, and the others in the semi-final round are Dr. C. C. Cragg vs. Rev. George Kelly and W. E. Lloyd vs. G. H. Munroe.

Drastic action must be taken this week-end on the President's Trophy tournament, many players not having completed the second round.

Please play your matches this week-end or strike off your name.

Information Quest Delayed Idefinitely

City Council's hope of obtaining some information respecting Federal Provincial air for municipal post-war planning, as expressed in a resolution adopted Monday night, will be indefinitely deferred by the announcement of Prime Minister King of postponement of proposed Dominion-Provincal Conference until after the Federal elections.

The resolution by Alderman Dutton, seconded by Aldermand Sands, was: "That in teh proposed conference between the Dominion and Provincial governments to plan pos-war work and rehabilitation projects it is hoped that financial policies will be determined which will allow the municipalities to proceed more confidently with their post-war projects and that some financial assistance will be granted the municipalities for the erection of needed hospital accommodation and recreation and health centres."

Pte. Tim Crough Invalided Back To Canada

HALIFAX, Aug. 18.—(CP).—The Canadian hospital ship Lady Nelson has arrived here, carrying sick and wounded servicemen from the French and Italian battlefronts. The passenger list of 660 consists mainly of khaki-clad members of the Canadian Army.

Pte. Tim J. Crough, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Crough, R. R. No. 7, Peterborough, who some months ago was reported dangerously ill as a result of a road accident, is one of the returned men. Pte. E. F. Faders, son of Mrs. Beatrice Fader, Lindsay, and Pte. W. McCaw, son of Mrs. Elizabeth McCaw, 12 Elgin street, Port Hope, have also been sent back to Canada. In the group, which will be taken to Kingston from Halifax, there are 16 stretcher cases.

Lieut. W. G. Burke, Kingston, Ont., was among the Italian veterans on the liner. He told of the trans-Italy duel of a fighting Canadian field regiment and the crack Nazi corps known as "Goering's Own." From the battle-pocked mountains around Cassino to the final cracking of the steelclad Gustav line the Canadians and the Germans matched blow for blow.

"Goering's Own was one of the few clean-fighting German regiments, and we were proud to have faced them and beaten them," said Lieut. Burke. He spoke of seeing many Nazi prisoners from various sectors of the Italian front who were not over 15 years old.

The invalided soldiers, many of them with serious wounds, were uniformly cheerful, and happy to be back in Canada. They leave for their homes today.

Packers Trim Quaker Team

Last night at the Memorial Park Canada Packers beat Quakers 13 to 7 in a game that had to be called at the end of eight innings owing to darkness. The highlight was the timely hitting of the Downer brothers (Al, Newt and George) who not only were hitting hard but all three played good ball from start to finish, and Newt Downer in centre covered a lot of ground to rob the Quakers of some extra base hits. Foley, who pitched for the Packers struck out 5 and had good control up to the last innings. Fisher started on the mound for Quakers, but did not finish the third innings. Credit is due Quakers' relief pitcher who took over in the third with none out and after allowing three runs in that innings shut out the Packers for the rest of the game. The return of A. Godfrey to the line-up was quite a help to the Packers as he hit each time at bat. Score by innings:

Canada Packers	625 000 00	13
Quakers	000 001 06	7

Teams:

Quakers— Sullivan 2b; Root ss; Gunn c, Horton lf and p; Fisher p; Ash 1b; B. Northey 3b; B. Willshaw cf; Tice rf.

Packers—G. Downer ss; A. Downer c, A. Lefave rf; J. Seymour 2b; J. Begley 3b; F. Foley p; W. Nobes 1b, N. Downer cf; E. Godfrey lf.

N. Monaghan Lots Selling Rapidly

If the sale of suburban lots in North Monaghan continues as actively throughout the fall as it has been all summer, the township will pass out of the realty business by the new year and annexation.

Both Deputy-reeve A. W. Archibald and Councillor W. J. Grady have reported many transfers.

"Probably people think the prices will advance when the area is joined to the city," Mr. Archibald suggested, "and they are getting in now on what they consider a bargain."

The township has had a stack of lots on its books. Land south of Lansdowne and between Park street and Monaghan road was cut into sizes that suggested the world was running out of land. Subdivisions were cut to scales that turned out multiple lots, and in those days no one in the township ever thought of interfering in the interest of ultimate purchasers and home-owners.

With the mass production of lots, expectations of building activity were only lightly realized; payment of taxes in many cases was neglected and lots began piling up to the account of the municipality. And the people did not want them as community property. The day of the commons went out with the Tudors.

For the last few years the trend has been in the other direction, and the municipality has been steadily selling this real estate, for the value of which there has not yet been any settlement between the city and Monaghan council as the act of annexation approaches. The city has agreed to assume them on terms to be fixed by consultation, and although many of the lots are passing into private hands, probably the surplus of them at the end of the year will still be considerable.

Even the new lots along Riverside Drive have been attracting livelier interest. Twelve of them have been disposed of and other enquiries are reported.

SERVING OVERSEAS — Sgt.-Pilot R. D. Pearse, whose wife and two children live in Oshawa, is serving overseas with the R.C.A.F., according to word received here by his father, R. N. Pearse, 594 Harvey street. Before enlisting in March, 1943, Sgt.-Pilot Pearse was employed by the General Motors Company in Oshawa. He took his flying instruction as a pilot in Alberta and Saskatchewan, receiving his wings in the spring.

McTague Raps Bureaucrats

SARNIA, Ont., Aug. 18—(CP)—The day of the bureaucrat has gone and the people of Canada are demanding a return to democracy and democratic principles, C. P. McTague, national chairman of the Progressive Conservative party, told a Lambton West Federal nominating convention here last night.

Joseph Warner Murphy, Sarnia township real estate man, was nominated to carry the party banner in the next Federal election. He defeated two other candidates, Mayor W. Carlyle Hipple of Sarnia and Capt. W. S. Haney, one-time M.P.P. in the riding who recently returned from overseas.

Mr. McTague said that Canadians wanted a return to the "good old principle" that members of government are servants of the people In stating that the "day of the bureaucrat has gone," he added that "the day of the prospective bureaucrat as typified by the C.C.F. will not come."

Concerning the chairman of the National War Labor Board which he held until comparatively recently, Mr. McTague, a former justice of the Ontario Supreme Court, said he had accepted the position of chairman only because of the national crisis in labor relations during wartime, with the understanding he could resign "when I felt the situation warranted it."

Former Alderman, 92 Dies In Brantford

BRANTFORD, Aug 18 —(ENS)—Funeral services for the late John W. Patte, one of the city's oldest, best-known and most highly respected citizens, who died last week in the General Hospital in his 93rd year, were held here with a large attendance and interment was made in Mt. Hope cemetery, Brantford.

A resident of the city for 55 years, Mr. Patte was born in Deptford, England and was a great-grandson of Admiral Joseph Patte. He came to Canada 70 years ago and for 40 years conducted a dry-goods business in Brantford, retiring in 1930. He was a former alderman, and during the First World War served on the Board of Health.

Mr. Patte's mind was a treasure-house of interesting stories and anecdotes concerning his years in the city, and his whole life was woven well into the life-pattern of the community. He could recall too, incidents of his earlier years in the Old Country, and recollected on the occasion of his 92nd birthday speaking in an election against Hon. William Ewart Gladstone, who was then opposed by Viscount Mahoney "It seems I was working for the wrong side, because Gladstone won," Mr. Patte added.

Left to mourn his loss are two daughters and one son. Miss Cecilia Patte, Brantford; Mrs. H. E. Perriott, Toronto; and George of Brantford. His wife, Victoria MacDonald Patte, predeceased him in 1911; while another son, John E. Patte of Peterborough, passed away on February 15 of this year.

Two Young Girls Hold Bazaar For War Victims

When Johnny is a good boy, a pat on the back certainly gives encouragement to go on and do even greater things, and when this goodness happens to be in the shape of good work done on behalf of other people in distress, the analogy should apply with greater measure of praise.

Going back over the reports that have appeared on behalf of the victims of robot bomb attacks on the ciivilan population of Britain, it can be easily summarized in regard to the work of school children by stating that out of the thirteen different reports in this column on behalf of the Peterborough and District British War Victims Fund that have appeared since the first of this month, no less than six have carried the story of children's activities to give the people who have suffered in this manner, a real helping hand.

This is almost a 50 per cent record, which is enhanced by one appearing to-day as the result of the work of two young girls, Carmelle Bartley, a pupil of Sacred Heart School who lives on Morrow Street, and Barbara Guerin, a young visitor who attends St. Juliana's School at Detroit, Mich.

On Tuesday these young lassies held a bazaar at the corner of Lansdowne and George Streets, through the kindness of Mrs. T. W. Meredith, Lansdowne Street, selling canned goods, soap, cereals, Books and lemonade, to raise the sum of $8.05 credited in their names to-day, and they wish to tender sincere thanks to all who assisted by giving them donations for this purpose.

While days long past can never be brought back, still fond memories can recall much of the pleasant things that happened, and particularly does this apply among the family circle, which grows as the years proceed onward, and strengthens as one or more pass on to their reward.

To express these loving memories by doing good for others in distress would undoubtedly receive the highest approbation were it possible to be given, and with such a thought in mind a gift of $5.00 is listed to-day "In memory of my dear brother A.S.P." who passed away August 17, 1943.

35 Nurses Enroll At Nicholls

Thirty-five student nurses have recently been enrolled at Nicholls Hospital, nineteen in the class beginning July 31, and sixteen in the next class which begins September 11.

Largely a factor in this recruiting of prospective nurses has been a quiet form of publicity conducted throughout the district by Miss Edith Young, superintendent of nurses, Mrs. Eva Brackenridge, an almuna of the hospital's nursing school who is assisting on the staff for a month, and also by Miss Helen Talbot, instructress, in talks to senior girls of some of the High Schools of this area. In addition to the call that has been made locally, there has also been some advertising of the present classes in newspapers of this district, altogether an effective campaign explaining the present need of nurses and of the opportunity prsented to girls who felt attracted to this vocation. The response from the city and district has been highly gratifying to the board and executives of Nicholls Hospital.

Requiring additional accommodation for the nursing staff, the board recently rented "Kaledan" at 813 Water street, the home of the late J. E. Patte and Mrs. Patte, which is now being occupied by nurses of the hospital.

Leopard Skin Is Given Band

LONDON, Aug. 18 — Presentation of a beautiful leopard skin to the drummer of the C. W. A. C. Brass Band highlighted last night's inspection of the band along with the C. W. A. C. Pipe Band at the Armories here. Brigadier D. J. MacDonald, C. B. E., D.S.O., M.C., district O.C., received the leopard skin, donated by the City of Peterborough, from Major Mary Barker, district C.W.A.C. officer. He then presented it to Bandmaster Nadia Svarich, of the brass band who placed it on her drummer, Georgia McElroy.

The leopard skin was donated by the City of Peterborough after the band appeared there and it was noticed that while the drummer in the pipe band wore a decorative leopard, the drummer in the brass band did not. Now both drummers will be dressed alike and the new skin may become mascot as the other one has.

After the presentation Brigadier MacDonald made a short address in which he noted that this week is the third anniversary of the founding of the Corps. He congratulated the bands on their marching and referred to them as "seasoned soldiers" "The C.W.A.C. had made for itself a very important place in the army," he said. "We appreciate the fact that you have released many men for combat duty in the line. The army is proud of you. See that you maintain the high standard which you have set yourself."

Lands Porpoise

OCEAN CITY, N.J., Aug. 18. — (AP).—Harry Feitig of Philadelphia, landed a 200-pound porpoise with his bare hands—in front of witnesses. He bumped into the porpoise while swimming at this ocean resort, dragged it ashore, showed it to some surprised surf anglers and then towed it back to sea where he released it.

Nazi Troops Wreck Chartres Power Plant

CHARTRES, France, Aug. 18 — (AP)— Despite a courageous fight by French patriots, the Germans succeeded in dynamiting the waterworks, electric power plant and numerous ancient monuments before this ancient town fell to the Americans yesterday.

French Resistance Forces, however, prevented destruction of the post office by storming into the basement where enemy demolition squads were fixing fuses on explosives.

PO. R. W. Price Awarded D.F.C.

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 18. — (ENS).—Pilot Officer R. W. D. Price, son of Major W. D. Price and Mrs. Price, now at Minden, is one of 31 R.C.A.F. men who have been awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross, it was announced to-day.

The citation reads:

"Throughout his operational tour which has included sorties against many major targets, this officer has displayed fine airmanship. On one occasion, shortly after taking off with a heavy load, two of his engines failed, one catching fire. Maintaining height with great difficulty, he extinguished the fire, jettisoned his bomb load into the sea and made a successful landing at base without further damage to his aircraft. At all times he has displayed fine qualities of determination and courage and has achieved excellent results."

The young airman was born in Lloydminster, Sask., and graduated from Woodstock Collegiate in 1941. After training at Victoriaville, he went overseas as a Flight Sergeant in 1942 and received his commission in March of this year. His father is a veteran of the last war.

Mining News

TORONTO, Aug. 18. — (CP).— Mild weakness was displayed by the base metals in the early session and other groups were up narrowly at noon. Turnover totalled 352,000 shares for the first three hours.

West Malartic was a feature of the golds. It advanced 18 cents to 1.82 in active trading. The Yellowknife issues improved. Giant gained 50 cents to 8.25, Frobisher 15 to $6 and Bear 5 to 1.69. Other strong golds were Pioneer, Pamour, Pickle Crow and Teck Hughes. O'Brien was off 20 cents to 3.70 after touching 4.15.

Steep Rock and Waite-Amulet firmed 5 cents and other base metals were steady. In the industrial section the steels, banks and liquors were higher. Steel of Canada and Pressed Metals were up ½ to 1 point.

Anglo-Canadian, Foothills and East Crest posted small gains and prices were down a bit for Calgary-Edmonton, British-Dominion and Ajax.

Snake Fights On

UPTERGROVE, Aug. 17 (CP) — Harold Judd caught a garter snake by the tail and gave it a snap. The head flew off and struck him on a portion of his shirt sleeve which was rolled up. The head put its teeth through several thicknesses of cloth and drew blood on his arm.

R.C.A.F. DEVELOPS NEW OXYGEN VALVE—After nearly three years of research, technicians of the Royal Canadian Air Force have deevloped a valve which supplies oxygen for high altitude combat, according to an airman's requirements. The higher the airman flies, the more oxygen he needs, but zooming and diving at terrific speed, gaining or loosing thousands of feet in a matter of seconds, a pilot has no time to fiddle with control dials. The new R.C.A.F. valve is automatically controlled by the flyer's breathing while a metal bellows which expands and contracts according to altitude, regulates the mixture of air and oxygen fed to his lungs. The demand valve, to which the arrow points in the above photograph, weighs 14 ounces, just half the size and weight of inferior types used by the German Luftwaffe. (RCAF Photo)

R.C.A.F. Oxygen Valve Invention Better Than Anything Nazis Made

TORONTO, August 18 — (CP).— A dictionary defines a valve as "a contrivance that opens a passage to permit the flo of a liquid or gas in one direction, and closes against its return." To airmen fighting in the thin upper air miles above the earth, an oxygen valve may mean life or death.

After nearly three years of research, the Clinical Investigation Unit of the R.C.A.F. have in conjunction with Air Force aeronautical engineers developed a value which supplies oxygen for high altitude combat according to the airman's need. In this type, the flyer's lungs control automatically the supply of oxygen.

R.C.A.F. scientists had two main problems to solve. To function efficiently, the apparatus had to turn on the oxygen when the airman breathed in and to turn it off when he breathed out. It also had to deliver the proper proportion of oxygen according to height, since considerably more oxygen is required at high tltitudes.

The principles of the new R.C.A.F. "Demand Valve" are simple. It relies on design for its performance and a miracle of close machining made possible by Canadian craftsmanship.

Valves Do Work.

Frequency of oxygen intake is regulated by a diaphragm. As the airman breathes, the diaphragm presses on a tiny spring which releases the right amount of oxygen. The factor of altitude is taken care of by a metal bellows. As the aircraft rises, the bellows expands in direct proportion to height, and makes a mixture breathed richer in oxygen. Simple—but the Germans have been working on it for over a decade without achieving the success of the R.C.A.F.

Military aviation long has tried to produce a satisfactory demand valve. Pilots zooming and diving at 500-mile an hour spedes—gaining or losing 10,000 feet in a matter of seconds—have no time to fiddle with control dials. A flow of oxygen satisfactory at 15,000 feet, for example, brings unconsciousness at 30,000 feet. The German Air Force introduced the demand valve principle in 1933 and they have been working on it ever since. Captured German models received here show continuous changes, but the R.C.A.F. valve, weighing just 14 ounces and small enough to be slung around a pilot's neck, is half the size and weight of the Nazi type. Its Canadian inventors say it is much more efficient.

British Rejected it.

Early British attempts were so unsatisfactory that the R.A.F. rejected the demand principle and adopted a system which provides for continuous delivery of oxygen—so much ovygen per man per minute at various heights. Until 1942 the U.S. Air Force used the continuous delivery system, but has done much work since in the field of demand supply. American and Canadian designers have kept in close touch and shared their information freely.

In late 1941 the R.C.A.F. began development work under Flight Lieutenant F. E. J. Fry of Weston, C.I.U. biologist, and Professor Grayson Smith of the Department of Physics, University of Toronto. In the early stages they were pessimistic that Canadian factories could turn out the fine machining found in the German valves.

"After turning out six main types and more than 150 modifications, we find that Canadians can make precision parts better than anything the Germans are doing in this field," said Wing Commander J. K. W. Ferguson, medical officer in charge of experimental work at C.I.U., and formerly assitant Professor of Pharmacology at University of Toronto.

To help him with the valve, Flt. Lieutenant Fry invented an artificial "breather" which exactly reproduces the quantity and rhythm of human breathing. On this "breather" they tried working models at all temperatures and altitudes likely to be encountered by Canadian airmen, testing them for thousands of hours at a time. When after thousands of hours, a part failed or wore away enough to disturb the fine measuring capacity of the valve, they ordered a new modification—150 of them—or designed a new model.

PREVENTIVE MEASURE

Fingerprinting was first used in the U.S. in 1882, by a goologist who used his thumbprint to prevent forgery of commission orders for an expedition.

Hint At Rationing Of Cigarettes

There is a strong probability that some form of rationing will be instituted if the present shortage of cigarettes and cigars is not relieved, according to a survey made of some of the city's stores dealing in tobacco.

The J. J. Steinkraus Company, wholesalers, said they noted the shortage, and while there seems to be still enough cigarettes in circulation, the difficulty is in obtaining the various brands. Variety of brands is being cut down, and it is quite possible that people will be unable to buy their favorite brand if the shortage continues to exist.

Many tobacco shops speculated that more people are smoking now, and people who do smoke are smoking much heavier than before. This alone with the present wartime conditions and labor would help greatly to effect a scarcity, they said.

F. J. Kelcey store said they could not get all the cigarettes they could sell, and added the brands were narrowing down. They pointed out, however, that most people aren't worried about lack of variety; if they can't buy their farorite brand of cigarette, they'll take another. It's the cigarette they want!

Good cigars are also on the shortage list, but there are still ample stocks on hand, it was intimated, to last for a while.

Launch Explosion Kills 4, Burns 4

MANITOWANING, Ont., Aug. 18 (CP). — One woman was killed and four persons suffered serious burns when a motor launch exploded five miles out in Manitowaning Bay, Manitoulin Island, in Lake Huron, last night. The dead woman, whose name was not immediately available, is a Detroit resident, believed to have been on her honeymoon.

IF THERE IS NO FIT

WHEN EACH partner has a pretty good long suit of his own, opposite shortage in it, the side is up against the meanest situation that can confront a pair. Neither suit will play well because the opponents hold too many cards of it and because the entry situation is bad without enough chances to lead toward each long suit from the other hand. Those deals will not play well either at No Trumps. So the experienced good player usually is willing to drop the bidding when he finds he faces such a misfit proposition.

The saddest thing about this was South coming within one of making his contract. He was able to tell North that a pass of the 3-Hearts doubled would have resulted in a made contract, for he lost only four tricks, three in hearts and one in diamonds. What would have happened to the 3-Spades doubled, if South had passed, would have been terrific.

Yes, you may ask, but who would have passed in North's position after South's 3-Hearts had been doubled? The answer would be that nearly all of the top-ranking masters would have done so beyond the slightest shadow of a doubt. They have learned from sad experience what happens to these misfits.

South's bid of 4-Hearts was not bad, in comparison with North's, as the South hand's long suit of diamonds was really of freakish dimensions, two cards longer than North's, which was nothing out of the ordinary.

Drew Observes Anniversary In Legislature

TORONTO, Augu. 18 — (CP) — Ontario's Progressive Conservative government yesterday, observed the first anniversary of its accession to office and Premier Drew expressed confidence that his party's political position in the province is stronger than it was Aug. 4, 1943, when it won 38 of the 90 Legislature seats in the Provincial general election.

Heading the first government in the history of the province that lacked a clear majority in the Legislature, Premier Drew led his forces through the last session on a policy of "no compromise" and was not defeated on any division. The Liberals, with 15 members, voted against him once and on that occasion he had the support of the C.C.F. Opposition which holds 34 seats.

"In the next session of the Legislature we intend to continue our policy of carrying out our program —and let the chips fall where they may," said the 50-year-old Premier, who scented the possibility of more determined opposition from the Liberals under Harry C. Nixon, former Premier and Provincial Secretary.

Re-organized.

Political observers say stiffening Liberal opposition may come from the differences between the Federal Liberal government and the Ontario government. Since the last session of the Legislature the Ontario Liberal party has undergone a complete re-organizatinn in which party figures in the Federal field are said to have played a prominent part. This, say some observers, will be reflected in the Liberal attitude in the legislation.

Mr. Nixon has said that if there is a special session of the legislature this fall—Mr. Drew has said he will call one if developments warrant it —he will see that the Federal family allowances legislation is an issue. The premier has announced his government will oppose the measure on constitutional grounds.

The C.C.F. leader, Mr. Jolliffe, came forward in support of the measure today, issuing a statement in which he charged Premier Drew "has raised the flag of provincial isolationism" in attacks on the allowances. Mr. Jolliffe said the allowances are necessary for protection of children and for other reasons and can be administered on a national scale.

Conservative Strength

Premier Drew says he regards the result of the by-election last March 20 in Haldimand-Norfolk riding as a sign of increased Progressive Conservative strength. There the Progressive Conservative candidate transformed the plurality the party held in the provincial election to a clear majority over both C.C.F. and Liberal candidates.

He is proud of the record of his administration since he and his fellow cabinet ministers were sworn into office one year ago today.

"We have gone far beyond our 22-point election program," he said, citing as among outstanding achievements the establishment of a provincial department of planning and development, assistance to agriculture and mining, labor legislation and forests policy.

Assistance to agriculture has been given through legislation providing for establishment of country agricultural committees and through the work of the agricultural commission —a "non-political" continuing organization—which has held meetings with farmers and farm organizations throughout the province and makes recommendations to the government on farm problems.

Likes Labor Legislation

The government's labor legislation he described as the most advanced of any province in Canada. He cited the work of the Ontario labor relations board which administers the labor code and collective bargaining applications, establishment of the 48-hour week and the 8-hour day (temporarily modified for some industries at the request of the Federal munitions department) and the compulsory one week's holidays annually with pay.

The premier recalled that as an interim step in implementing his pre-election pledge of removing half the burden of educational costs from real estate, the government is contributing $3,000,000 to municipalities this year. In addition, Mr. Justice J. A. Hope of the Ontario Supreme Court has been named to conduct a royal commission investigation into the entire educational tax system.

Mr. Drew listed as among other achievements of his government: Establishment of a Forest Resources Commission to control the provincial forest wealth; removal of 13,500,000 acres of timberland from private control; re-opening of Ontario House in London and appointment on an Ontario Agent-General in the United Kingdom; co-operation with the Federal government in the war effort; laying plans for construction of highways and public buildings after the war; educational reform including establishment of a Department of Vocational guidance, development of cadet training and physical education and institution of religious instruction in public schools; reduction of hydro rates in rural and mining areas; establishment of a civil service commission; provision of improved health services; study of rehabilitation, settlement and housing problems through the Department of Planning and Development.

Lauds Airforce For Making Preparations

OTTAWA, Aug. 18—(CP) — Success of the Allied invasion of France would have been impossible, but for the years of effort put in by the Allied air force leading up to that event, Rt. Hon. Harold Balfour, British Under Secretary of State for Air, said here Thursday at a press conference.

Looking back over the period, during all of which he held his key post at the Air Ministry, the former first Great War flier and co-architect of the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan, told of the effect of air operations and their cost.

"D-Day for the army was June 6," he saiad, "but D-Day for the air force was post Dunkerque. Ever since that time the efforts of the air force have been concentrated on preparations for a landing in France."

Robot planes had done little damage to the industrial war effort, said Capt. Balfour, but great damage had been done to small house property and to the ordinary social life of the people. Defense against them are being improved and if other new weapons are turned out, the Allies will have to be prepared to deal with them in the best way possible.

Capt. Balfour came to Ottawa from New York after meeting Lord Beaverbrook there on "some civil aviation matters." He crossed the Atlantic by way of Iceland, Greenland and Labrador, stopping at Mingan air base for some salmon fishing during which he was bitten by black flies.

He has conferred here with Air Minister Power and Air Marshal Robert Leckie, chief of the air staff, settling, he said, a good number of minor matters by direct contact which would have taken much letter writing to settle by mail.

Before returning to England he intends to visit several air training stations.

Casualties High From Robot Bombs

LONDON, Aug. 18 —(CP) —Rescue squads removed dead from the debris of houses and shops, from wrecked buses and street pavements to-day after one of the heaviest night barrages of flying bombs in two weeks.

The attacks were resumed at dawn as the rescue work continued.

For several hours last night the Nazis sent waves of robots across the channel at frequent intervals. R.A.F. fighters stopped some of the missiles.

At some places on the south-east coast, bathers and picnickers seeking respite from the heat carried on while anti-aircraft shells sprayed the sea for a mile or so offshore.

One robot fell on the busy cross streets of one south England town at shopping time yesterday, killing a number of persons and injuring others.

Germans Lost 750 Tanks In Four Days

Two Russian Armies Push Forward Toward German Silesia

By EDDY GILMORE
Associated Press Staff Writer

MOSCOW, Aug. 19.—(AP).—Two Soviet armies surged forward to-day in co-ordinated attacks against a 100-mile sector stretching from Warsaw's eastern suburbs to the Lyso mountains guarding German Silesia.

Marshal Stalin's High Command timed the Polish drive to strike with Gen. Ivan Cherniakhovsky's 3rd White Russian Army assault in East Prussia.

(The German communique said the Russians had launched an offensive on a wide front northeast of Warsaw.)

The Soviet home front tensely awaited a salute from Moscow's guns announcing that the Red Army had won the first town inside Germany.

The Germans, having squandered nearly 750 tanks in four days of counter-attacks, were faced with a smashing Red challenge for decisive victory in Poland.

Marshal Ivan S. Koven's 1st Ukraine Army, north of captured Sandomierz, sent armored columns spearing up the west bank of the Vistula in the rear of the enemy's river defences. Other units smashed due west bent on severing the Radom-Kielce link in the Warsaw-Krakow Railway.

Over the town hall of Sandimierz flags of the Soviet Union and Poland waved side by side after three days of street fighting. The Army newspaper Red Star reported that Hitler had ordered the Garrison at Sanodmiez on the eve of its capture to rain the gates to southern Germany and fight to the last."

Konev's destruction of the Upper Vistula resistance was the Signal Foshal Konstantin K. Rokossovsky's 1st White Russian Army to regain the initiative in the battle raging four to seven miles east of Warsaw. Red Infantry with powerful artillery support slashed into the sflanks of the narrow German Salient extending from Praga to Ossow.

Great Air Blitz Strikes Retreating Hun

By WILLIAM STEWART
Canadian Press War Correspondent

WITH THE 1ST CANADIAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Aug. 19— (CP Cable)—The battle of Normandy is won and a new phase of pursuit battles will follow, said higher Allied officer reviewing the Allied campaign, while Allied planes maintained their smashing attack on battered enemy forces trying to withdraw from the pocket east of Falaise and Argentan.

He said yesterday it would be a battle against German demolitions and booby traps designed to slow down the Allied forces. Any other form of efective resistance was beyond Germans means.

While the officers outlined the military situation, rocket-firing Typhoons and bomb-carrying Spitfires and Mustangs throughout yesterday flew over the 1st Canadian Army front, carrying out the greatest tactical air blitz in history against the Germans. The assault continued through yesterday evening and during the night.

Nazi Strength Diminishes

The officer said the Germans originally had a sizeable army beyond the Seine River, but almost two-thirds of its strength is believed to have been employed in attempts to plug holes in the Normandy front as the German 7th Army—which originally formed the ring around the Allied bridgehead—had its strength whittled down by Allied armies.

The officer said the Germans misread Allied intentions when they kept forces along the coast beyond the Seine, expecting a second landing there. They dribbled these forces away in piecemeal reinforcements of Normandy, which over a long period left the Seine army so depleted that it no longer constituted an army strong enough to withstand the approach of Allied forces.

He added that the Germans, while fighting in the Normandy pocket west of Falaise and Argentan, overlooked the strength of the 1st Canadian Army attack from the north.

Military authorities here think that the Germans' power in western Europe to build a new line that cannot be outflanked is gone. It is believed their power to resist effectively anywhere else along the western front also is finished.

LONDON— About 10,000 patients have been evacuated from London hospitals, it was disclosed today, after the Germans had sent over a flock of robot bombs.

So They Worked

HENDERSON, Tex., Aug. 19 —(AP).—Nazi prisoners of war being transported by truck threw empty beer bottles on the highway and punctured the tires on one of the trucks in the convoy. Residents reported the driver put the prisoners to work changing tires.

Dutch Troops On French Front

OTTAWA, Aug. 19.—(CP).—Some of the Belgian and Netherlands troops announced Friday as being part of the 1st Canadian Army trained in Quebec and Ontario and a large percentage risked their lives to join their national forces.

"This will be a happy day for our men," said a member of the Netherlands Legation staff. "Like the Belgian boys, most of our lads escaped from the Nazis and made their way by hazardous routes to our training stations in Canada and Britain. Now they are realizing their ambition— to march back toward their homeland."

Princess Juliana heard of the Netherlands forces being in action at her summer cottage in the Cape Cod area of Massachusetts. At her Ottawa home there was no comment, but an official expressed pleasure that the Netherlanders were wearing the name of Princess Irene—Juliana's daughter—on their shoulder tabs.

Elements of the Netherlands Army trained for a time at Stratford, and Belgian forces trained at Cornwall, Joliette and St. Johns, Que. Both nations have put airmen through the Commonwealth Air Training Plan in Canada, and Belgian graduates from this plan have won 24 Distinguished Service Crosses, and have a record of 100 enemy planes destroyed.

Baron Silvercruys, Belgian Ambassador and dean of the diplomatice corps in the capital, issued a statement in which he likened the mixed 1st Canadian Army to the famous British 8th, and described the new force as "a savage and devastating force that provides a pattern of co-operation for the world of to-morrow."

Lindsay Flier Awarded D.F.M.

LINDSAY, Aug. 19—Mr. and Mrs. William Ranson, Logie Street, have been notified that their son Sgt.-Bdr. Ranson, has received the Distinguished Flying Medal.

In a raid over Stuttgart, several months ago Sgt. Ranson took over the controls of his Halifax bomber after the navigator had been killed and the pilot wounded. He brought the ship to England safely.

Shortly before reaching the target area, the plane was hit by flak and one engine knocked out. Although the navigator's instruments had been destroyed, Sgt. Ranson used the pilot's compass. Letters home made light of the incident.

ALLIED SUPREME HEADQUARTERS—American armored columns have driven 15 miles northwest of Dreux within less than five miles of the Seine river at Mantes.

Gains General Across Southern France

ROME, Aug. 19 — (AP) — An Allied headquarters communique Saturday dealing with south of France:

Land—Continuing their rapid advance against relatively light opposition troops of the 7th Army have enlarged their bridgehead on the southern front to more than 1,000 square miles and have progressed to within six miles of Toulon.

Advances of several miles have been made in the western and northwestern sectors on both sides of the Argens River valley.

Towns occupied include Sollies-Pont, La Roquesbrussanne, Gareoult, Brignoles, Vins and Salernes.

French troops have overcome last enemy opposition in the Benat area.

Air—Strong forces of escorted heavy bombers yesterday attacked road and railroad bridges in the Rhone Valley and gun positions enemy transport and other targets in southern France. Others attacked enemy positions in northern Italy and Yugoslavia.

In these operations 10 enemy aircraft were destroyed and 21 of ours are missing.

Three of our aircraft are missing from night operations Aug. 17-18.

The M. A. A. F. flew approximately 1,400 sorties.

Sea—At about midnight of Aug. 17-18 a force of German motor torpedo boats attempted to attack ships landing troops and stores in the south of France. The attack was repulsed by destroyers of the U. S. Navy and after a series of engagements four of the enemy aircraft were sunk.

Some survivors were rescued.

Second Canadian Division Is Avenging Dieppe Raid

By R. J. ANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The dead lie in bleak graves. The wounded hobble and grope....the prisoners of war remain nameless men behind wire awaiting deliverance. But to-day, two years after, out of the heartbreak and shambles, the 2nd Canadian Division is wreaking vengeance for Dieppe. Soon, the men of the 2nd Division may be in Dieppe.

Without Dieppe—officially a "reconnaisance in force"—there could have been no invasion of France last June 6. That frontal attack on well-emplaced, fixed enemy fortifications proved many things: That hidden, heavy guns must be silenced by vertical assault that given air cover, warships can approach close to an enemy beach; that beach wire and underwater obstructions can be breached. It was victory—at heavy price.

Of the 5,000 men of the 2nd Canadian Division who participated in the fierce, nine-hour assault on the Cliff-Girt resort town lestling on the English channel Aug. 19, 1942, two-thirds were casualties— 3,350 dead, wounded, taken prisoner or missing. The Canadians were flanked by British Commandos, American Rangers and Fighting French units who also suffered heavily.

The Canadian regiments participating were the Royal Regiment of Canada, from Toronto; Royal Hamilton Light Infantry (Wentworth Regiment), Hamilton, Ont.; Essex Scottish Regiment, Windsor, Ont.; Queen's Own Cameron Highlanders, Winnipeg; Les Fusilliers, Mont-Royal, Montreal, South Saskatchewan Regiment, Weyburn, Sask., and the North Canadian Army Tank Battalion from Calgary. The division's commander, Maj.-Gen. J. H. Roberts, led the entire operation.

Now eager to avenge the men who fell two years ago to-day to prove that enemy beaches can be

German Army Facing Annihilation

Canadians 17 Miles From Le Havre Advancing Northward

By WEST GALLAGHER
Associated Press War Correspondent

ALLIED SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, Aug. 19.—(AP).—The western front battle for France reacher its last stage to-day—pursuit and annihilation of one German army and part of another fleeing toward Rouen and the almost bridgeless Seine.

Allied airforces reported the destruction of 3,800 enemy vehicles forced on to roads in daytime in an effort to escape the German columns under the most terrific air bombardment any battlefield ever has seen.

There was no further word of the progress of the American 3rd Army other than yesterday's report by the Germans that there was fighting 12 miles from the city. But it was announced at headquarters that American armored patrols had pushed out from Dreux, Chartres and Orleans—a ring of cities south and west of Paris—and in some cases had withdrawn.

Meanwhile the 1st Canadian Army forces were thrusting forward on a front extending from the coast east of the Orne to the Falaise area. It was disclosed yesterday that Belgian and Dutch forces are fighting with the 1st Canadian Army, which also includes British nd Polish troops.

British forces pushing northest of fallen Troarn reache the outskirts of Cabourg annd Dives-Sur-Mer and an area some 13 miles northeast of Caen. They were only 17 miles south of Le Havre by sea but separated from it by the wide estuary of the Seine river.

First Major Advance

This was the first major advance along the Normandy coast east of the Orne river since D-Day.

A senior British staff officer at the front predicted that Field Marshal Von Kluge's battered 7th Army reinoroed by parts of the 15th Army would not stop at the Seine river but would fall back even farther to shorter front.

British 2nd Army troops captured elements of 16 German divisions yesterday. Germans still caught in the Normandy trap were declared to be struggling chaotically to escape eastward.

Enemy forces that freed themselves from the pocket struggled

PORTLAND, Ore., Aug. 19 —(AP).—Merchant Seaman Jim Crooks of Bellingham, Wash., wanted to see if anyone would recognize an enemy soldier. Camillien Houde Given Great Reception

MONTREAL, August 19 —(CP)—Thousands of Montrealers were present at Montreal's Central station last night to welcome Camillien Houde, former Mayor of the city, home after four years of internment and an equally large crowd had gathered in the street in front of his home to await him there.

Mr. Houde, somewhat thinner but in good health and cheerful, had lost none of his flair for oratory and addressed both crowds over a public address system.

"I want to tell the people of the English language present here and those who will read about this in the newspapers that I have not been the victim of British fair play," he said. "I was only the victim of a political party and a political organization and nothing else. Some day we will meet the English populaion and will let them know the truth and they will know that I was right."

The crowd in front of the station and before his home cheered widely as Mr. Houde came to the microphone.

"What the future has in store for me, I do not know, but there is one thing you can be sure of. It is that I will always remain upright."

Awaits Changes.

Earlier, in an interview, Mr. Houde said he had no immediate plans for himself, "but for the nation— yes." He was waiting events —such as the end of the war, a Federal election or developments in the Provincial political field "which could bring a great change."

"I wish to consult my friends before making public any decisions as to my future plans," he saaid. "I will go where the public needs me most."

Liguori Lacombe, Canadian Member of the House of Commons for Laval-Two Mountains, was one of the first to greet Mr. Houde and he referred to him as "one of my staunchest supporters."

"Such a reception is not only proof of your friendship and esteem," Mr. Houde told the crowd of the station, "but it is also a warning to present authorities that they must feel public opinion as it is.

"I cannot tell you that four years of internment are nothing. I believe someone would have preferred to see me back in my dress suit, lying in satin, rather than back

Italian Front Remains Quiet

ROME, Aug. 19 —(AP) — The Italian front remained relatively quiet to-day with the last snipers cleaned up in the central part of Florence.

There was sporadic fire along the Arno river and some enemy patrols were repulsed. Allied patrols carried out deep reconnaissance in the Upper Arno valley and in the Adriatic sector.

Heavy rains fell along the front, hampering operations.

Meanwhile the material necessary to crack the Gothic line and open a path into Northern Italy was being prepared.

Field Marshal Kesselring who once had 24 divisions in Italy, now has the equivalent of perhaps a dozen. Cut off or very nearly cut off from France by the new Allied landing there, he now faces the drab possibilites of a knock-out fight in and behind the Gothic line, a cold winter in the Alps, or a difficult retreat in the Vienna direction.

1000 Square Miles Occupied In Southern France More Than 30 Miles Inland

German Resistance Continues Light Americans North Of Toulon Forge Inland Flanking Thrust

ROME, Aug. 19—(AP).—American 7th Army forces have driven to La Roquebrussane, 14 miles north of Toulon, in an inland flanking thrust, and other forces have driven to within six miles of that major French naval base, Allied Headquarters announced today. Still another column drove deeper into the interior of Southern France and occupied Salernes, 12 miles northwest of Draguignan and more than 30 miles inland from the landing beaches.

The beachhead has been enlarged to more than 1,000 square miles, and German resistance remains light, headquarters announced.

ALLIED SUPREME HEADQUARTERS— Canadians driving forward today southeast of Troarn gained five miles to the outskirts of Livarot.

A naval announcement said four German motor torpedo boats were sunk during an attempted attack on Allied ships.

An official announcement last night said one of Maj.-Gen. Alexander M. Patch's columns speared into the vicinity of Sollies Pont, six miles northeast of the Mediterranean port, while another plunged to the Brignoles area, 20 miles north, in an outflanking drive.

The German garrison sought to step up its resistance by employing the guns of the sunken French battleship Strasbourg, but American medium bombers hit and set fire to the vessel yesterday and may have knocked out her weapons. The 26,500-ton Strasbourg was partly submerged when the French scuttled their own fleet at Toulon.

(The BBC quoted one of its correspondents Saturday morning as saying that Toulon is going to fall soon. "The Germans have thrown up a hastily built screen of mobile guns and infantry to give protection to the rest of their men as they pulled out of the city," said the correspondent, Vaugh Thomas. "They are blowing up bridges and mining the roads, but not on a scale big enough to check our advance.")

The advance to Brignoles followed a trunk highway leading to the Rhome Valley north of Marseille. Such an advance, if projected beyond the latter city, would hem in German forces in both Marseille and Toulon.

Toward the eastern end of the beachhead, forward elements made slight advances in the vicinity of Draguignan, captured inland road junction point. But a late dispatch said German forces still occupied Le Muy, midway between Draguignan and St. Raphael on the coast. American artillery units were reported shelling Le Muy.

Headquarters announced capture of the second German General in 48 hours. He was taken yesterday by troops of the American 36th division.

Capture Islands.

Allied headquarters announced that the islands of Port-Cros and Levant were captured by the first special service force, a mixed Canadian and United States commando-type unit which saw service in Italy. These islands are off the

Planes Shatter Targets In Three Countries

LONDON, Aug. 19—(CP).—Allied airmen who destroyed or damaged more than 3,800 vehicles in blistering attacks on the fleeing enemy in northwest France yesterday, continued their assault on Field Marshal Kluge's shattered divisions today after a night in which more than 1,000 R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. heavyweights smashed at the great German port of Bremen and other targets.

As the four-engined night raiders lashed at widespread objectives in three countries, Mosquitos dumped two-ton blockbusters on Berlin for the fourth time in five nights and kept the non-stop offensive against the retreating remnants of the German 7th Army rolling throughout the night.

Other targets of the night fleets were a synthetic oil plant at Sterkrade-Holton in the Ruhr, oil storage depots in Belgium, the rail centre of Connantre, 70 miles east of Paris, and flying bomb sites in Northern France.

Sterkrade-Holton is ranked as about the sixth largest synthetic oil plant in the Ruhr.

The Canadian bomber group shared in the attack in the great port of Bremen. The operation marked the

CCF Invades New Brunswick

Contesting 41 Of 48 Seats On August 28

SAINT JOHN, N.B., August 19—(CP).—Increasingly frequent party rallies are being held throughout the province as New Brunswick electors wait for polling day, August 28, to decide between the Liberal Government of Premier J. B McNair, the Progressives headed by Hugh McKay, and the C.C.F. led by J. A. Mulgridge.

The campaign still lacks the fire interest of most previous pre-election periods. The chief issue lies in policies of the C.C.F. distinguished from the platforms of the older parties.

For the first time in the province's history, most of the contests for 48 seats are three-cornered as a result of the C.C.F. entry into the field.

C.C.F. candidates number 41 while Liberals and Progressive Conservatives are fighting for all 48 seats. No other party or Independents are in the field.

Result of the services vote in Canada is expected to be available a day or so after the election, but weeks or even months might elapse before polling arrangements could be carried out in all war theatres overseas.

Service men and women will vote for candidates in their home constituencies.

U.S. Removes Export Bans

Turkey May Receive Civilian Goods

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19 —(AP)—The United States has removed export bans on Turkey and is facilitating the shipment of civilian goods on a cash basis to the neutral which broke relations with Germany two weeks ago.

It was also learned to-day that shipment of miltary items under lend-lease is expected to resume shortly, depending on the Allied supply situation as a result of the French campaigns.

The majority of lend-lease sent to Turkey is of British origin, but the decision to start shipments is up to the combined munitions assignment board.

Britain and the United States stopped sending military aid to Turkey several months ago after negotiations between British and Turkish military delegations broke down.

The American ambassador to Ankara, Laurence Steinhardt, who has been in this country a month, is returning to-day.

The extent of lend-lease accorded Turkey will depend on whether or not that neutral comes into the war. Basing their predictions on the rapid progress of Allied drives in France and the western push of the Red Army, observers here were inclined to discount the possibility that Turkey become an active belligerent.

Paris Patriots Ready To Annihilate Huns

LONDON, August 19 — (AP). — A mysterious voice broke in on the German-controlled Paris radio yesterday and shouted in German: "They're coming," as strong French underground warriors awaited the signal for an uprising timed with the entry of American tank columns now probing the French Capitals environs.

Paris, anticipating deliverance, has the biggest and most well-knit force of all the resistance groups in France, Col. Jean Drumont, a 33-year-old French underground leader, told a press conference here yesterday.

For security reasons Drumont did not say what Paris' shadow army was going to do when the Allies reach Paris. The name Drumont is an assumed one because this highest ranking resistance officer yet to reach London still has wife and two daughters in France.

But he said Paris' patriots were the largest group of a total force stronger than the pre-war French standing army of 500,000 men.

The Swiss radio quoted a Vatican report that the Pope might intervene in an effort to spare destruction of Paris.

Frenchmen here were grimly expectant that the Germans would both put up a fight and try to damage the city as much as possible, in retaliation for the bombings of Berlin.

In Vichy, the "City of Shame," French collaborationists apparently had their bags packed for flight if they had not already gone to Germany.

Rumors persisted that French forces of the interior were in action on the outskirts of Vichy, and a communique from Brig. General Joseph Pierre Koenig, F.F.I. commander, said his men had captured Gueret, 75 miles west of Vichy, forcing the "whole German garrison, 500 strong, to surrender." The communique broadcast by Algiers Radio, said open war was under way in the Creuse Department, of which Gueret is the capital.

Along the French-Swiss frontier the French patriots controlled a 75-mile-deep section of French soil in the area beteen St. Gingolph and Belegarde, climaxed by a 3-hour morning battle in which Annemasse was captured.

Three hundred Germans surrendered at Annemasse after expected German reinforcements had failed to break through from Anecy. One hundred and twenty Germans fled into neutral Switzerland, half of them Elite S.S. troops.

A Swiss frontier report said German troops were preparing to leave Lyon, Rhone Valley city.

3 U.S. Columns In Paris Suburbs

STOCKHOLM, Aug. 19—(CP-Reuter).—The Berlin correspondent of the Swedish newspaper Aftonbladet reports three American columns now are fighting through the suburbs of Paris.

The correspondent this afternoon reported: "Three fast American columns are fighting their way through the suburbs of Paris. They seem to have thrown all caution overboard before the prospect of being rapidly in Paris.

"Unofficial reports only are so far available but news of the fall of Paris may be expected at any moment."

The report was without confirmation from any other source.

Home Problems Discussed By WI

TRENT RIVER, Aug. 19.—(ENS).—Mrs. H. Mann was hostess on Thursday to the Trent River Women's Institute, when home economics was the topic of the meeting.

Mrs. T. Wight gave a paper on 'Home Economics,' stressing that it is a subject that centres around the problems of the home and family. It teaches women how to clothe themselves, given an understanding of what is meant by good housing and sanitation, instructs them in bringing up children, and to finance their affaiars in keeping with the income, she saaid. "An excellent housekeeper may not be an excellent homemaker A real home maker brings culture into the family, makes the home a place that stands for rest, peace, comfort, health and inspiration and a place where the family live happily together.

"It is we home makers who are to build up and maintain the family health. We must give extra thought to the care of children to develop sound bodies, strong nerves, serenity and wise use of leisure time. As home makers, this is our challenge. It is our duty to accept it whole-heartedly, because of the great benefit it will be to our family, our community, our province aud our country."

It is conceivable that as the enemy falls back across the Seine river in his disorganized retreat the Allies may attempt to encircle the German 15th Army guarding the Pas De Calaias area and the robot-bomb coast, swinging east and north like a gigantitc scythe. If successful, that move would force the fall of Dieppe.

Fired For Curiosity

HOUSTON, Tex., Aug. 19—(AP). — Nine inquisitive women shoppers were wishing today they hadn't been so curious. A patrolman was writing a jay walking ticket—and he doled out nine additional tickets for them.

Legion Resents Family Eviction

SARNIA, Aug. 19 — When Sgt. George Pettit, his wife and four children were evicted from 476 Campbell street, just outside the city limits, Friday, officials of the local branch of the Canadian Legion arranged to house the family in three rooms at the organization's headquarters, and R. W. Rigsby, president, telegraphed the Ontario and Dominion commands of the Legion for action. The Sarnia branch is urging that pressure be brought to bear on the authorities to provide that houses offered for sale and not sold within 30 days be made available to families seeking homes.

The Legion action came because a house next door to the home of the evicted family, empty for some time, had been refused as accommodation to a soldier's family. The owner of the house in which the Pettits resided purchased the building a year ago.

Sgt. Pettit, who was given a week's compassionate furlough to secure a home for his family, was served the eviction order in a rainstorm yesterday, but Court Bailiff Lloyd Duncan refused to order the furniture out into the muddy yard.

Legion officials have been endeavoring to secure a home for the family for some time, going so far as to offer rewards for clues leading to vacant homes. There are several vacant houses in the city, but very few for rent.

ST. RAPHAEL, Southern France, Aug. 19 (CP) — Twenty-five pretty girls had their heads shaved by the town's leading barber in front of the Town Hall today as punishment for having been too friendly with the Germans.

While jeering towns people and embarrassed American soldiers crowded about, the girls were plunked one by one into the chair in the centre of the square.

They had been condemned to the punishment by a seven-man committee of liberation.

An old woman hit one of the girls over the head with a basket as she was made to walk through a lane of people after the hair cutting, but otherwise the crowd did not touch the girls and, unlike the Corsican precedent, none of the girls was stripped.

After 41 Years Cygnet Still Regatta Winner

CROWE'S LANDING, Aug. 19 — (ENS)—Old timers got a glimpse far into the past at the annual regatta of the Upper Stoney Lake Campers' and Cottagers' Association nere this week when Harold Knapman sailed his grand old boat "Cygnet" to a victory in the open sailing racing, a handicap event.

It was 41 years ago that the "Cygnet" first came to Stoney Lake after many triumphs on Hamilton Bay and other Lake Ontario ports. Sailed for years by the late J. S. Knapman and later by his son Harold the graceful craft has won more sailing events around the Kawarthas than ever its owner can begin to guess.

The regatta arranged at short notice was a successful affair with a surprisingly large attendance from Stoney Lake points. There were large fields of entries in most of the events and the competition was keen all the way. Even although the prizes were of the war-time variety, cnocolate bars and soft drinks. The results:—

northward toward the Seine after Lt.-Gen. Patton's 3rd Army forces virtually had denied them any chance of falling back toward Paris.

The Supreme Command said there would be a temporary blackout of news in some sectors, since the Germans were in such a state of confusion they did not know where the Allied troops were and any announcement of Allied positions which they could hear by radio would help them.

While the American 3rd Army held the Germans compressed within a 80-mile wall of armor stretching from a point near the Argentan to Dreux, British, American, Canadian, Polish, Dutch and Belgian forces drove the Germans in a confused mass toward the Seine river.

Terrific Defeat

This struggling German force was estimated at 40,000 to 100,000 men. It included not only the broken 7th Army, but also mauled elements believed to comprise half of Von Kluge's crack 15th Army, revealed yesterday to have been rushed from Northern France where it had been assigned to protect the rocket bomb coast. A British staff officer said the offensive power of these troops was spent, and he added that in winning the battle of Normandy the Allies have won the battle of France.

In France, Gen. Eisenhower conferred with his highest officers and was believed to have reached far-reaching decisions as a result of the new turn of the battle.

During an R.A.F. air bombardment north of Trun yesterday one great mass of vehicles was turned into a flaming, bloody mass of tanks, trucks and men. R.A.F. veterans of the North African campaign described the attacks on the fleeing Germans as the greatest show "Since Alamein" which spelled Marshal Erwin Rommel's doom in Africa.

(The German Transocean Agency, broadcasting from Berlin quoted a German War Ministry official statement as saying "We must be prepared for a German withdrawal from France."

Must Fight to Last.

(The same agency quoted a military spokesman in Berlin as saying that "no fresh German divisions can be sent to France. The troops in battle have been warned of this and have been ordered to fight to the last man.")

Headquarters was silent yesterday regarding the movement of Third Army units on Paris but confirmed the capture of Authon, 30 miles south-west of Paris. It said it was "unable to confirm" earlier reports that the Americans were near Versailles, seven miles outside Paris.

Headquarters said last night the Falaise-Argentan gap in Normandy now had been narrowed to two miles. A front-line broadcast said the gap had been snapped shut entirely around Trun, south-east of Falaise.

The pocket had dwindled to such insignificance, however, that great forces of British and Canadian troops were released and were driving straight east after the enemy.

Arctic Stations Face Hardships

OTTAWA, Aug. 18. — (CP).—More than a score of Arctic Circle stations are faced with a winter of stern hardship and deprivation as a result of the loss of the mission ship Francoise Marie Therese, which foundered Aug. 13, it was learned to-day.

There were no casualties and survivors included Roman Catholic missionaries, the crew and eight Eskimo.

Reports reaching members of the Oblate Order, sponsors of the ship and Arctic missions, said the vessel piled on a reef in fog and drift ice south-east of Salisbury Island at the Hudson Bay end of Hudson Strait.

An Oblate Father said 10 per cent of the 200-ton cargo of fuel, food and other supplies had been delivered on the voyage which started in Montreal July 26. She was scheduled to visit 33 missionaries scattered around the Hudson area.

"The supplies at the stations will be about exhausted and the Fathers will suffer real hardship and deprivataion this winter," he said. "They will be able to keep alive, however, by hunting and fishing with the Eskimo and living on a diet of walrus and seal meat."

Cologne and other objectives in northwest Germany also were hit during the night and mines were laid in enemy waters.

The Air Ministry said R.A.F. Lancasters and Halifaxes late yesterday with fighter escort smashed at a long-range weapon supply depot at L'Isle Adam just north of Paris and several flying bomb launching sites in attacks from which four bombers were missing.

Allied bombers and fighters thundered over the English Channel today to strike new blows against the reeling foe in France.

Round Up Saboteurs In Italian Cities

ROME, Aug. 19 — (AP) — Allied authorities announce 95 per cent of the Italian spies and saboteurs sent by the Germans to liberated Italy have been rounded up.

The announcement yesterday said their arrest had been made easter by "the cynical disregard displayed by the Germans" for the lives and safety of those whom they employed.

Sixteen of those have been executed, many more have been sentenced to death, and a large number still are awaiting trial.

Huge Meteor Flashes Across States

INDIANAPOLIS, Aug. 19 (AP)—A fiery object believed to have been a meteor hurtled brilliantly across Middle Western skies this morning and reports of its "landing" in a hundred places plagued newspapers, police, radio stations and military officals.

Startled witnesses from Western Ohio, all over Indiana, Eastern Illinois and Northern Kentucky, variously describing the phenomenon as a big explosion, a slivery flash in the sky, a plume of black smoke, were agreed genrally that the objects's direction was westward and its occurrence about 8:15 a.m.

An Indiana housewife, said it drove her chickens to a frenzy. Ohioans telephoned airports that a plane was crashing. Illinois police thought "a nitro-glycerin plant" had exploded. And a Southern Indiana minister, who said the meteor landed a quarter-mile from his automobile, wrote a description for a newspaper, which he entitled "Preacher Smells Brimstone."

"The aerial explosion descriptions from Indiana agree in every way with those of a large meteor, occasionally seen in daylight,' ' said Howard Blakeslee, Associated Press science editor. "One or several explosions are common. The wide area from which the object resighted is common to meteor reports."

Capt. Walter Eckert of the Indiana State police, said callers from many parts of the State "described what they had seen as a large white silver ball that seemed to be plunging earthward with a trail of smoke or fire behind it. Some of them reported windows rattled and dishes danced on shelves."

Rumbling explosions accompanying the object's flight brought the German robot bomb to many minds but Blakeslee said:

"When several (meteor) explosions occur, there are always spectators at some points in the area who heard them, the last and nearest one first. If the retreating series of explosions was heard by reliable witnesses, then it can be assumed as proof that the Indiana object was merely a big meteor."

The Russian communique was silent on fighting at the border of East Prussia, but fliers returning from that area reported villages inside the junker province burning from Nazi-applied torches

(Moscow broadcasts heard in London said the Russians had reached the East Prussian border at new but unspecified points. "Fighting on the threshold of East Prussia grows fiercer every hour... But the speed of the Soviet offensive never slackens, one Moscow announcer asserted (Berlin reported the Russians had hurled more than 150,000 men into the battle for East Prussia in an 80-mile front from Augustow in Northern Poland to the Niemen River, in Western Lithuania. Marshal Ivan S. The Russian war bulletin said "successful engagements" were in progress for the three trapped Nazi divisions that "have fallen into the cauldron."

In Estonia units of the 3rd Baltic Army crossed the naro strait linking Lakes Pakov and Peipus, seized a six-mile-wide strip of territory on the west side, and drove miles inland in a push toward Tartu, Estonias second largest city.

These units joined forces which had been pushing up the west bank of Lake Pakov. Fifteen miles inland another Russian column seized Valgetmessa, 15½ miles south-east of Tartu. The Soviet war bulletin said 1,000 Germans were slain in that battle.

Egg Shipments Show Increase

TORONTO, Aug. 19—Receipts of eggs in Toronto yesterday showed a slight increase but not sufficient to cause any price changes. The market was firm throughout the week with receipts on the light side and top grades brought a little more at the middle of the week. Grades "B" and "C" have been inclined to drag.

Out-of-town movement has been light. Offerings from the Prairie Provinces have been on the basis of 42 to 43 cents for "A" large, with no interest shown here at these prices. One car of British Columbia eggs brought early this month is due to arrive this week, costing 41 cents basis "A" large.

There is a steady demand for butter at 34 cents for No. 1 Ontario solids, but receipts have been light. This has curtailed trading. Prices are firm at present levels. The odd car of Western butter was sold yesterday at 34½ cents. Offerings from the West are light and there is no pressure to sell.

Nazis Forecast Withdrawal Across France

By DEWITT MACKENZIE,
Associated Press War Analyst.

Hitler's chances of making a successful defence of Paris were virtually nullified when the best troops and equipment he had in western Europe were caught in the Normandy tornado, and Lt.-Gen. Patton's rampaging armored columns clenched the position by capturing the strategic railway and highway centres of Dreux, Chartres and Orleans, thus in effect putting the capital under siege.

The French capital has been through a terrible ordeal, and is suffering great privations— even hunger— but that's an old, old story for this ancient town and she will recover quickly as is her nature.

Berlin's blunt forecast of large-scale German withdrawals in France isn't at all surprising in view of the catastrophe which Hitler has suffered. Close to half his effective fighting force in western Europe has been rendered hors de combat, leaving him with only a fraction of the strength he needs.

There's nothing left for the Nazi dictator to do but to pull out of large sections of France, and his own newspaper Volkischer Beobachter says that's what he's going to do. He'd have been better off if he had done it sooner.

It strikes me that he must cling to a very considerable stretch of the Seine, from the channel towards Paris. If he attempts to do this he must hold the city of Rouen, on the northern bank of the river near its mouth, as a vital part of his coastal anchor. Word from Allied Headquarters that the Hitlerites south and West of the Seine are retreating in the general direction of Rouen would seem to indicate Hitler does indeed intend to make some sort of a stand on the river.

It's a safe bet Hitler will hang onto this line as long as possible, in order to protect the coast and the Pas De Calais area from which he is launching his bombs on England.

However that may be, as the Nazi defensive line along the Seine has to retreat northwards so will the coastal forces have to withdraw at the same time, or be flanked. We are on the eve of a crisis which may produce upprecedented events, and in this connection we should keep an eye on the warfare from the skies.

Return Of Ark To Israel Brings Prosperity To Land

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL

(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for Aug. 20 is I Samuel 3:19—7:17, the Golden Text being Jeremiah 23:28, "He that hath My word, let him speak My word faithfully.")

LAST WEEK'S lesson ended with Eli, the ancient priest, dying of a broken neck suffered in a fall when he heard that the ark of the covenant had been taken by the Philistines.

Eli's sons were killed in the battle but the wife of one of them, Phinehas, was expecting a baby. When she learned that her father-in-law and her husband were killed and the ark captured, she knew her time had come. The babe was born, and her women tried to comfort her, saying, "Fear not; for thou hast borne a son." She named the child Ichabod (no glory) and said, "The glory is departed from Israel: for the ark of God is taken," and so she died.

"And Samuel grew, and Jehovah was with him, and did let none of his words fall to the ground. And all Israel from Dan even to Beer-sheba knew that Samuel was established to be a prophet of Jehovah."

God Dagon Thrown Down

The Philistines evidently thought that now the ark was theirs the power of God would also be with them. They took the ark and set it up in the house in which their god Dagon was enthroned, in the city of Ashdod. Dagon was the national god of the Philistines, and had a man's head and hands but the body of a fish. When they entered the house next day, however, Dagon was thrown down on his face. They set him up and came again the next day, only to find Dagon again on the floor, this time with head and hands cut off, only the stump remaining.

Then and there they decided to send the ark away to Gath. Here pestilence struck the Philistines, so they sent the ark to Ekron where the people cried that it was brought to slay them. Seven months the ark was in the hands of the Philistines, and many died, so that the people cried to their priests and diviners to know what they should do.

They decided to take two kine or young cows that had never known the yoke, and have them draw the cart with the ark on it, and also a box of golden ornaments which the Philistines had made to appease the Israelitish God. The kine were not to be driven or led, and if they took the road to Bethshemesh, they would know that the ark was indeed the cause of their troubles.

"And the kine took the straight way to the way of Bethshemesh, and went along the highway, lowing as they went; . . . and the lords of the Philistines went after them unto the border of Bethshemesh."

Return of Ark Brings Rejoicing

The men of Bethshemesh were reaping their wheat, and when they saw the ark returning to them they rejoiced. The cart came into the field and stood there beside a great stone, and the Israelites clave the wood of the cart and offered the kine a burnt offering to the Lord. The Philistine lords returned to Ekron the same day.

The Levites put the ark and the golden offerings upon the stone and the people offered burnt offerings and sacrifices unto the Lord. But the men of Bethshemesh were not content with the return of the ark. They opened it and looked upon the sacred contents, and for this the Lord smote them "with a great slaughter."

Messengers were sent to tell the people about the return of the ark, and it was taken to the house of Abinadab, who son, Eleazar, was sanctified to keep the ark. The ark abode there 20 years.

Then Samuel rose and told the people that if they would return to the worship of God and give up their idols, God would deliver them out of the hands of the Philistines. All Israel gathered at Mizpah and acknowledged its sins and gave up idol worship.

Now when the Philistines heard that the Israelites were gathered in Mizpah, they decided to attack them. Samuel took a sucking lamb, offered it as a burnt offering, and cried unto the Lord for Israel, and the Lord heard him. As the enemy drew near God thundered and discomfited the Philistines and they fled and were pursued by the Israelites to Bethcar. There, Samued took a stone and set it between Mizpah and Shen and called the name of it Ebenezer, meaning "the Lord helped us."

So the Philistines no longer troubled the Israelites and they gave back the cities they had taken and there was peace.

Samuel became a judge, and he went from year to year in the circuit judging the people, all the days of his life. But always he returned to Ramah, where he was born, "for there was his house; and there he judged Israel."

Canadian Birds

By G. H. RICHARDSON

LOONS are migrating now. Their spring migration seems a bit odd, for although it starts now, a few loons are still straggling through at the end of May. Most summer vacationists are familiar with this bird and its weird cries, and most get quite a shock upon first hearing one, unless there is someone along to explain the eerie note. A screech owl's quaver can send the shivers up one's spine in similar fashion unless one is prepared. What a difference this definite knowledge can make one's feelings, witness "Snow White's reactions to the woods and what was actually the cause of her fear.

A loon's smoothness of action on the water is something nearly every one remembers in connection with them. In alighting, they trail their feet behind them. Instead of kicking up a great splash, they simply glide to rest with oily ease. In diving, too, they go under without creating a splash, and when submerged there is just a ripple left to show where they went down. Their shyness keeps the mat considerable distance, as a rule, although they have a great curiosity and sometimes swim up to the shore to investigate a handkerchief waved at them. When on the water, the low riding carriage, with head held up with an inquiring air, are quite characteristic.

Several Species of Sparrows.

When strolling along a fencerow in the country, sparrows of several species, may pop up before you, to perch for a moment. Three of the common species, which are arriving now are the vesper, Savannah, and chipping sparrows.

The chipping sparrow is a small sparrow of rather slender build, with a noticeably forked tail-tip. Its song is simply a rapid series of "chips" and its color pattern rather drab. It is nevertheless distinctive. Along with its brown back and clear gray breast is a definite head pattern—chestnut crown, light stripe over the eyes and a black one through it. This head pattern is its field mark.

The vesper sparrow is of song sparrow size, grey-brown with whiter outer tail feathers which flash as it flies. If seen up close, it shows a white eye-ring and chestnut shoulders. Although it is streaked on the breast, the streaking is not so heavy as that of the fox, Savannah, or song sparrows, nor is there the pronounced dot in the middle of the breast streaking as in those three.

Quite frequently, individuals of chipping, Savanaah and vesper sparrows may be perched close together on some barbwire or fence-rail. The Savannah sparrow is the commonest sparrow of the field areas. It looks rather like a buffy song sparrow with a definite yellowness about the face, especially in front of the eye.

"Mud-Hens" Now Appearing.

In marshy areas by ponds, various marsh dwellers are appearing

GIANT BLUE HERON, COOT IN BACKGROUD.

There are two kinds of birds commonly known as "mud-hens." One of these, the coot, as taking up residence now. A bird of hen-like build, it spends a lot of time on the water, bobbing its head back and forth as it swims, as does a walking pigeon, in color it is simply slate-grey, darker on the head and neck, with a white bill. The other "mud-hen" which arrives about the first of May, is also known as the Florida gallinue. It has a brown back, white streaks on the flanks and a bright red bill. This is the same bird which in England is known as the moor-hen.

Another bird of the marshy areas is the great blue heron. This stately figure adds much to the landscape. The adult has a white crown and two long black feathers extending back from the head. The young take several years to attain their full plumage and so are duller, especially lacking the white crown and long black feathers.

Jesus Understands Man

By REV. E. R. JAMES.

Jesus knew what was in man.—St. John 2, 25.

The wise young man goes courting that he may know what is in the girl. The writer of this Gospel, St. John, the beloved disciple, has been pondering and meditating upon the character of the Lord Christ for more than fifty years. He sums up that knowledge in words which are lightly passed over, yet they contain the secret of Our Lord's Name when they saw the miracles which He did; but Jesus did not commit Himself to them because He knew all men and needed not that any should testify of man, for He knew what was in man."

The Apostles, plain men of Galilee, were thrilled when men from Jerusalem joined their circle. They gave tone to their movemnt. But the Master's teaching was too hard for them to understand. "They walked no more with Him." The Master was calling men to be the "Commandos' of His Kingdom; His shock troops. These city men were not of the stuff required.

The Teacher was not looking for popularity. He did not write a book. He desired to write His secrets upon the hearts and minds of men who would not be ashamed to proclaim them from the housetops at the price of their lives. St. John gives us the stories of men to whom the Lord committed Himself.

Nicodemus was a member of the Sanhedrin, the highest ecclesiastic court of his nation. In a word he was a prince of the Church. He was proud of his official position, yet his heart was sound. Nicodemus had to pass through the birth pangs, casting away his pride — no easy thing for such a man—and become like a little child before he could enter the Kingdom of God.

The Lord committed Himself to the Samaritan woman, an outcast. He clearly revealed Himself to her. She nedeed such assurance to enable her to put away her past life. She was one of the little ones of the flock, so to her He clearly said: "I, that speak unto thee am the Christ."

The Lord Jesus committed Himself to the blind beggar. "Thou hast both seen the Son of God, and it is He that talketh with thee." This revelation gives the beggar strength to look for work and regain his self-respect. He had been a beggar for many years. The habits of a life time are not easily broken. These poor insignificant people could not hurt His ministry by their knowledge.

On the other hand it is instructive to realize that the Lord Jesus did not reveal Himself openly to His Apostles or to the people. He was a Man, Who had a great secret which, He hoped, the Apostles would discover. He could not afford to tell them. From boyhood their minds had been fascinated with the thought that the Messiah, the Christ, was to be a man of war, to break the Roman yoke.

After two years in His company the Master took the Apostles apart to a quiet place and there asked them the all-important question: "Who am I?" "Thou art the Christ" is Simon's answer. The Lords human heart overflows with emotion as He exclaims: "Blessed art thou, Simon bar Jona; flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father which is in Heaven."

The Lord Jesus had committed Himself to them. Slowly and gradually, though unconsciously, they are giving Him the value of God.

"Jesus knew what was in man." Yet he stands at the door of your heart and knocks. He knows your high ideals and your low desires. Yet the risen Lord is offering Himself to you. If you open He will enter and change your life, so that men may see the "Christ being formed in you."

EVEN SO, COME, LORD JESUS.

Hold Picnic

WARSAW, Aug. 19 (ENS)—The Community Mission Band picnic was held on the church lawn on Thursday, beginning at 10 o'clock with 48 children and seven adults in attendance.

Following a singsong, the story of the Big Dipper was told by Mr. R. C. Sidenius, after which they divided into three groups for Bible study, with Rev. Snelgrove, Mrs. Snelgrove and Joyce Digweed as leaders.

The craft study for boys, led by Arden Clements, was the making of whistles; for older girls, led by Mrs. Elmer Bell, the making of pot holders, and the younger group, led by Joyce Digweed, made linen boxes.

After dinner, which was served on the church lawn, all marched to the Back Daw for swimming, racing and singing.

ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

The Prophet In the Life of Israel

By Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—1 Samuel 3:19—7:17

The Philistines set the Lord's ark in the house of their god Dagon, but when they looked in the morning Dagon had been cast down, with head and arms cut off.

The Israelites' ark brought trouble upon the Philistines, many being taken sick and dying in the cities into which it was carried. They asked it be taken away.

Seven months the ark abode in the land of the Philistines and they called their priests and diviners and asked what should they do to save themselves.

They were told to take two kine that had never been yoked, and to let them draw the ark and jewels back to Israel.

The Dominion-Provincial Conference

Although there has been some criticism of the Prime Minister for his decision to postpone the Dominion-Provincial conference until after a general election, that is the only course which he could sensibly follow. Such conferences cost money and there is no point in holding one which is doomed before it begins. Premier George Drew of Ontario has expressed himself unequivocally as the opponent of the present administration at Ottawa, and has made clear his desire to see that government supplanted by another under the leadership of Mr. Bracken. It is not reasonable to suppose that Mr. Drew would go to a conference at the present time in an accommodating frame of mind if he thought that Mr. Bracken would be Prime Minister within a few months. The obvious thing, therefore, is to wait until after the election: if Mr. Bracken is then Prime Minister, Mr. Drew will go to the conference in a happy frame of mind; if Mr. Bracken is not Prime Minister, Mr. Drew may see the wisdom of compromising with Mr. King. What Mr. Drew's feelings will be if Mr. Coldwell is Prime Minister demands the treatment of a more powerful pen than ours.

Mr. Drew seems eager to continue the feud between Parliament Hill and Queen's Park which was carried on so violently by his predecessor, Mr. Hepburn. He has declared on the radio that he does not want Canada to be governed according to the whims of one province; he alluded to Quebec. But Mr. Drew, like Mr. Hepburn before him, seems quite willing that Canada should be governed by the whims of Ontario, and he has no reluctance about putting forward Ontario's great wealth as the reason for his superiority. Mr. Drew has declared his unalterable opposition to the Family Allowances Bill, and while he is in that frame of mind his only reason in going to a Dominion-Provincial conference would be to wreck it. In that case, why trouble to have a conference at all? Mr. Drew, it must be said, leads a minority government in this province, but that does not deter him from using the province as a stumbling-block to the rest of the nation.

The chief business of the Dominion-Provincial conference, when it is called, will be to readjust the taxing power of the provinces and the Dominion; that power has been greatly upset during the war, and it was unsatisfactory even before it. As things stand at the moment, this unsatisfactory division of taxing power makes a satisfactory economy within Canada impossible. It has been said, chiefly in the western provinces, that Ontario has refused to co-operate in a repartition of taxing power because it suits its provincial interests to keep things as they are; this is an extremely complex question to which no satisfactory solution has yet been found. But it does seem obvious that the Ontario government, for some time, has shown itself uncooperative toward the Dominion government and toward the rest of Canada. That is a situation threatening national unity which has not yet attracted the attention of the zealots who shriek that the greatest threat to our national unity is the isolationism of Quebec. Nationalist isolation or financial isolation—which is worse?

The history of the proposed Dominion-Provincial conference is a long one, but we shall attempt to summarize its chief points. Last January, before the Dominion parliament met, the Prime Minister asked the Premiers of the provinces for their views on a conference to discuss post-war planning, reconstruction, employment and financial relations; all of them accepted the invitation. Then the Prime Minister invited each province to send a senior treasury official to Ottawa to help in preparing the data necessary for such a conference. Mr. Drew refused to do so, and in the course of a correspondence with the Prime Minister, pressed for a preliminary conference "for the purpose of reaching some agreement regarding the steps which would be taken to establish an effective basis for co-operation". Mr. King submitted this proposal to the other provinces and seven of them refused to consider it. Mr. Drew then said that he had not refused to send a treasury official to Ottawa to assist in the preparation of data; and although three subsequent requests were sent to him for this assistance, he did not trouble to reply to any of them. At last he wrote to say that it had never been made clear to him why such an official should be lent. Then Mr. King once again wrote to him, asking that an Ontario official be sent to help in preparing data for the conference. This is a portion of Mr. Drew's reply:

> "It seems necessary for me to remind you that this is a conference between governments, not merely a meeting at Ottawa to suit the convenience of the Dominion Government. We will prepare our material for this conference in the manner which we believe will best prepare us for that gathering. We will certainly co-operate in every way in furnishing such information as is required, as we have been doing in the past...What I want to know is whether or not there is going to be a Dominion-Provincial conference. If it is the intention of the Dominion Government to take part in such a conference, there is no reason why the date should not be set. I would like to have a definite statement from you as to what your intentions really are".

This gives an idea of how accommodating Mr. Drew has been in the matter of the conference. What is the use of holding a conference to repeat the foolishness of January, 1941, when Mr. Hepburn spiked the conference on the Sirois-Rowell Report? And certainly there is no point in a conference undertaken in this spirit so soon before a general election. Perhaps, when that is over, Mr. Drew will go to a conference to deal with Mr. Bracken. If he does so, it will be interesting to see how that Westerner deals with Mr. Drew's mighty notions of the place of Ontario in the Dominion.

Our Debt To Norway

Early in the autumn the Norwegian War Aid Fund Society of Peterborough will make an appeal to the people of this city and the surrounding district for money to carry on its work: the Examiner recommends this cause to its readers as one deserving the warmest support. Norway was one of the earliest countries to suffer from Nazi aggression, and when the Germans assaulted Norway they were fresh and confident of their strength. The Norwegian fighting forces and the civil population put up a brave fight, but there was never any chance that they could win; we were unable to send them any effective help. Thus Norway was occupied in 1940, but it would be wrong to say that Norway was defeated. The Norwegians still resist the enemy in every way possible, and Norwegian forces fight with us as powerful allies. As well as fighting forces, we must not forget that when Norway fell, 1,000 Norwegian merchant vessels of the most modern kind escaped to Britain, manned by 25,000 Norwegian sailors. Those ships were invaluable to the Allied cause during the hard years of 1941-42, when every ship that carried goods on the Atlantic was infinitely precious to us.

Norway has suffered heavily in this war, and Norway has given much to the cause of the United Nations. Franklin D. Roosevelt has summed the matter up eloquently in his declaration: "If there is anyone who still wonders why this war is being fought, let him look to Norway. If there is anyone who has any delusions that this war could have been averted, let him look to Norway. And if there is anyone who doubts of the democratic will to win, again I say, let him look to Norway. He will find in Norway, at once conquered and unconquerable, the answer to his questioning".

The people of this city and county have responded with the greatest generosity to the many national appeals which have been made to them since this war began. We are sure that they will not fail Norway, a country very near to us in spirit, and a comrade in arms.

Diary Of A Traveller

By SAMUEL MARCHBANKS

SUNDAY: It was raining when I woke up, so fortunately there was no necessity to hurry outside and admire the fineness of the day; there is a great deal of virtue in the bad weather, and the best of it is that you do not have to exhaust yourself enjoying it. Stayed in bed until almost noon, storing up energy for future great tasks; the late Brigadier Wingate believed in setting up a reservoir of energy, and so do I.... This evening caught the train to Ottawa, which was an hour and fifteen minutes late, owing to a hotbox; the wait allowed me to drink in more of the fresh air of the station than I needed, or wanted....Then began one of my pitiful struggles to sleep in a Pullman berth; not being four feet tall and made of gutta percha, I could not do it, and another hotbox in the night did not help me, for I think it was right under my bed; at any rate, that was where the noise came from. Mark my words, the day will dawn when we shall wonder how we ever endured our present form of night travel. Arrived in Ottawa two hours late, more dead than alive.

MONDAY: Attended the dinner which marked the 25th anniversary of Mackenzie King's leadership of the Liberal Party. I went (paying $2 for a ticket) to hear the Prime Minister. But I miscalculated: I counted on returning home on a train which left at 11 p.m., and the Premier was not permitted to get his feet until 10:35. Before that time fourteen—count them—fourteen malefactors, male and female, made speeches in which they told me things which I already knew, most of which they had cribbed from Emil Ludwig's essay on Mackenzie King. It is always thus at banquets. The principal speaker is never allowed to say his say until a dozen other inferior speakers have exhausted the patience and endurance of the listeners. All these small fry imagine that they are the main attraction of the evening, and they roar, and posture, and mangle old, tired ornaments of speech until the evening is ruined: then they hand over the bruised, enraged and nerve-wracked auditory to the guest of honour. Fourteen speeches in French, Gaelic and various sorts of English!....Having heard seven minutes of the Premier's address I hurried off to renew my battle with the Pullman, cursing the vanity of little men and women who do not know how to shut up and sit down.

TUESDAY: Passed a good deal of today in wishing for sleep, the twin of death. There was a time when I could go without sleep for several days, and liked nothing better than a long walk during the night, when there was nobody about; during those walks I met several peculiar characters, and became firmly convinced that the world of the night is a special world, with laws and influences of its own. I recall being caught in the rain one night, and sleeping in a sentry box for an hour or two, until the weather cleared; there were large, hairy spiders in it....Yesterday I walked down Sparks Street in Ottawa (which is rather a mean street for a capital city) and counted nine clocks which told the wrong time. Are the people of Ottawa indifferent to the flight of time? I remember that a lady once wrote a book about Ottawa, called "The Land of Afternoon," which caused a certain amount of genteel indignation in the Civil Service....Also observed the monuments on Parliament Hill, and particularly that to McGee, at the base of which sits a strong-minded bronze female in classical dress. Who can she be? The name Molly somehow occurs to me, though I can't think why.

WEDNESDAY: To the movies tonight and was given a seat next to a woman who had brought a baby, which was certainly not more than eight months old. It was suffering with gas on its stomach, so she had laid it upside down over her knees and was rolling it to and fro as she watched the picture. The occasional high-pitched belches and moans of the suffering moppet worked upon my sympathies until I could no longer concentrate on Rita Hayworth, and as long experience has taught me that it is dangerous to come between a mother and her child—even when she is treating it cruelly—I moved. The child had been upside down for half an hour, and I began to fear that it might die; it smelled rather dead, though it still wriggled slightly....Found that I had taken a seat next to an elderly woman who was enjoying the film in her bare feet; she had a pair of shoes, but she held them in her lap—to save them, I suppose. These incidents made me thankful for Rita Hayworth who was young, beautiful, clothed, right side up, and apparently in excellent health. I see by the papers that Rita Hayworth is going to have a baby, the child of Orson Welles; splendid; the brilliant and the beautiful should be encouraged to reproduce their kind. What about baby bonuses for them?

THURSDAY: I see that a member of Parliament has warned us against setting up a society in which great numbers of people look to someone else for the bread they eat. While I was working out my Income Tax this spring I got the impression that several thousand of these folk had their eyes fixed expectantly upon me. In these days we are doing a great deal about social security, and I dare say that the unfortunate are better cared for than they have ever been before: I cannot escape the feeling, however, that we increase and encourage misfortune by subsidizing it. If I were really convinced that advanced social security measures would produce a more intelligent, tolerant, civilized people I should be more enthusiastic about them than I am. My deep suspicion, however, is that they will increase the physical well being of the people without changing them mentally at all. And mental change is far more important than drinking milk, or wearing warm clothes. The social reformers say: give them physical well being and mental development will follow. But I say: let them struggle for intellectual achievement and physical well being will follow. What the world needs now, as always, are people who will use their heads and acept responsibility; such people are always justly rewarded.

FRIDAY: A very hot day, and I turned my thoughts to summer drinks. The best summer drinks, of course, are those which we can no longer buy—I mean those which are also the best winter drinks. But there are some excellent substitutes....The base for all really good summer drinks, in my experience, is cold tea. I don't mean the dregs from the pot, but a fresh brew which is allowed to cool, and then chilled in the icebox. When your cold tea is ready, you may begin experimenting....I found that a wineglass full of grapejuice, put in a tumbler and sharpened with a squeeze of lemon juice, and then diluted with cold tea until the glass is full, makes a first rate drink. I never put sugar in summer drinks, because it makes them sweet, and spoils their value as thirst-quenchers. Grape juice and grape-fruit juice mixed, and diluted with cold tea, is very good also....And lemonade is an old favourite. Plain lemonade I do not like, but if it has a dash of orange and a sprig of mint in it, it can hardly be beaten. If you like a sharpish drink, a dash of cream of tartar in the lemonade will give it to you, and I have been told that it is healthful, particularly for people suffering from bad temper, self-righteousness, fear of the future and other ills of the spirit.

SATURDAY: This afternoon changed the location of my workroom from one part of the house to another—a job which meant shifting several hundred books. While busy on this job I was appalled, as every book reviewer must be, by the amount of worthles, illiterate, clamorous junk that I have read during the past twelve months. The war apears to have aggravated the desire to write which afflicts so many people who have nothing of importance to say, and who have no idea of how to say it. And fiction! How many books have I read, I wonder, in which two utterly uninteresting people have met and married against a background of the Old South, or wartime Britain, or revolutionary America? Whatever the scene, the heroine and the hero are always the same two whey-faced, bird-brained simpletons.

Le Regiment Qui Passe

(MONTREAL GAZETTE)

THE London Times reports that the Hampshire Regiment is to have "the privilege, honour, and distinction" of marching through the streets of Winchester, with colours flying band playing, and bayonets fixed. It will be a recognition of the gallant part played by the regiment in this war. No less will it be a reward to the people of Hampshire, who will regard this regiment as it passes with all the enthusiasm of county pride.

In an editorial, The Times goes on to remark how the old love of pageantry and procession never dies. Today, as ever before, the sight of the passing regiment, and the sound of its band, do not fail to stir and excite the heart. "For such the concentrating quality of the street is essential," this editorial reads; "it needs the town's everyday business which ceases suddenly and magically at the sight; it needs windows, to which the sightseers must rush, moved by a common impulse."

It is the emotion captured by the spirited French artist of the 1870's, Edouard Detaille. In his painting, "Le Regiment Qui Passe," the band is marching into the full centre of the canvas, through a street of intense onlookers, the drummers of the band in front with their rhythmic swagger and the little raggamuffin boys trotting beside them in ecstasy.

But true as is the stir and excitement of the regiment and its band, there is military drama of another kind, which The Times' writer does not mention, but which deserves to be remembered. It is the impressive sight of the regiment which passes without the colour and glamour of the parade. It is the sight that has been seen upon a thousand battlefronts, as some testing-time is developing, and the regiments move forward, carrying their grotesquely ponderous equipment, marching through dust and mud, in irregular lines, with no crowds watching and no bands playing.

And there have been times when a regiment has passed through the streets of its own town, in a magnificent silence. So it was when the Guards came back to London from the suffering and heroism of the Crimean War. The streets were crowded, it is true, but the crowds stood in reverence, and there was no sound but the beat of the soldiers' boots upon the pavement.

From the window of a London club this parade was watched by Goldwyn Smith, then Regius Professor of Modern History in Oxford University. He was a hard man in many ways, and one not given to easy emotions. Yet in his old age in Toronto he recalled that scene as one of the most memorable of his life. "I saw from the Athenaeum the return of the Guards from the Crimea," he wrote in his reminiscences. "They marched with great simplicity, through a crowd rather full of emotion than demonstrative, to their barracks. I have witnessed more ostentatious, but never a more impressive ovation."

All through human life run these contrary stirrings of silence and sound. Regiments have marched in silence and they have marched with their bands playing. But of those who have watched them pass, who would say which spectacle was the more impressive?

The Infantry

(NEW YORK TIMES)

THE Encyclopaedia Britannica is not certain even of the derivation of the word "infantry", but it devotes thirty-one and a half of its precious columns to an exhaustive study of the genesis of the infantry, its development and its present-day use.

In the mechanization of war and the great publicity given the more modern elements of national armies—the air corps, the tank corps, the mobile artillery—it is easy to overlook the fact that the foot soldier still comprises the larger part of the military organization on land (over 75 per cent. of America's ninety-odd organized divisions), and that it is he who finally seals the victory. A correspondent on the battlefront of France wrote just the other day that "this is still an infantryman's war".

More often than not the infantryman, like the rest of us, now rides to work. We see pictures of him in big lorries lumbering along through the dust of battle toward the front or clinging to the top of a tank as it drives ahead in search of enemy armor. His only distinction now, really, is that he still fights on foot.

Contrary to popular opinion, the infantryman, if he is to do his part properly, requires even more careful and skillful training than do the men of other military arms. The modern foot soldier, whether fighting in the jungles of New Guinea, on a coconut palm island in the Pacific, through the hedgerows of Normandy or in the hills of northern Italy and southern France, must be able to think for himself, must have a knowledge of squad and platoon and company tactics. No longer does he stand or charge in a close-packed phalanx like the Greeks, or form in a pike-bristling barrier like the renowned Swiss infantry of the fifteenth century. The infantry is a mobile, fluid fighting force that must maintain cohesion and a continuous line to carry on its own advance or contain counter-attack, but whose individual elements must be able to change tactics almost from minute to minute as the exigencies of a changing situation demand.

War is more personal to the infantryman than to any other man of war. Even the fighter pilots testify that they seldom think of the man in the other cockpit as an individual. He seems to them like a goggled automaton sitting immobile in his seat, his hands on the controls, only his head or his eyes moving, and that movement blurred by distance. The artilleryman seldom sees the enemy at whom he is firing. The infantryman, on the other hand, works at close quarters, recognizes his foe as a human being like himself whom he must outthink and outfight if he is to survive.

Infantry as such has a long and honorable history. As a military arm it has outlived many others and may well outlive the motorized elements of today. In the future it probably will do most of its travelling by air, but it still will fight on foot and answer the dictionary definition which describes it as just that.

"It might be said with perfect justice", says the Encyclopaedia Britannica, "that without infantry there would never have been discipline, for cavalry began and continued as a crowd of champions. Discipline, which created and maintained the intrinsic superiority of the Roman legion, depended first on the ideal of patriotism".

There is no more honorable shoulder patch than that of an infantry division.

A Bible Message

Brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended: but this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus.

Let us therefore, as many as be perfect, be thus minded: and if in any thing ye be otherwise minded, God shall reveal even this unto you. Nevertheless, whereto we have already attained let us walk by the same rule, let us mind the same thing. (Phil. 3: 13-16.)

For though we walk in the flesh, we do not war after the flesh; (for the weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but mighty through God to the pulling down of strong holds;) casting down imaginations, and every high thing that exalteth itself against the knowledge of God, and bringing into captivity every thought to the obedience of Christ. (II Cor. 10: 3-5.)

Letter To The Editor

VALUE OF MAGAZINES AND PERIODICALS

Sir: From the days of my earliest youth I have been fond of preserving old photographs, old books, pictures, and letters from friends and relatives. To these for some years past I have added magazines of the better order, and periodicals. People tell me that poring over such relics can only serve to make one sad, that one should go out and mingle with the gay crowd and enjoy oneself. Well, there are different methods of enjoying oneself and in the course of a full life I have not been backward in endeavouring to find where the fullest happiness may be found. I have never tried to find it in an inn as was the custom in the 18th and early half of the 19th century, nor have I discovered it, except on very rare occasions, in a club, for I do not possess the qualifications for what Dr. Johnson once termed a "clubable man."

Perhaps this is solely because I do not happen to possess the intellect and equipoise necessary to submit gracefully to the objurgations of partners who dislike the disregard of proper tenets and conventions of card games. I am talking now, of course, of memories of many years ago, and I know that I chose wisely, for I still possess my friends.

Today my pleasure chiefly lies in reading, more especially what can be found in periodicals of early or late vintage. I have found that the term 'vintage' applies very suitably to the choice of periodicals for what is true of a beverage is, I think, true of a magazine, the older it is the better it is likely to be.

This very evening, in taking up an old dilapidated number of John o'London I came upon a paragraph which interested me greatly. It was contained in a quotation from an article on a book entitled "A Window in Fleet Street" and referred to Mr. Gladstone. These were the words. "Mr. Gladstone" it said, "could often be met in the street. His presence was the most formidable I have ever seen. He was inherently gigantic, for, though, as Mr. Milne says, he was never a tall man, he yet looked it. Once, on a summer afternoon I saw him approaching me on the then otherwise deserted pavement of Portland Place I do not exaggerate when I say that I trembled at the prospect of passing him in that afternoon solitude."

At the somewhat tender age of fourteen I was at a school in England which Mr. Gladstone used often to visit, and I remember very distinctly coming upon him that afternoon on a quiet country path, apparently in a state of profound meditation. Perfectly aware of the high position he occupied as a statesman, the thought came to me how nice it would be if he would be kind enough to stop me and ask me my name. It would be such a grand thing to brag about in after days.

I was very quickly disillusioned. As I passed him and took off my cap he glared at me with such a portentious and terrifying glare that I scudded down that pathway like lightning. When I look back at those days now I realize that his mind was far, far away in the Ewigkeit and that he never even noticed my timid salutation.

Through the kindness of friends we are occasionally presented with fyles of old magazines. They are really well worth glancing through as they so often possess articles of just historical value.

This is borne in on my mind at the present time by reading the article in tonight's Examiner citing the need of a Historical Society in the city. It is a really crying need and has been oftentimes called attention to in the press for many years past. Mr. Frank Dobbin did a great work, so did the late Mr. Hay, Colonel Henry Rogers, Mr. Hampden Burnham and others. We have in the Library a five years' continuation of Mr. Dobbin's history dealing with the years 1914 to 1919, which takes in the full period of the First Great War. It is well to mention this, as, although it has been brought to the notice of the public several times, nobody seems to realize that it is a really valuable adendum to Mr. Dobbin's history. What is needed badly is the patriotic work of someone with time on his or her hands to carry on the record, for which we have ample material in the Library. Yours etc.,

FRED. M. DELAFOSSE.

Kinnettes Plan To Hold Fur Show

Conveners and committes for their Fur Fashion Show and Tea, on September 15 in the Y.W.C.A., were named by the Peterborough Kinettes at a special meeting Friday evening at the home of the president, Mrs. Maurice Holt, Water street. Mint Flavor Peps Up Food Dishes

Many a woman who longs to get something a little different to serve during summer months, and sighs for the touch of a connoisseur, often overlooks one of the finest taste-pepper-uppers, and one which grows in abundance in nine out of 10 back yards—mint. As is widely believed, mint is not grown solely for use in mint juleps (becoming increasingly scarce these days), but is ideal for pepping up sauces, beverages, jellies, vegetables and salads, cookies, and even mayonnaise.

Mayonnaise, for instance, is given a new deliciousness by the flavor of mint, but is made a little differently from the ordinary method. Heat a cupful of water to the boiling point, add half a teaspoonful of moistened cornstarch and cook until smooth and thick, then add a pinch of salt, a sprinkling of white and black pepper, a few drops of onion juice, five tablespoonsful of the best vinegar and enough mint to flavor the mayonnaise nicely, and to give a delicate green tint. Before serving it with a salad, mix in a half a cupful of whipped cream. The result is attractive—and tasty.

For the woman who doesn't want to try anything too drastic at first, here's a recipe for a mint chutney, somewhat akin to the mint sauce, which is as closely associated with roast lamb as cranberries are to turkey. The chutney, which is excellent with cold meats, is made with a handful of finely chopped mint, a cupful of seeded raisins (if you can get them), two tablespoons of white sugar, two tablespoons of tomato ketchup, and a little salt. Mix the ingredients together until they become juicy, and serve.

Mint Cookies

An old English custom, which is still a vogue in the southern parts of the United States, is serving mint cookies with afternoon tea. The cookies, really just wafers, would be ideal to serve with a cold drink; for instance, on a warm afternoon, and their cool, appetising flavor would be a sure hit. Mix six cups of flour, three cups of sugar, one cup of milk, and one cup of butter (substitute shortening), in the order indicated, adding a level tablespoon of baking powder to the flour. To this mixture, add a tablespoonful of chopped mint. Roll the dough out thin, cut into squares, or use pattern pastry cutters, and bake the cookies until they are brown. They keep as nicely as other cookies, and are good for picnics, too.

Speaking of picnics, how about trying this mint ale as a beverage for the next family jaunt into the country, or up the River Road for supper? Add half a dozen sprigs of bruised mint to the juice of five lemons, and let stand for three hours. Remove the mint, and add one half cup of sugar, or more, to taste. When sugar has dissolved, add the juice to chilled ginger ale, again to taste, and see how quickly it disappears.

Southern cooks, famous or appetising dishes, use mint a great deal, using it to flavor vegetables and salads, and even putting a sprig or two in the water when boiling fresh peas, or adding a little chopped mint to cooked sliced carrots when serving them with cream sauce.

THE STARS SAY . . . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

Sunday's horoscope is not read as a happy or lucrative one in any respect. There is a sign of sudden and disruptive influences, shaking the foundations of all normal expectations. It is probably that this untoward condition may be attributable to the sudden letting down of the sentimental or emotional guards, precipitating devastating experiences and adventures.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for sudden and devastating stiuations, born probably, of the letting go or emotional and nervous restraint which affect the health physically and the prudent mental outlook, unless proper restraits are imposed, with rational and composed behavior there may be surprising results. It is probable the domestic or affectional relations may suffer.

A child born on this day should have definite training and discipline of its impulses and emotions, lest it suffer in nervous and mental integrity.

For Monday, August 21

Monday's astrological forecast is stances in all business and personal relations and activities. An undertone of subtlety, intrigue, duplicity and betrayal warns of intrigue and pernicious association which may cause grief, regret and sorrow, as well as dangerous health reactions.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may be called upon to face treacherous and perplexing or obscure circumstances to alliances, which may cause intrigue and grave consequences unless cautiously managed. A definite change, travel or break may be the safest way out. In this the advice of elders or superiors may be helpful and assist in preserving health of mind, body and spirit, subltly undermined.

YOUTH TOO GLORIFIED

Youngsters Seek To Compress Pleasures Within Just a Few, Short Years

The juvenile delinquency, most appalling problem in the world today, is largely to our glorification of youth has been the theme song which we have played as upon a harp with a thousand strings.

The result of this has been two-fold. First, to implant in the minds of even babes in the cradle the idea that youth is a divine prerogative they possess that puts them above the law and that it entitles them to have the best of everything and do whatever they please. And, worse still, it sells them the belief that youth is the only part of life worth having; that all beyond that is cinders, ashes and dust and so they must compress within a few short years all the pleasure that they ever will have.

Recklessness Explained

That explains the recklessness of boys and girls, their excesses, their refusal to count the cost of their acts. Their slogan is: Eat, drink and be merry, for tomorrow we will be old. They literally cannot picture a future beyond the jive age that is not a martyrdom of boredom, and so they are in hurry in a hurry to grab at life before it turns to dead sea fruit on their lips.

It is this fear of the future that is at the bottom of most of the hurry-up war marriages that are bound to wreck so many lives. Girls rush to the altar with men whom they scarcely know by sight because they are afraid there will not be enough husbands to go around after the war and they may not get one. Boys marry strange girls for whom they have not real desire because they believe love and romance belong exclusively to youth and if they miss them now they will never have them. And you may talk your tongue off to them without convincing them that the grand passion is an emotional experience that belongs to maturity not to adolescence.

Wants A Good Time

And who can doubt that it is this belief that they must have their fun while they are young that fills our jails with criminals who are still in their teens, and that bows so many parents' heads with shame? I get hundreds of letters from boys who write that they are not going to slave and save as their fathers have done. They are gong to have a good time while they are young and still can enjoy things.

But good times cost money and their pockets are empty. So they steal automobiles in which to take their girls joy-riding. They become housebreakers and thugs and often murderers to buys fine clothes and go to swell restaurants.

And their sisters, who also believe that they must capitalize their charm and good looks and get the most out of them, while they are young, snap their fingers in Mrs. Grundy's face and boast that they do not care what the old frumps say about them until they find that the doors they would like to enters are shut in their faces.

It is a cruel mistake to teach the young that youth is the happiest time of life. It is only when we have grown old and philosophical and learned to take things that we know real happiness.

Marion Carroll Weds W. J. Yokom

A wedding of wide interest took place recently, when Marian Carroll, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Carroll, 658 Aylmer street, was united in marriage to W. J. Yokom, of Kingston, by Rev. T. J. Finn, rector of St. Peter's Cathedral.

For the ceremony, the bride chose a beautiful two-piece Happy blue ensemble, with matching accessories, and a corsage of Talisman roses. Miss Loretta Carroll was her sister's bridesmaid, in a Patio lilac frock, with a corsage of Johanna Hill roses. Charles H. Thornbeck was best man.

About 40 guests were entertained at the reception, held following the ceremony, at the Kawartha Golf and Country Club, where the bride's mother received the guests in a gown of fuschia crepe, all black accessories, and a corsage of peach-colored gladioli. Later, the couple left by train for a wedding trip to St. Catharines, Detroit and Chicago.

Well Chosen Furniture Important in the Home

DEAR HOMEMAKER—

Even if it's only one or two rooms, they can be made more liveable by the addition of a well-chosen selection of furniture and some good advice about drapes and hangings.

No matter how small your room or rooms you will want a favorite chair and a small table that can be placed nearby. These are the cosy things that you can keep close to you no matter where you have to move or how they may have to temporize with their ideal home setting.

War work demands that many of you may have to crowd yourselves, but that does not mean that you must do without all the comforts of your former home. Let us advise you on what to buy that will brighten up your rented room or apartment. We are aware of your problem. That is our business to make sure you get the most for your money.

Beside that chair and table you should have a good lamp to read by. Good lighting is so elemental nowadays and lamps are so reasonable that you do not have to overlook proper illumination. Your apartment is going to be your home for the duration and you can make it pleasant or let it get you down with its confined space and lack of arrangement room. Sometimes only one piece of furniture is necessary to make over an entire room. Why not try it?

Don't overlook the floors. Often the basic atmosphere of a room can be entirely changed by the proper choosing of a floor covering. Let us suggest the right colors for linoleums and rugs for your rooms and too don't overlook the usefulness of small mats and rugs.

Perhaps one of the most troublesome of your problems in small rooms is table and book accommodations. This is where we can really be of help to you. You should see the handy adjustable tables for any size room which can be changed quickly into dining-board for six or eight if necessary. Also the many styles of book-racks, book-cases, and end tables.

Before resigning yourself to any set arrangement of rented quarters we will be very pleased to offer our advice on how you may brighten up your home.

Plazas Capture Title Of City League

The Plazas captured the Men's City League title on Friday evening at Riverside Park when they defeated Switchgear 6 to 3 in the fifth game of the series. Switchgear won the first game on Monday evening and then the Plazas made it four in a row to take the title.

The game was the poorest one of the five with very little pep shown by either team. While the score showed 6 to 3 the Switchgear were more outlucked than outplayed, as breaks, with horse shoes all around them, came a couple of times for the champions.

Plazas were short Blewett and Switchgear Mowry, both players being hurt on Thursday night. Plazas started strong scoring their first run in the first nnings, they came back with two more in the fourth and three in the seventh. Switchgear got their three runs in the second but they threatened in the seventh. Heal on second for the Plazas was the busy man of the evening taking six putouts. Stokoe pitched for the winners and kept Switchgear popping up flies all evening with the result that only three assists were credited to the Plaza players.

Harrison went along nicely to the seventh innings but with a walk, a sacrifice, two hits and two errors the Plazas were allowed to put the game in the bag.

How Game Went

Heal, lead off man for the Plazas, was safe in the first when, after laying down a bunt, Holmes dropped the ball at first, Burton singled, Conroy sacrificed, Starr doubled into right to score Heal, Tucker grounded to McCormick who threw to McNabb to catch Burton trying to score, and Hawkes lifted one to first. In the second Pryde was safe on a hit past third, but the next three batters all went out on infield flies. They went out in a row in the third but in the fourth Tucker singled over second, Hawkes lifted one to centre fielder, Pryde walked, Ellis singled to centre to score Tucker and Stokoe lifted one just over second to score Pryde. Heal and Burton lifted flies to Playford, who made all three put outs in the innings.

After two were out in the fifth, Tucker walked and Hawkes singled into centre, but Pryde was out on a fly to Carpenter. In the sixth the Plazas went out in order.

Big Rally in Seventh

Burton walked in the seventh, Conroy sacrificed, Starr singled, Tucker was safe on an error at short and Burton scored, Hawkes was safe on another bingo at short and Starr scored, Pryde singled into centre field scoring Tucker, but Hawkes was caught on Playford's throw to third, and Ellis closed the innings with a fly to first.

Only three men were up in the eighth, Stokoe who led off with a single, being called out at third when the coach interfered. In the ninth Conroy singled, Starr sacrificed, Hawkes lifted one to short and Pryde grounded to third forcing Conroy.

Tompkins' double was the only hit for the Switchgear in the first and the only man to get on. In the second Brockley hit past Ellis, McNabb sacrificed, Carpenter walked, McCormick singled to centre scoring Brockley, Heal speared Harrison's drive, Holmes singled just over second scoring Carpenter and Pagett doubled to score McCormick. Heal cut down a drive of Tompkins to end the innings. McNabb's double in the third was the only hit for Switchgear and in the fourth they went out in order. The fifth saw Pagett walk on four straight balls but the next three men failed to reach first. Only three faced Stokoe in the sixth, and in the seventh Holmes and Pagett singled, Tompkins lifted one to Heal, Playford hit to third to force Holmes, Brockley singled and McNabb hit one to Conroy who appeared to miss the ball, giving Switchgear a breather, but when he came up he had it in his hand. In the eighth Carpenter walked, McCormick hit to third with Carpenter failing to make second, Harrison was safe on Stokoe's error but McCormick was caught off second and Holmes lifted one to third. In the ninth Switchgear went out on flies to the three fielders.

Plazas will now meet Trenton in the best two out of three games, the first being played here on Wednesday evening.

NEW YORK, August 19 —(AP) — If Tom Brown, the 16-year-old shortstop from Brooklyn's Prospect Park Diamonds, fulfills Leo Durocher's optimistic predictions, Jake Pitler deserves an assist ...... It was Jake's encouragement that made Tom the "boy sensation" of the Piedmont League when the fans were about to ride him out of the circuit because of his early-season jitters .... Tom ollected a war bond and $114 in cash when he left Newport News, which recalls that when Calvin Coolidge left the Dodgers for the navy, his teammates collected a $100 purse for him .... Almost overcome by emotion, Cal stammered: "Gosh, fellows, I'd like to take you all down to the corner store and have sodas on me." .... Wonder how Bugs Raymond or Rube Waddell would have reacted to an invitation like that?

Player Traffic Dubbed 'A Joke'

PORT ARTHUR, Aug. 19—(CP)—Ap Emms, former National Hockey League player and coach-manager of St. Louis Flyers of the American Association, in an interview yesterday said traffic in players during the season between N. H. L. and American Hockey League clubs is "a joke."

"I think it terrible that any one club should be allowed to sign 90-odd players when they can only use 15 in any one game," he said. The Flyers are scheduled to start training here early in October.

"It's a joke the way players traffic between the two leagues. No wonder they call the American League the elevator league."

Hal Newhouser First Player To Win 20 Games

By JACK HAND
Associated Press Sport Writer

Detroit's Hal Newhouser is the first paid-up member of the exclusive 20-win club of 1944, with excellent prospects of hitting the 25 mark before the curtain drops in six weeks.

The all southpaw tamed Boston 3-0 in the first game of yesterday's double-header.

Newhouser hitherto never won more than nine in the same season in his baseball career.

The Tigers regained undisputed possession of third place on Newhouser's victory, although they bowed to the Red Sox 7-4 in the second game.

St. Louis lost a half game by bowing to Philadelphia 5-4 in a night game but still boasted a 6½ length margin over the Red Sox. The A's slammed Tex Shirley and two successors for 11 hits, scoring all their runs in the fifth.

Mel Harder shut out the New York Yankees for Cleveland 2-0 with Roy Cullenbine scoring both runs, the second being his 13th homer.

Chicago made it three straight over Washington, 2-1

Pittsburg's 11-game win streak was snapped 3-2 by the Phils' Ken Raffensberger, who defeated Ripsewell and dropped the Pirates into a second place tie with Cincinnati.

Art Herring's major league someback got off to a bad start with the Brooklyn pitcher losing both games to Cincinnati, the first as a starter, 1-0 and the nightcap in relief, 7-6, when the Reds spurted for four runs in the ninth.

St. Louis stretched the New York Giants' losing streak to 11 by notching their seventh straight victory, 5-2, behind Harry Brecheen. Chicago combined Claude Passeau's steady pitching with a 13-hit attack to humble Boston, 5-3.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

TORONTO, August 19—(CP). — Lacrosse, the much-neglected "national" summer sport of Canada, always creates considerable discussion among boxla fans who wonder what is the matter with the game and what is to be done with it. The idea being, of course, to pour a little blood plasma into the game's sluggish veins and bring it back to popular appeal.

In this respect, Ken Johnson of the Owen Sound Sun-Times suggests it wouldn't be a bad idea to sell the game to our cousins south of the border. Being a rough and tough pastime, lacrosse should suit the "extrovert Americans" down to the bottom floor, opines Pen. He hazards the guess that if lacrosse does spread through those United States it will be a big success, drawing crowds as large as hockey does. That latter Canadian sport didn't appeal so much to the Americans at first either, but look at it now.

Some high-pressure salesmanship and showmanship wouldn't hurt the boxla boys in Canada either.

Whistle Department:

Getting a wee bit tired of crouching behind a plate calling balls and strikes is Roy Van Graflan, veteran International League umpire from Rochester. It's reported he is thinking of leaving the game and hieing away to greener pastures of the American Girls' Softball League as a coach. At that, the scenery would be much better.

Timmis in demand:

If that oft-repeated, oft-denied report that Brian Timmis will be hoisted as coach of Hamilton Wildcats, he won't have to worry about a new job. Probably any football squad around the country would be willing to take a chance on the mastermind who took the Cats to the Dominion title last fall. There is talk around Kitchener-Waterloo of getting the district back into football again after two years, and some would like to see Timmis taken on. Brian handled the coaching duty for a Kitchener-Waterloo intermediate team several years ago, and is well liked.

He woke up screaming:

Ted Reeve, former Toronto Balmy Beach middle wing and coach of several champion Queen's University squads, still has football in his blood. Ted, who later became one of the country's top sport columnists with the Toronto Telegram, is in France now with Maj. Conn Smythe's Sportsman's Battery. He tells of an unnerving experience while driving over the rough French roads in the back of a jam-packed 60-hundredweight truck. He woke from a fitful snooze when a heavy leather portmanteau fell across his legs and a rugby ball bounced from its box and landed on his chest. Ted hugged the ball and woke up yelling: "No yards. No yards."

Byron Nelson In Semi-Finals

SPOKANE, Wash., Aug. 19. — (AP).—Tournament favorite Byron Nelson of Toledo, O., moved into the semi-finals of the 1944 United States Professional Golfers' Association championship with a 4-and-3 victory over Willie Goggin, White Plains, N.Y., in the 36-hole quarter-finals yesterday.

It was a runaway for Nelson, bidding for his second P.G.A. crown, and he breezed through 33 holes in seven-under-par figures for the Manito Course. He cracked out a 66 against the par 72 layout to lead Goggin four up at the 18th, and he held the same margin at the 27th, touring the third nine in 36.

Goggin held a 71 for the morning round; equalled his rival's 36 on the third nine and matched him stroke-for-stroke for halves on the last six holes, when Nelson coasted out for the decision.

The tournament's "giant killer," Charles Congdon, Tacoma, Wash., continued to hand out surprises by defeating Veteran Campaigner, Ed. Dudley, Colorado Springs, 6 and 5. As a result the Tacoman will compare shots to-day with Nelson

Congdon, who eliminated Sam Byrd, Detroit, 2 and 1, in a second-round upset, clicked with a 71 to Dudley's 73 to lead the latter two up at the 18th.

The day's stunning upset saw Harold McSpaden, Philadelphian top money winner of the year, put out of the running. Bob Hamilton of Evansville, Ind., turned the trick. The score was 2 and 1.

Hamilton's playing in his first P.G.A. championship, went into the lead on the third nine and kept it. He was up at the 27th, shooting a 34 to McSpaden's 36. He had his rival dormie three but lost the 197-yard 16th when his tee shot went to the right of the green, in the trees, and his pitch overran the cup by 25 feet. McSpaden, meanin 71's.
while, was on the green with his drive and down in two putts. They finished the morning round even,

Buffalo Bisons Move Into Race For International League Pennant

By The Associated Press

Baltimore and Newark, who have been having a private tussle for the International League flag for the past two weeks, are finding there's is a crowd, as the Buffalo Bisons have leaped into pennant chase.

A double triumph over the Bears 12-2 and 8-2 last night moved the Bisons only three games behind the second-place Bears and four behind the league-leading Orioles, who dropped a pair of contests to the up-and-coming Toronto Maple Leafs, 4-1 and 2-1.

Yesterday the Bisons rang up 22 hits, five of them homers. Two were by Mayo Smith and one each by Andy Seminick, Al Unser and pitcher Hank Oana.

Burleigh Grimes' Maple Leafs moved into the first Division for the first time since June 3 as a result of their double win over the Birds. In annexing both ends of the third straight twinbill, their sixth and seventh victories in succession, the Leafs tied the Jersey City Giants for fourth place. After Luther Kneer won his 11th in the opener, Alex Mustaikis notched his 14th in the nightcap. Although Red Embree, Orioles' strike-out artist, held Toronto to one hit—by Chet Morgan in the first inning—a steal of home by Johnny Zontini in the sixth proved to be the winning run. Embree fanned 11 Leafs to bring his season's record to 171 strikeouts in 171 innings.

Jersey City and Montreal divided a doubleneader, the Royals winning the first, 3-1, behind Johnny Gabbard's six-hit pitching, and the Giants asking the second 4-3 as Frank Rosso won his seventh game. Dannny Gardella's double scoring two mates in the ninth proved to be the winning blow for the Giants.

Rochester and Syracuse split their twinbill, the Red Wings copping the opener, 6-3, for Bill Trotter's 12th triumph, and the Chefs grabbing the aftermath, 5-3.

Labor Shortage Acute At Lakehead

FORT WILLIAM, Aug. 19 —(CP) —Efforts were being made Friday to meet the "acute" labor shortage at the Lakehead, required to unload more than 10,000,000 bushels of wheat on railway tracks here and remove a bottleneck in movement of Western grain to world markets.

A. A. Heaps, special controller appointed by the Federal Government to remove the bottleneck, said a major increase in shipments through the Lakehead is essential to meet needs of the Allied Nations now engaged in the liberation of Europe.

"The Allied requirements of grain two months ago meant the unloading here of 1,200 cars of grain a day and the loading of a similar amount on the boats," said Mr. Heaps, former Labor Member of Parliament for Winnipeg.

"We never reached that total except on one or two days. The average unloading was about 1,100 a day in June and July, a very good performance, but in July, after the invasion of Europe, the demand for Canadian grain by Great Britain and other Allies increased to the point where an average unloading of 1,866, cars a day is required from August 1 to the close of navigation in the first week of December.

"Unloading thus far in August have been disappointing— about 950 cars a day, due to a number of causes. This means we are about 400 cars a day below the requirements and the losses sustained thus far in August must be made good between now and the close of navigation."

The labor situation was "acute," he said. Every effort must be made by National Selective Service to supply labor for the grain movement, 'but we will have to depend to a large extent on meeting the problem with the labor at the head of the lakes."

Mr. Heaps, given wide powers to transfer labor from other industries, has opened conferences with both compaines and workers' representatives and further meetings will be held. These discussions are designed to secure all possible advice on easing the situation.

N.B. Forest Fires Almost Checked

FREDERICTON, Aug. 19—(CP) —Although still dangerous, the forest fire situation in New Brunswick was generally improved to-day after rain fell for more than an hour in York county and parts of Sunbury during a heavy electrical storm.

Crews in the hard stricken Minto district had a respite when flames made only slight advance. Nearly 75 families have been burned out of their homes in that area. The situation in a triangular area between Moncton, Boundary Creek and Berry Mills, where 16 families have lost houses or barns or both. was saiad to be well in hand.

A fire in the vicinity of Harcourt, Kent county, was believed to be the largest in the province. Three hundred soldiers were sent into this fire zone, measuring about 15 by 20 miles, to-day.

Main Street Topics

TALK ON HIGHWAY.

Lance Rumble of Toronto, who will be the guest speaker of the Rotary Club, Monday, has chosen for his topic, "The Alaska Highway."

MANY MEMBERS.

The Canadian Legion, Peterborough 52, announced to-day that 150 veterans of this war have joined the Canadian Legion since 1939, to make the grand total of 600 members at the present.

PICTURES TONIGHT

The public is reminded of the program of sound pictures at Inverlea Park tonight. This is an evening feature winding up the afternoon's regatta. The pictures are of the same quality of the two programs shown this week at Riverside Park. The Thursday night crowd for the films and the concert by the Salvation Army Band was highly appreciated of this outdoor entertainment, and was so large that some further programs will likely be provided before the season ends.

THREE DAUGHTERS

Mrs. Lucy Tate, 42 Ware street, who died Friday, is survived by three daughters, Mrs. William Doughty and Mrs. T. Hall of Peterborough; and Mrs. Kenneth Lang, Oshawa. There is one son, Edward also surviving.

TO AVOID LINE-UPS

With the deadline for final payments of 1943 income taxes approaching—August 31 is the date—the Post Office has advised the citizens who have not yet sent in their last installment and who plan to make payment in money order form to attend to this matter as soon as possible. By doing so they will avoid the inevitable line-up of the last two days of the month.

A P.C.V.S. TOUCH

Although the Aircraft team bowed in defeat to Westclox at the Ashburnham Bowl Friday evening, it certainly wasn't the fault of a group of ardent fans, former P.C.I. students, who considerably livened up the proceedings with rousing cheers or their team. Many an old student was filled with nostalgia as the familiar Acka-lacka-chin, with Aircraft on the receiving end, instead of P. C. I., was shouted with a will.

ATTEND DECORATION DAY

More than 100 Peterborough men and women are expected to attend the Decoration Day services to be held in Lindsay, Sunday. Those attending will include members of the Canadian Legion Peterborough 52, the Peterborough Women's Service Corps Band, and the Legion Auxiliary. They will leave Peterborough at 11.30, and in Lindsay, will march to the Cenotaph.

GROWS WHITE TOMATOES.

Something very unusual in the line of garden produce has been grown by J. C. Armstron, 719 Romaine street. It is a white tomato of unusual size. Two specimens, one weighing 1½ lbs. and the other 1¼ lbs., have been placed on display in the Examiner window.

ASSEMBLY HOUR FOR VETERANS

Members of Canadian Legion Branch 52 who are going to Lindsay Sunday have been requested by Legion President George Gimblett to assemble at the Legion Hall at 11 a.m.

WON SPRINT FEATURE.

Peterborough's representative in the Navy sports days at Halifax last Sunday, First Stoker Robert E. Crowe, won the 100 yards dash in 10 3-5 seconds. Winner of the sprint feature in the "H.M.C.S. Cornwallis" track and field events preceding the area meet at Halifax, Stoker Crowe qualified with a mark of 10 4-5 seconds. The race Sunday afternoon was in two heats. Crowe took the second in 10 4-5 seconds, and went for the final which ran in one-5fiith of second faster time.

PILOT OFFICER OVERSEAS

Pilot Officer Stanley McCurrach, son of Mrs. George McCurrach, 28 Barnardo avenue, is serving overseas as a bombardier with the R.C. A.F Prior to his enlistment in May, 1943, PO. McCurrach was employed as a draftsman at the C.G.E.

GRASS FIRE.

A grass fire in a vacant lot at 187 Auburn street by the river called out the Fire Department Friday afternoon at 1.28 p.m. It is the property of T. Vinette. No damage resulted.

London Street Girl Commended Earns $11 For War Victims Fund

There is an apt expression that "nothing succeeds like success," signifying that one success will carry a person on to greater or more successful ventures, which perhaps fits the example of a young Miss on London street, who earlier in the summer held an event on behalf of the sufferers from robot attacks on the civilian life of Britain through the local and district fund operating for that purpose.

It was on July 21st just past that this column on behalf of the fund reported an effort by Geraldine Perks of 221 London street, who had a stall on the family verandah to raise the sum of $8.64, and the satisfaction and experience gained from this act to help others in distress, acted as a spur and inspiration to a further effort, which is even more successful than the former for the same purpose.

It takes a lot of work to sell tickets at 5 cents each to make up $11.00 and that is just what this 2nd effort represents, for having had two linen handkerchiefs donated by Mrs. F. D. Craig, with a third one added by a neighbor in close proximity to the family home, she set about the task of selling tickets at the amount formerly named and to-day the proceeds are credited in her name.

Interrupted by a holiday which took her on the train to Kitchener, she even sold 16 tickets while en route to that place and even carried this further by securing a personal donation of $1.00 from Mrs. M. Tracey after reaching her destination, which is also listed in to-day's receipts.

The draw was made by Geraldine heself under the supervision of the secretary of the fund, and this resulted in ticket No. 59 being drawn, which gave the prize to Mrs. C. Hewitt, of 213 London street, winding up this latest effort, which now gives her a total credit of over $20.00 raised during this one summer vacation from school duties.

Three other young children are also included in to-day's list, Ruth Sine, Sheila Maciver, and Sylvia McGregor, all pupils at Queen Elizabeth school, having held a sale of vegetables and other things at the corner of Aberdeen and Benson avenue on Wednesday, gave $3.00 of the proceeds to this fund, the balance going to another similar worthy war assist.

Personals Next Wednesday.

It was on July 10 that the fund management made a special appeal for gifts of a personal nature to assist the increased need now being occasioned by robot bomb attacks, at which time a list of personal gifts appeared headed by his worship, the Mayor.

Since that time, seven other similar lists have appeared in this column, and another is now in the course of being received, which will appear in this column on Wednesday next. Already there are a number of these on hand, and all of a similar nature that are received up the close of the Examiner office on Tuesday evening, will also be included at that time.

Father's Grave Sought By Son In France

"I would like to get up around Lille and see if I can find Dad's grave," writes Jim Rothwell of Norwood, to his brother Gordon in a letter published in the Register this week.

Both boys grew up under the sports wing of Alex Kempt. Jim Rothwell is with a Canadian battery in France. In his letter he was commenting that he had seen much of the world since leaving Norwood, "but there's no place like home."

Incidentally he has been collecting a few souvenirs, made in Germany—camera, binoculars, telescopic sight camera and .32 calibre automatic. "I haven't run across a Luger (automatic pistol) yet, as I haven't quite got to them quick enough. One of my boys got one here awhile ago....So they were talking of taking the old hunting grounds over for a game reserve. I sure hope they don't, as one of my ambitions is to spend a few days back there....The news has been sounding pretty good lately. I hope it turns out like they think, as thing of being over in three months sounds mighty good to me ....I know one thing, and that is that if the people of Canada don't fight for their independence after this war they're crazy."

Feels Ottawa Will Support City Hall Plan

If the city council wishes to build its new city hall at Aylmer and Charlotte streets, in planned conjunction with the federal building for which adjoining property has already been purchased, Gordon K. Fraser, M.P., said to the Examiner this morning that he was confident the city would receive the fullest cooperation from Ottawa.

Walter R. L. Blackwell, architect, suggested at a recent meeting of the council, which was called for the purpose of trying to advance the city hall project, that if the citizenes and the council decided to erect the municipal building at Charlotte and Aylmer streets the Federal Department of Public Works would probably be agreeable to conform their customs-postal building to a ground scheme that would provide for a spacious court along Charlotte street between the two buildings.

Some members of the council conjured the possibility of a change of federal mind about the Charlotte street site, purchase of other property and eventual erection of the building there.

"So far as I am concerned I believe in carrying out the wishes of the people," Mr. Fraser said. "If they decide they would like to enter into such a scheme as was proposed at the council meeting I feel certain that the Department of Public Works would be greatly disposed to consider it. It seems to me to be entirely a matter for the council and the department to discuss."

Make Use Of Creek

Mr. Fraser added the further suggestion that the council should consider some means of putting the creek to decorative use in its course between Charlotte and King streets.

"Just expressing an opinion," Mr. Fraser said, "I have often thought that the city is inclined to look on that stream just as "the creek" and let it go at that, instead of trying to exploit it. Many a community would be glad to have that little water way in their centre. In fact in some place I have visited I have been impressed with the fine improvement that can be effected when you set out to make the most of a stream like our "creek."

Mr. Fraser remarked that if changes and improvements are about to be made at Charlotte and Aylmer streets it might be decidedly worth while to consider in that planning some way of making the most use of the flowing water as part of the embellishment of that locality, especially if it is to become the location of the federal-municipal buildings.

14-Year-Old Rider Knocked Off Wheel

While riding his bicycle north along Park street, just south of Park Hill road, 14-year-old Roy Maloney, 645 Park street, was knocked from his bicycle by a car driven by Donald Wilson, R.R. 3, Peterborough, and after being treated at Nicholls Hospital for minor cuts and a bruised nose, was allowed to go home, police reported today.

Acting Detective Jack Stevenson and Police Constable G. Trennum investigated the accident, and tested the brakes on Wilson's car, which they reported to be "in poor shape." Police said the right front fender of the car struck the cyclist. No charge has been laid as yet against Wilson.

People Vague About War Ending Guam, Caen Just Names To Ladies

When is the war going to end? In a survey made of the average man in the street in Peterborough, almost two-thirds of the people questioned had no idea when it would end. Asked to make an approximation, indications pointed out a vast majority of women neither follow the war news, nor hold the faintest inkling of where important place-names are located on the map.

Men, it was found, know most, and talk most about the war, and to back this up, many seem to have a comprehensive picture of the war theatres in their minds. But women, on the contrary; many expressed bewilderment at the mention of such famed places as Caen, Cherbourg, Warsaw, and Guam. The Riviera to many was just a place where wealthy people used to winter before the war; Pisa, of course was in Italy and had a leaning tower; Guam, some guessed, was a town in Normandy....or Burma, and the closest a group of women interviewed could come to putting Guam on the map, was "an island near Australia!"

On the other hand, women appear to have stored up a much vaster knowledge of the hardships of war, and are prepared to talk of suffering by little children, the food situation in Europe, and the rough-and-tough manner of our armies in the field. Men seem to ignore the more personal aspects of the war, and delight in talking loudly about summer offensives, secret weapons, and surprise attacks.

Opinions Vary

But to get back to the original question, "when is the war going to end." One man said he was next to positive it would end in 1946, and just for good measure, tacked on another two years to look after the Japs. He supported his opinion by stating he was of the thought the Germans had fortified both the old Maginot Line and the German Siegfried Line. "The Nazis will fight on until they have slowly been driven back to the German border. That's where the trouble will start. As I see it, the Germans will never allow fighting on their soil, and so the battle on the border will be the fiercest ever seen."

From one extreme to the other, the next interviewed person stated quickly October of this year was the latest possible time for the war to continue. He didn't know why, but October it was!

"I don't follow the war news at all," retorted one woman. "With all the trouble in the world, my theory is that to leave the news alone is the best plan," she argued.

Asked when she figured the war was going to end, the woman answered, "Oh, I don't know, you see I don't follow the war news!"

Vagueness Amazing

Although several cases of people not listening or reading any war news was uncovered, more were found who read all the papers, and yet still had no idea about where the fighting was taking place.

A great variety of answers met the original question. Some said 1949, some said October, some answered it might be over now and nobody know about it, such as the last war, and some just said "soon, I hope."

Liquor Cases Take Spotlight At Court

Business was skimpy in the local police court this morning with several liquor cases taking the majority spot.

George Sharpe, 31, of Toronto, was remanded until Monday by request of V. J. McElderry, Crown Attorney, on a charge of supplying drugs or an instrument to procure an illegal operation, in Norwood, during June, and the first 10 days of July.

Moses Amyott was fined $10 and $2.50 costs on pleading guilty to a charge of being intoxicated in a public place. A similar charge against George Alex, who, Magistrate O. A. Langley said, had been convicted of the same offence during the previous month, resulted in a $50 fine and $2.50 costs, or one month imprisonment.

Drowns At Cornwall

CORNWALL, August 19 — (CP). —Believed to have suffered a weak spell while walking along the edge of Cornwall Canal, Daniel Hugh McDonald, 73-year-old resident of St. Paul's Home, fell into the water yesterday and drowned.

Long Drought Worries Farmers

The need of rain has become so acute in Peterborough county that farmers on the market this morning were frankly worried about the final stage of the season's crop.

Turnips, corn and late potatoes are being seriously crimped by the continued drought. Cucumber patches have dried up to such an extent that some of the market gardeners already know that their supply is going to be only a fraction of their expectations.

Plowing has been suspended, and the late August work and prospects are giving farmers of this area a great deal of concern.

"Three weeks ago everything looked promising," George Mullen of Smith remarked to the Examiner today. "Fields that were plowed are now as dry as ashes and other ground has been baked so hard that you can't start plowing. If we just had some of that rain they got along the lakeshore back from Cobourg and Port Hope."

That Wednesday rainfall drenched the farms in Hope and Hamilton townships and trucks were mired in some fields.

Delbert Olan from the Millbrook area said that the late potato crop was being hard hit. "The early potatoes are all right and a good yield, but the late crop badly needs rain. And it may come too late to be of much use."

Crowd Collapses Platform Seek Autographs

A reenactment of the scene from "Yankee Doodle Dandy" in which George M. Cohan visits President Roosevelt at the White House was played by Capt. Jack Young, well-known Hollywood impersonator of Mr. Roosevelt in the movies, assisted by Dr. Cliff McKee, Peterborough Kiwanian, at the opening of the Kiwanis Karnival at Riverside Park, Friday night.

There was a great crowd on hand both for the skit and for the booth activities and a cool, clear night helped to make the evening's fun enjoyable to all. A draw was held for the C. C. M. bicycle, first of two major prizes being offered by the Kiwanis Club, and this was won by H. McKnight, Royal York Hotel, Toronto.

The guest of honour of the evening was introduced to the large audience by Mayor Hamilton, who gave a short review of his career and officially welcomed him to the city. Mayor Hamilton said that Capt. Young was Canadian-born, and in this connection remarked on the coincidence of Canadian actors having frequently imepersonated famous American personalities in the movies.

The dramatization itself lasted about 15 minutes and the famous radio voice that many millions throughout the whole world are familiar with was imitated to perfection by Capt. Young. In the scene President Roosevelt is portrayed as receiving the gallant old trouper, George M. Cohan, privately at the White House and spending nearly two hours asking him questions about his life; and in the end he confers upon him the Congressional Medal of Honor, The United States' highest award, for the patriotic inspiration he had given the American public through his songs and his work on the stage. Dr. McKeen ably assisted Capt. Young, playing the part of Mr. Cohan.

Capt. Young was roundly applauded at the conclusion of the skit and in token of his generosity in coming to the Karnival he was presented with a new fishing rod, reel and line complete by Charles Saunders Kiwanis president. Mr. Saunders also revealed that the actor had also been made an honorary life memeber in the Peterborough Kiwanis.

Such a flock of young autograph seekers as cannot have often before crowded round a visitor to the city swarmed around Capt. Young at the conclusion of the performance. He sat at a desk on the built up stage and a constable attempted to direct the traffic of youngsters who milled forward determined to possess the signature of a movie star. The surge of weight on the stage finally became too ponderous for the framework, and the stage suddenly collapsed in the middle upsetting Capt. Young and piling several kiddies in a heap together. Fortunately no one was even slightly injured, but thereafter Capt. Young sat at the edge of the stage and only one child at a time was allowed on the stand.

$539,976 Paid In 1944 Taxes

Two-thirds of the way through their tax year, the people of Peterborough have paid 68 per cent of their taxes, slightly in excess of the percentage due, and exactly the same as in August last year.

The amount collected in the two instalments up to Friday, August 18 was more than half a million dollars. The comparative statement follows:—

1944— Total of municipal taxes on the roll and to be collected: $794,-044.93; amount already paid at the city hall $539,973.68 or 68 per cent.

1943— Total of the taxes collectable for the year $787,953,14; amount collected at August 18 last year $535,601.84 or 68 pr cent.

'Ike' Cleary Back In Canada After Invasion

After some busy weeks escorting ships which were carrying reinforcements and supplies to the Allied invasion forces in France, Leading Seaman "Ike" Cleary, the only Peterborough boy on H.M.C.S. Woodstock has returned to Canada. Following a short course he hopes to visit his parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Cleary, 529 Rogers street.

The Corvette Woodstock, which docked recently at an East Canadian port, is the first Canadian Navy ship to come back to Canada after the invasion and her crew describe their role in the big scale offensive as being very tame.

Although bound by censorship rules, L/S Cleary gives an interesting description of his ship's activities. They first started out on a Sunday morning and after they got a short way out they were recalled, but the next morning it was the real thing.

"The captain cleared the lower decks and told us where we were going. We were in two watches, 4 hours on and 4 hours off. In our four off we had to sleep on the upper deck near our action stations. They gave us sandwiches for breakfast but when dinnertime came, they allowed us to go to mess.

"We took the first convoy in and arrived early in the morning. The men kept listening for the broadcast announcement of the invasion, but we missed it. Our ship stayed near the American beach all day watching things. Ships were firing inland and we saw prisoners on their way to England. They didn't look much like the "Master race", then.

Buzz Bombs Active

"We left at night and have been taking convoys in ever since. On one trip we saw five buzz bombs being shot down and one landed just astern of us. At night, all you can see is the light they make. On the same trip we came across a floating mine and after firing at it for quite a while, the boys sank it. Almost everyone had a shot at it."

In this connection, one of the officers on the ship mentioned that the corvette had to put into port for repairs to the engine room, which had been damaged by the blast when the mine was hit.

H.M.C.S. Woodstock was commissioned on D Day and missed the landing of British and Canadian troops in France, they were around for the next eight weeks guarding convoys against U-boats.

Plenty of Help

According to one reporter, the crew agreed on one thing—they never saw quite so many ships at one time before. They watched two big Royal Navy battleships let go salvo after salvo against the coastal defences which were blasted to bits.

One of the corvette's officers described how they spent part of their trip in the following words:

"We stripped and lay on the deck sun bathing. It's a fact. The Allied force was so overwhelming and did the job so completely there was nothing for us to shoot at except the very occasional plane and someone else usually got it before we had a chance. We saw submerged wrecks which often affected our detectors like submarines and sent us on a wild goose chase."

L/S Cleary's chum, Jim Huggins of Peterborough, just missed his pal in Halifax. He was on his way home on furlough and on the train met some boys from H. M. C. S. Woodstock, who told him his friend was taking a month's course.

Ike Cleary enlisted in June 1941, joined the Commandos and went overseas in January, 1942. He served with combined operations until August, 1943 when he got a transfer and came home on leave. The sailor returned to England aboard the Woodstock and has remained with her since. Before enlisting, he worked as a winder in the Armature department at the C. G. E. for five years.

IN MEMORIAM

PAYNE—In loving memory of David W. Payne, who passed away, Aug. 19, 1939.

From our happy home and circle
God has taken one we loved,
He is borne away from sin and sorrow
To a nobler rest above.
No one knows how much we miss him,
None but aching hearts can tell;
Lost on earth, but found in Heaven—
Jesus doeth all things well.
—Ever remembered by Velma, Harold, Bettie and Melvin.

PAYNE—In loving memory of Dad, David Walter Payne who died August 19th, 1939.

The record of a generous life runs like a vine around the memory of one that we would like his hand to clasp, his bright eyes again to see, to hear his voice, just like things used to be.
—Alice and Wes.

PAYNE—In loving memory of David W. Payne, who passed away, Aug. 19th, 1939.

He is gone but not forgotten,
And as dawns another year
In our lonely hours of thinking
Thoughts of him are always near
Days of sadness will come o'er us,
Friends may think the wound is healed
But they little know the sorrow,
That lies within the heart concealed.
—Fondly remembered by wife and family.

WESTLAKE—In loving memory of our Dear mother, Mrs. Rhoda Westlake who passed away, August 20, 1940.

The years may wipe out many things,
But this they wipe out never
The memory of these happy days
When we were all together.
—Remembered by the Family.

WOOD—In loving memory of Annie Pearl Wood, who passed away Aug. 19, 1938.

We know that she is happy
In our Saviour's home above,
Growing fairer as she lingers
In the sunshine of his love.
—Ever remembered by the Family.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

AIMING IN THE DARK

WHEN YOU can keep a suit concealed from the enemy—especially if it is a major suit—you may get some picturesque help in making your contract. That suit may be the one chosen for the opening lead, as well as for other leads later on. It may cause setting up of secondary cards, building of vital entries and other positively useful things, besides saving your weak spots from being attacked.

North: ♠ 9 6 4 ♥ K 9 8 4 2 ♦ 10 5 ♣ 8 6 4

West: ♠ J 10 5 ♥ Q 10 5 ♦ 9 8 6 4 ♣ K J 7

East: ♠ 8 7 2 ♥ A 7 3 ♦ K J 3 2 ♣ 10 9 2

South: ♠ A K Q 3 ♥ J 6 ♦ A Q 7 ♣ A Q 5 3

(Dealer: North. North-South vulnerable plus part score of 40.)

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1 ♣	Pass
1 ♥	Pass	2 NT

South's 2-No Trumps constituted a game with the 40 part-score, and North obviously had no desire for any further bidding.

Since spades had not been shown in the auction, West decided to lead the J. The A won this, and the heart J, covered by the Q and K, was ducked by East, who wanted to block the suit by holding on to his A. The club Q was finessed to the K, and West led his spade 10, though his partner had given him the discouraging 2 on the opening lead. South took that with the K and led the heart 6.

Fearing that South held three hearts originally and East only two to the A, West put the 5 on the 6, and the 8 went on from dummy. Again East played low, his 7, reckoning that South perhaps had three of the suit and a second hold-up would block it. He did not realize that the spade 9 had been made an entry into dummy by West's leads, refusing to believe South had four spades.

So next the dummy offered the heart 2, on which the A and 10 fell together. East returned the diamond 2, on which South used his A. He led the spade 3 to the 9, cashed the heart 9 and 4, led to the club A, scored the spade Q for his tenth trick and then gave up the club Q to the K to finish the hand. With double-dummy defense, South would have had a job to take more than six tricks, never getting in the dummy.

Hansard Pays Increase In Last Session

By JACK BRAYLEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA, Aug. 18.—(CP).— As the war continues, parliament apparently does more talking, and Hansard reporters wrote more this year than ever before in Canadian Legislative history.

A House official said the Hansard men, who record the blow-by-blow account of House proceedings from their tiny desks in the green carpeted corridor between Government and Opposition benches, filled 6,652 pages of sessional record this year, compared with 5,575 last year and 5,201 in 1943.

A press gallery view of the Hansard men at work shows them as experts in thier trade. They relieve each other at 10-minute intervals and, using old style pens, they can jab at the ink well and turn a page without losing a beat. And this is something when a rapid-fire orator such as A. W. Neill, Independent member for Comox-Alberni constituency of British Columbia, is speaking. His speeches are long and he races through them at a speed which leaves ordinary reporters groggy.

Without having made a statistical survey, an official "guessed" that Prime Minister Mackenzie King must — by virtue of his office and the volume of announcements made from his desk—lead in Hansard verbiage with possibly Gordon Graydon, Progressive Conservative House leader, second.

A New Idea

Lights out: Dr. Thomas F. Donnelly, the energetic liberal member from Wood Mountain in Saskatchewan, who has just returned from a tour of the Antipodes, has as suggestion—which he admits with a wink is impracticable and rather drastic—for cutting down the oratory in the Commons.

He would have the Chamber lighted with glow-worms, an idea he got from a cave near Auckland New Zealand.

"We were warned when we entered the cave that the thousands of glow-worms clinging to the roof would blackout if we talked too much," said the prairie Doc with a smile. "Well, you know parliamentarians. Some of us kept on talking and the first thing you knew we were all in the dark."

Insignia: When Lt.-Gen. Kenneth Stuart, Chief of General Staff at Canadian Military Headquarters in London, visited the Press Gallery for an off-record talk on the Normandy fighting the other day, reporters guessed that the black circular patches bearing yellow maple leafs on his shoulders were the insignia of the newly-active 1st Canadian Army.

But they were wrong. Gen. Stuart said his patches were those of C. M. H. Q. and that the 1st Army patches comprise of a red diamond cut by a half-inch dark blue stripe.

To Maintain Army

SYDNEY, Australia, Aug. 19 — (CP).—Charles Frost, Minister for Repatriation, said that after the war Australia will have a standing army, adding that this will enable demobilization to be carried out successfully. He said land settlement will be one of the best means of providing for demobilized servicemen and declared the Commonwealth must guarantee the returned soldier who settled on the land a certain living standard by payment of subsidies to meet cost of production.

Oil From Taps

BATAVIA, Ill., Aug. 19 — (AP). — When Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Bivens turned on the faucets at their farm Wednesday they got thick streams of greasy fluid for 36 hours. Chemists analyzed the substance as crude oil. But the flow stopped yesterday. The chemists said dynamite blasts from a factory workers' camp nearby probably had burst a small oil pocket, forcing oil into the water supply.

Roosevelt Plans World League

NEW YORK, Aug. 19—(AP)—President Roosevelt plans to submit a new "league of nations" to the Senate and later to ask it for power to enforce peace treaties, the New York Times says in a dispatch from Washington.

The newspaper says that by separating the world security organization from peace treaties, the administration hopes to get the new league operating possibly before the end of the war. Present plans, it added, aim for a treaty establishing the new security organization for presentation to the Senate before the first of the year with hopes that it will be ratifed before spring.

Thus, says the Times, it is expected that the new league and world court would be ready to deal with problems which might arise at the peace conference. Terms of the peace treaty and the security setup would complement each other under administration plans, the Times adds.

They Are Coming!

London, Aug. 19 (CP)

THE Paris radio went silent today after reporting yesterday that the Allies had started an all-out drive for the capital.

During a silence lasting 24 hours the BBC instead of getting Paris during regular news periods heard a voice on the Paris wave length shouting in German:

"They are coming."

The Vichy radio was not heard during several scheduled periods.

French Patriots Block Division

EDMONTON, Aug. 19 (CP)—The French underground, under command of Gen. Joseph Koenig, stopped "one full German division" by sabotage on D-Day, Major De MacMahon, military attache from France, said in an interview here tonight.

Just arrived from Wainwright, approximately 107 miles east of Edmonton, Maj. De MacMahon said French people are "waiting patiently for the day of liberation."

En route to Ottawa, where he is stationed, Maj. De MacMahon stopped off in Edmonton overnight after a three-day visit to Wainwright basic training centre where he and seven other military attaches had front-line seats in full-scale manoeuvres staged by Canadian troops over a 1,239-square-mile area set out recently by Canadian military authorites.

Wavell Has Rejected Gandhi's Request

NEW DEHLI, Aug. 19—(CP)—Field Marshal Lord Wavell has rejected Mohandas K. Gandhi's request for a conference to discuss immediate independence, it was announced today, and the Nationalist leader said the only way to rid India of British power was to "develop enough strength to wrest it from them."

The Viceroy said nothing could be gained by such a conference now, but that he would be glad to consider any "definite and constructive policy."

"It is clear as a crystal that the British Government do not propose to give up the power they possess over 400,000,000 Indians unless the latter develop enough strength to wrest it from them," Gandhi said at Wardha. "I shall never lose hope that India will do so by purely moral means."

Gandhi had offered full Nationalist support for India's war effort in exchange for immediate independence.

Parties Lacking Clear Cut Election Issues

By FRANK FLAHERTY,
Canadian Press Staff Writer.

OTTAWA, August 19 —(CP) — Out of the long debates of the recent session of parliament has come a wealth of speculation over the next Federal Geneeral Election, but no clear-cut issue on which that election might be sought.

An analysis of party platforms and statements by party leaders in recent months tends to indicate that rarely, if ever in Canadian history have the principal political organizations been closer together in their basic views.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King, who repeatedly has said the election will not be held before the end of the war but before the statutory eppiry of the term of the present parliament next April, is expected to lead the Liberal Party into the campaign with an appeal for a broad program of social and economic reconstruction.

It will be presented as a program designed to enable Canada to fill her place in the world as the greatest of the smaller nations and potentially a great nation.

That it may be flavored with a touch of nationalism was indicated when Mr. King declared himself in the Commons to favor the adoption of a Canadian flag and a Canadian National Anthem after the war.

That the appeal will be in tune with the broad aims of the United Nations for preservation of their common association also has been indicated.

To date, howevr, there has come no challeng of governmental policies from the opposition which is considered likely to create an issue.

Premier George Drew of Ontario has attacked Family Allowances, put forward by Mr. King as the cornerstone of the structure of Social Security he hopes to complete for the post-war period.

Might Be An Issue.

If Premier Drew's views were shared by the Progressive Conservative Party in the national sphere this might create an issue, but the Progressive Conservative members in parliament supported the measure.

While Family Allowances are not mentioned in the official platform of the Progressive Conservative party, that organizaiton is on record as in accord with the principle that Federal funds should be used to provide welfare services throughout Canada.

As the end of the parliamentary session approached, the two major parties seemed to find common ground on Empire relations, a subject which promised an issue earlier over the question of an Empire Council or Secretariat.

When some Opposition members urged a strengthening of the Empire through creation of some central organization to settle on a common policy, Mr. King quoted Mr. Bracken as stating a policy he considered not greatly different from his own, which is that the Empire can be strong only through its different parts exercising the most complete freedom with consultation and frequent exchanges of views.

Little Difference.

Later, Gordon Graydon, Progressive Conservative House Leader, said no one would suggest any Empire arrangement hich would lessen Canadian autonomy and also quoted Mr. Bracken to show that there was not a great difference between his own Leader and Mr. King.

Between the C.C.F. and the two older parties there will be a clear issue in that the C.C.F. places first importance on public ownership and control and the others place first importance on the encouragement of private enterprise.

Neither of the old parties, however, on its written official statements or the speeches of its leaders is prepared to reject a widening of the sphere of governmental activity where that may be necessary to achieve "full employment and a high level of national income.'

Between the Social Credit Party and the other three parties there also is a clash of emphasis, although not of objectives. That party places emphasis on monetary action is the decisive factor in adjusting the economy of the nation to provide the maximum in happiness and welfare for the people. The other parties regard monetary action and policy as only one of many agents to be employed.

Belmont W.I. Makes Bingo Arrangements

HAVELOCK, Aug. 19—(ENS)—Owing to the heat wave and the busy season for those in rural districts, the attendance at the August meeting of the Belmont Women's Institute was very small. The President, Mrs. G. Hartin, presided and the business included the arrangements for a "Bingo" to be held in the township hall on Thursday, August 24. The roll call was answered by "Something a Woman can do on the farm." A letter of thanks was read from Gunner Leonard Salter who is serving in Italy.

A short program, arranged by the program convener, Mrs. J. McMillan, consisted of community singing interspersed with several readings. The hostesses were Mrs. C. Kennedy and Mrs. J. Seabrooks.

30,000 Germans Fortifying Paris

NEW YORK, Aug. 19—(AP)—Thirty thousand German soldiers are digging trenches in Paris and fortifying the suburbs, the Swiss newspaper Die Illustrierte of Lucerne said in an article reported to-day by the Office of War Information.

A special effort has been made in recent months to fortify buildings occupied by Nazi civil and military offices, the article said, and tank traps have been installed at the ends of important streets.

The Nazi occupation authorities do not want to "spare Paris the horrors of a siege or pitched battle," the article declared.

Says Inflation May Follow War

WINNIPEG, Aug. 19.—(CP). — Continuation of a large scale savings program for Canadians in the post-war years in the fight against inflation until there is a better balance between money to spend and things to buy was stressed in an address here to-day by D. B. Mansur, assistant chairman of the National War Finance committee.

Mr. Mansur told the Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association delegates at a luncheon that the danger of inflation will continue through the Pacific phase of the war and into the early stages of the post-war period.

"It would be tragic to prejudice our future, to throw overboard all the good work we have done up to now, through a premature slackening in our support of the savings program or of the other measures which are so necessary to continue the fight against inflation," he said.

Nazis Claim Baltic Trap Broken

Russians Gain On Wide Front Beyond Warsaw City

LONDON, Aug. 21.—(CP).—The German communique said to-day that Nazi tank formations pushing west of Tukums in Latvia had crashed through the Soviet corridor to the Baltic west of Riga and "re-established temporarily lost contact" with the 30 or so German divisions in Latvia and Estonia.

The Russians at midnight admitted local reverses in that sector, but did not indicate the corridor had been cut. The force of up to 300,000 Germans were severed from land communications several weeks ago. The Germans said a naval flotilla aided the tank force.

The Germans asserted also the Russians had driven a third bridgehead across the broad Vistula river west of Kazimierz, 75 miles south of Warsaw and 35 miles east of Radom.

In the Warsaw sector, meanwhile, Russian troops have driven closer to Praga, suburb to the east of the city, and have captured some vital positions to the north-east, front dispatches said.

Marshal Ivan S. Konev's 1st Ukraine Army, thrusting up the west bank of the Vistula, liquidated the trapped Germans north of Sandomirez. "As the enemy refused to surrender, most of the encircled enemy troops were killed," theRussian war buletin declared.

The victory freed Konev's forces for a posible drive either south-west on the rail fortress of Krakow, or north toward Warsaw, or directly west across the Polish plains toard German Silesia, which would snap the Polish capital's communication lines.

The slight Red Army reverse occurred in the Jelgava sector near the Gulf of Riga, where 144 German tanks and self-propelled guns were reported knocked out.

In Estonia, Gen. Ivan Maslennikov's 3rd Baltic Army, capturing more than 150 populated places, drove to within seven miles of Tartu on the Tallinn-Riga railway.

South of the Estonian sector in Latvia Gen. Andrei Yeremenko's 2nd Baltic Army, sweeping up more than 70 places, advanced to within 55 miles east of Riga with the capture of Erglin on the Madona-Riga railway.

Super Bombers Batter 4 Jap Cities

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21 —(AP)—Bombers in the second wave of Sunday's double-strike at Japan reported today sighting the flames of destruction wrought by the daylight flight of Superfortresses while still a half-hour flight from industrial targets on Kyushu.

Four of the huge bombers were reported lost to enemy action in the co-ordinated day and night attacks by the 20th Air Force.

The important Yawata industrial section was the target of both flights.

The bombers shot down 15 enemy fighters, while 13 were probably destroyed and 12 damaged.

The Tokyo radio, as usual, minimized the efforts of the raids, terming damage "negligible" and claiming 23 planes out of a total of 80 were destroyed in the first raid. It also asserted that 20 parachuting American airmen were captured. The Japanese broadcasts said the first raid was against four cities on Kyushu, the southernmost main island, naming Fukuoka, Mojo, Kokura and Yawata. The latter, site of numerous heavy industries, has been hit twice previously.

Possibility that a big naval base also was a target was seen in the Japanese statement that both raids were directed at "Northern Kyushu and the western Choguku district." The office of War Information identified "Choguku" as Shikoku, a naval base on the main island of Honshu. The German D.N.B. agency, which relayed the Japanees broadcast, however, said it was the Island of Shikuku, east of Yyushu.

The 20th Air Force, noting that the initial attack was the first daylight operation over Japan proper since the attack on Tokyo headed by Lt.-Gen. James Doolittle April 18, 1942, had no information on results of the second foray.

Planes Rake Germans Along Seine

Gather 1,200 Barges On The River To Effect Retreat

By GLADWIN HILL
Associated Press Staff Writer

LONDON, Aug. 21.—(AP).—R. A. F. Mosquitoes and Mitchells raced up and down the Seine river throughout last night, bombing and strafing Nazi river bank troop concentrations and barges struggling across the 200 yard water barrier which impedes Germans fleeing Allied armies in France.

The Nazis' four principal crossings at Elbeuf, Duclair, Caudebec and Quillebeuf, were hammered in flare-lit tree-top level attacks as the record scourge from the skies to-day swept into its fifth day, despite handicapping weather.

A line of barges extending for three-fourths of a mile and reportedly salvaged from the abortive 1940 campaign to invade England were blasted near Quillebeuf. American fighter bombers in daylight and evening attacks knocked out 20 others.

A simultaneous night-long attack on the belt west of the Seine, through which the beaten Nazis are streaming from the Falaise trap, knocked out 136 vehicles and 16 tanks to bring the day's total for both the R.A.F. and R.C.A.F., and the U.S. Army Air Force to more than 350 vehicles and nearly 100 tanks.

The original total barge force upon which the Germans are depending for their miniature Dunkerque over the bridgeless river was estimated at 1,200 to 1,500. The Germans also have used hinged pontoon bridges, which swing back against the shrub-shrouded river in the daytime, but these are very susceptitble to bombing.

The attacks are taking place a scant 25 miles down the Seine from the American bridgehead.

Canadian Spitfire and Typhoon pilots destroyed or damaged more than 400 German vehicles in furious week-end attacks on the remnants of the German 7th Army.

In addition, the U.S. 9th Air Force fighter bombers and the 8th Fighter Command reported that the 10-day score up to Saturday night of German transport destroyed or damaged included 979 locomotives, 8,500 railroad cars, 1,253 road vehicles and 281 armored vehicles.

R.A.F. figher bombers alone reported 114 tanks destroyed or damaged yesterday.

Four squadrons of rocket firing Typhoons did a neat precision job, breaking up the German effort to smash out of the Falaise trap with an assault by 20 to 30 massed tanks toward Trun.

Carefully avoiding the almost interlocked Allied ground columns, the Tyhpoons destroyed 12 tanks and damaged eight more.

The Germans threw in light aerial opposition. Nine of thier planes were shot down, while the R.A.F. lost four from 861 sorties.

37 Per Cent 18 To 45 Now In Army

OTTAWA, Aug. 21 — (CP) — Intake from the nine provinces into the Canadian Armed forces from the start of the war to March 31, 1944, totalled 913,092 or 36.9 per cent. of the estimated 2,474,000 men in the military 18-to-45 years age groups, it was disclosed today by Wartime Information Board.

In addition 15,226 was taken in outside Canada, thus bringing the total intake to 938,318.

The intake figure does not take discharges into consideration and must not be confused with the total strength of the armed forces, 756,900, June 30.

Previous figures have been broken down by military districts, but today's were the first released by Province. They showed Nova Scotia with a total intake of 56,128 of its 123,000 military age males leading the list with a percentage of 45.6.

Quebec with a total of 154,503 of its 699,000 military age males trailed with a percentage of 22.1.

Behind Nova Scotia came following provinces:— British Columbia, 44.4 per cent; New Brunswick, 43.8 per cent; Manitoba, 43.5 per cent; Ontario, 43.3 per cent; Alberta, 40.1 per cent; Saskatchewan, 38.9 per cent Prince Edward Island, 38.4 per cent.

A study of the army figures showed that in the two biggest provinces, Ontario, with a military age population of 830,000 had 209,639 volunteers while Quebec, with 699,000 eligible males had 60,624.

Quebec to in 46,443 draftees compared to Ontario's 41,502.

The compilation also showed that in the period since Sept. 30, 1943, when the last compilation was dated the per centage of Canadian manhood of military age drawn into but not necessarily remained in the forces moved up from 35.1 to 36.9. The new All-Canada total of 913,092 compared with the previous total of 867,590.

Bag 21 Planes

ROME, August 21 —(CP) — Mediterranean air force planes shot down 21 enemy planes in the week ending Saturday, despite the opening of full-scale invasion. The low score was not brought about by bad marksmanship, but by the lack of German planes in the area.

25,000 Germans Surrender Trapped In Normandy Bulge

Patton's 3rd Army Takes 49,650 In Drive On Paris

ALLIED SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, Aug. 21 — (CP) — American tanks had thrust into sectors on opposite sides of Paris today to the east, Canadians were driving towards the mouth of the Seine, and Gen. Montgomery told Allied troops the enemy in north-western France had suffered a defeat "definite, complete and decisive" with the end of the war "in sight."

The Americans had established a firm bridgehead across the Seine at Mantes, 25 miles nohtwest of the capital, where they threatened a sweep toward the rocket coast. But they were meeting heavy resistance in that direction.

Tanks had probed as far as Corbeil Melun and Fontainebleau on a 20-mile front 15 to 35 miles southeast of Paris where they were pointing toward the First Great War battlefields of Soissons, Reims and the Marne northeast of Paris.

ON THE BRITISH FRONT IN FRANCE — (AP). — An estimated 25,000 German prisoners had been captured in the Normandy bulge battle around the Falaise-Argentan gap by 6:45 p. m. to-night (12:45 p.m. EDT.)

They were fighting in the vicinity of Versailles, the western suburb of Paris and were meeting only negligible resistance, while travellers from the capital itself told of a rising wave of violence in which French underground forces anticipated the hour of liberation.

Already, it was announced that Gen. Patton's 3rd Army in its sweep to Paris had captured 49,650 Germans, killed 11,025 and wounded 48,900—a total of 109,575.

Now the invasion of the territory north of the Seine at Mantes threatened new destruction of Germans caught in a 75-mile-long corner below the bridgeless River.

"The end of the war is in sight. Let us finish of the business in record time," Gen. Montgomery declared in his message in which he said there were fresh surprises in store for the enemy.

At least 10,000 men from the combat elements of possibly 18 enemy divisions were caught in a succession of pockets west and east of Falaise and the total bag of German killed and captured was likely to total 36,000—equal to the number captured in the Cotentin peninsula.

Being Cut to Pieces

While the Germans made wild efforts to break out of the original pocket, now reduced to an area about six by 10 miles, British, Canadian and American forces were cutting it to pieces.

Occagnes, Sentilly, Bailleul and Goulet, all about three miles north of Argentan, were captured in these slashes.

ROME, August 21 — (AP) —Hard driving French troops virtually encircled Toulon, breaking through to within three miles of the naval base while American infantry, within 15 airline miles of Marseille, fanned out to-day through the Durance valley and headed for the Rhone against disorganized enemy resistance.

The Americans sped forward on both sides of the town of Pertuis, 11 miles north of Aix-en-Provence across the Durance river, and joined French patriots who had surrounded Nazi troops within the town.

Another of Maj.-Gen. Alexander M. Patch's Allied columns charged on several miles to the north-east of Aix, key junction of seven highways 15 miles north of Marseille. Another unit was last reported in the outskirts of Aix and to-day possibly had completed occupation of that town.

Navy Shells Port.

(The German radio said Allied warships shelled Toulon Sunday. It claimed hits on one of "several" battleships and one of nine cruisers in the attacking fleet by Nazi batteries, which, it was claimed, also struck a destroyer and torpedo boat.)

A dispatch from Joseph Dynan, Associated Press Correspondent with French troops driving on Toulon, said French commandos, joined with patriot forces and former members of the French navy, were dominating the Faron area just north of Toulon.

The Nazi garrison in Hyeres, about 8½ miles east of Toulon, was virtually isolated, Dynan said.

The Germans have given no indication of strength or determination to make a real stand in or near the mouth of the Rhone valley.

Disorganization among the Germans indicated the Nazi command might be resigned to eventual liquidation of the entire area.

The Eastern sector of the bridgehead facing towards Cannes and the Italian frontier was reported "mostly stable," without reference to new gains.

In most sectors of the rapidly expanding southern France bridge-

Allied Cruisers Shelling Bayonne Area

IRUN, Spain, Aug. 21 (AP)—Three light Allied cruisers began shelling almost non-existent German defences in the Bayonne area of southern France before dawn today.

Spanish residents of this border town 16 miles to the south had a grandstand seat.

The cruisers which first patrolled the coast south of Bordeaux evidently were feeling out German defences, but drew only an occasional reply from two or three coastal batteries near Bayonne.

South of Bayonne Hitler's so-called Atlantic wall no longer exists, for the Germans pulled out last night, leaving their defence works in ruins.

An American motorised column meanwhile was reported to have passed through Angouleme, 130 miles south of Nantes on the Loire River and 165 miles northwest of Bayonne, without encountering resistance on its way toward the Spanish frontier.

The three Allied warships were plainly visible from the Spanish coast when the fog veiling their approach had lifted.

They shelled the coastline methodically for more than half an hour. Splashes of shells in the water around the cruisers from the light German counter-fire were also seen, but no hits were observed.

The warships ceased fire about 7:45 a.m. and disappeared northward.

Churchill Fires Gun In Italy

ROME, Aug. 21 (AP)—Prime Minister Churchill personally shot a big American gun at two German cannon positions north of Pisa, it was disclosed today.

After he pulled the lanyard, the shell fell 200 yards short of the target. A gunnery officer corrected the elevation and two rounds later, both enemy guns were destroyed. An artillery spotter flying overhead reported fires and explosions at both gunpits.

Mr. Churchill's personal participation in the war occurred during a recent visit to the 5th Army front.

Rocket Guns Combat Robots

LONDON, August 21 —(CP) — Britons, counting dozens of dead and injured after sharp week-end flying bomb attacks, found cheer today in news that rocket guns were being used successfully against the robots.

British hope of relief from flying bombs was heightened by prospects that swift Allied advances in western France soon might drive the Nazis from some of their launching sites.

Both British coastal and aerial observers expressed belief some launching platforms already had been forced to move farther north-east.

The rocket guns ,such as defended London last spring, were reported considerably successful in knocking down flying bombs short of their targets. But nevertheless sporadic robot attacks took a toll of lives and property in London and the southern counties yesterday and assaults were resumed again to-day.

In one village 11 persons were killed and others hurt yesterday when a robot landed squarely on a surface shelter. Another bomb hit a row of houses, killing six and injuring several. Still another killed thrpe civilians and two Canadian soldiers.

Brazilian Unit Fights In Italy

ROME, Aug. 21 —(AP)—Polish forces on the Adriatic have advanced seven miles to within 12 miles of the Italian port of Pesaro, where eastern outposts of the Germans' trans-peninsular Gothic Line are reputed to begin.

The Germans pulled their defences behind the Metauro River, Gen. Alexander's headquarters announced. In the advance, the Poles captured Cerasa.

Eighth Army patrols made deep penetrations east of Florence, between the Upper Arno and Tiber Rivers.

West of Florence, the Germans shelled 8th Army positions south of the Arno River. Conditions within Florence were reported "somewhat quieter." Food and other provisions poured in for the citizens.

It was disclosed for the first time that the Brazilian expedtiionary force under Maj. Gen. Moraes de Mascarenhas had joined the Allied 5th Army in the area extending inland from the Tyrrhenian Sea south of Pisa.

Off Target Bombing Common In Italy

TORONTO, Aug. 21 — (CP) — Veterans of the Sicilian and Italian campaign returned to Toronto yesterday and said there were instances in that theatre of Allied bombs falling on Allied troops.

Sgt. J. W. Smith of Toronto told of crouching in a trench during Cassino while Allied bombs fell around him and Capt. A. W. Hamilton, Dover, Ont., told of being bombed by three Allied planes in Sicily. Smith said "it wasn't very bad" and Capt. Hamilton said of his bombing that "it was over in a second and there were no casualties."

Pte. Earl Fare of St. Catharines said "it happened quite a few times in Sicily" and one regiment "got it pretty badly in Italy."

Used Hay

ARTHUR, Ont., Aug. 21 (CP)—A tip to tire-troubled motorists is held in the experience of two young New Hamburg motorists on their way home from a dance, after fixing three flats in their four tires, found one tube was ruined, they decided to pack the tire casing with hay. It worked and they got home without further tire trouble.

Victory Decisive In Normandy

WITH BRITISH TROOPS IN FRANCE, August 21 — (CP). — Gen. Montgomery told his troops to-night:

"The end of the war is in sight. Let us finish off the business in record time."

Gen. Montgomery's special message said the German armies in North-west France had suffered a decisive defeat.

"As an Allied Commander and over-all Commander of the Land Forces under Gen. Eisenhower, I can praise the fighting qualities and tenacity in battle of the British, Canadian and Polish troops on the eastern flank," he declared. "They fought the enemy relentlessly and took a heavy toll of him during the whole days of this great battle."

Gen. Montgomery voiced also "high admiration of the brave fighting qualities of the American Armies in the opening stages of the break-in battle of July 25 and the following days."

He said "It matters little who did this or that," adding, "All that matters is that it was well and truly done by the whole Allied team."

"There will be many surprises in store for the fleeing remnants," he asserted.

Montgomery said the victory had been "definite, complete and decisive."

Hull Says Force Imperative If World Peace To Be Held

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21 —(CP)— State Secretary Cordell Hull opened the history-making post-war security talks today with a declaration the organization of peace must be backed by force "available promptly, in adequate measure, and with certainty."

His assertion in a prepared address indicated the United States is entering the four-power meetings with plans for strong commitments on the use of its own forces in support of world security for generations to come.

Sir Alexander Cadogan, British representative, appealed for the British, American, Soviet and Chinese governments to act speedily in erecting a world peace structure in order to get some of it working before the war ends.

He evidently referred to the British proposal that at a minimum the big-four nations should band themselves together now in some sort of provisional council until a permanent organization can be formed.

The delegates were gathered at Dumbarton Oaks, historic Washington estate, where all their meetings are to be held.

Speaking for President Roosevelt as well as himself, Mr. Hull as official host opened the first session—the first international meeting to block out a security organization since formal work started on the ill-fated League of Nations 25 years ago. Sir Alexander and Ambassador Andrie Gromyko, Soviet representative, spoke in response to Mr. Hull, who then turned over the leading American role to Under-Secretary of State Edward R. Stettinius, Jr.

Both the British and American spokesmen sought to reassure small countries as to their position in the projected world agency.

Sir Alexander said of the large-and-small countries issue that our problem is to construct a machine which will give to each of them

Pilots Destroy 400 Vehicles

By DOUGLAS AMARON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON, Aug. 21—(CP Cable).—Canadian Spitfire and Typhoon pilots destroyed and damaged more than 400 German vehicles in week-end attacks on the shattered German 7th Army.

Poor flying conditions limited operations yesterday but reports from Normandy bases said 50 vehicles were hit during two morning sorties by airmen from the Spitfire wing commanded by Group Capt. W. R. MacBrien of Ottawa and Toronto.

Yesterday's successes in the area west of Bernay were scored by Wolfe and Red Indian squadrons.

The Wolfe squadron left three vehicles in flames, 13 smoking and 10 damaged while the Red Indian marked up six flames, eight smokers and 10 damaged. PO. O. H. Levere, Belleville, Ont., hit another.

Group Capt. MacBrien's wing shot up 209 vehicles Saturday and fliers in a wing led by Wing Cmdr. Dal Russel, Montreal, 180.

A breakdown of figures showed for MacBrien's wing: 59 flamers, 71 smokers, 80 damaged; for Russel's: 59 flamers, 34 smokers, 87 damaged. Five tanks and several armored vehicles also were hit.

In Saturday's forays the Red Indian squadron destroyed 28 vehicles, left 47 smoking and 41 damaged. Flt.-Lt. B. T. Gilmour, St. Thomas, Ont., and FO. M. Flood, Hearst, Ont., each made eight successful attacks on vehicles.

Ravens Imitate

DETROIT, Aug. 21 — (AP) — The Aleutian Islands, says Lt.-Col. Floyd Pfeiffer, home on leave, are a "strange and fascinating country."

For example, there are the Ravens with a wingspread exceeding a man's reach and a penchant for imitating airplanes.

Before American planes arrived, Col. Pfeifer said, the Ravens acted just as you'd expect a bird to act.

"But after watching those planes," he said, "they learned to run for a take-off. They swooped, buzzed the field, zoomed around and looped the loop."

137 Candidates In Election

New Brunswick Votes Next Monday

SAINT JOHN, N.B., Aug. 21 — (CP) — The total of 137 candidates —48 Liberals, 48 Progressive Conservatives and 41 C.C.F.—today began their final week of campaigning in the New Brunswick general election. Electors will go to the polls next Monday to decide the membership of the province's 40th legislature.

Rural electrification was one subject discussed in a radio address Saturday night by the Liberal Premier, Hon. J. B. McNair, who said the government believed, "as always," in electric power at cost as one of our greatest instruments of economic and social advancement.

Mr. McNair charged that the Grand Falls power site in central New Brunswick has been handed over to "certain monopolistic interests" by a Conservative administration in 1925 and said the plant at present was working at only a fraction of its potential capacity.

Lie Detector Traps Negro

Faces Murder Count At Niagara Falls

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y., Aug. 21 (AP)—Robert W. Barnes, 34-year-old negro charged with first-degree murder in connection with the strangle-slaying of Mrs. Miriam Kennedy, 25, has been ordered held for the September Grand Jury.

He waived preliminary examination when arraigned today before Police Justice Francis L. Giles, Police Supt. Maritn T. Considine has declared Barnes admitted the slaying following the lie detector tests at Buffalo police headquarters Friday.

Mrs. Kennedy's body was discovered in her home at the Pineacres Federal Housing Project, August 4. Her throat bore finger marks and a flimsy undergarment was bound tightly around her neck. She was the mother of three children.

Niagara County district attorney John Marsh said Barnes continued to deny any connection with the unsolved strangle-slaying of Mrs. Dorothea Newgarden, 40, mother of eight. Her body was found in a vacant house at the propect February 12, about two blocks from the Kennedy home.

Canadian Units Turn Back Hun Tank Push

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press War Correspondent

WITH THE 1ST CANADIAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Aug. 21 (CP Cable)—A frantic, disorganized attempt to break through the Canadian-Polish barrier blocking the Trun gap has been smashed by the combined efforts of 1st Canadian Army troops and artillery.

The German thrust was made yesterday with a hastily scraped-together force which tried to break open the trap between Trun and Chambois on a front about a mile wide. About 30 tanks lent their weight to the Nazi punch.

Enemy losses piled up as Canuck artillery and rocket-firing R.A.F. Typhoons poured devastating fire on their milling quarry. A German corps commander was captured by Polish forces and prisoners taken by the Canadian Army yesterday numbered at least 2,300, to bring the bag to between 4,000 and 5,000 since Falaise fell four days ago.

Plenty Remains

It was stated at Canadian Army headquarters that there still is "quite a lote of stuff in the trap" and that the enemy still is trying tc force his way out.

The German force which tried the break-through had support for their effort from the other side of the barrier where a tank-led Nazi force moved in to meet them.

This outside force massed north-east of Trun, near Vimoutiers, and was taken on by the R.A.F. who accounted for 13 tanks there. The going was what a senior Canadian officer called "sticky" for a while, but the effort finally was smashed and "nothing substantial got out."

While spectacular gains were lacking on the Canadian front, British troops under Lt.-Gen. Crerar's command hammered to within three miles of the important communications centre of Lisieux on a front between Les Mesnil Mauger and Le Mesnil Durand.

The 1st Canadian Army is now across the Vil River in real force, heading toward the Seine. Livarot was captured and Canadian armor now is providing a real threat to Lisieux.

Roads Mucky

Heavy rain which began during the night, turning the roads into muck, could only slow the Canadian advances and work to the Germans' advantage.

But Canadian artillery in open-sight firing from positions gained through the capture of Falaise was slaughtering German troops herded along the Falaise-Chambois barrier like frightened cattle in a pen.

"The job of liquidating the pocket is continuing. It is being reduced hourly," said a Canadian officer.

To the R.A.F. the Nazis lost 49 tanks damaged or destroyed yesterday and about 300 vehicles. Eleven German planes were shot down and eleven more damaged during daylight, and one was destroyed when it came over to attack shipping during the night.

Robombs Harass English Cities

LONDON, Aug. 21 (Monday) — (CP) — After a lull of several hours, the Germans fired more flying bombs on Southern England today adding to Sunday's casualties, which included at least 11 killed, two of them Canadian soldiers.

Meanwhile, it was disclosed, there has been a drop in war production in some sections of the London area and the Government is moving some subcontract plants to safer areas. The Ministry of Aircraft Production said the decline was "not serious", but it urged other smaller plants and their workers to move also and maintain their maximum output.

On the other hand. London's legitimate theatre is making a comeback. During the height of the robot bombing some of the theatres were hit and many shows closed or took to the road. Now more and more theatres are reopening.

Flying bombs Sunday wrecked blocks of tenements.

21 R.A.F. Planes Lost In Raid

LONDON, Aug. 21 (CP) — Great fires raged in Warsaw when R.A.F. heavy bombers—implementing British policy to help any one who fights the Germans—roared over and dropped guns and ammunition to patriots fighting the occupation forces in the Polish capital, it was disclosed Saturday.

The planes, 21 of which have been destroyed by German gunners within the city, flew from Mediterranean bases on a 1,750-mile round-trip flight—a perilous adventure which Britain undertook, although her Russian ally is at Warsaw's outskirts.

While there is no official comment, British policy appears to be the answer to the anomalous situation, for the nearby Russians have disavowed Gen. Bor's forces in Warsaw as creatures of the Polish Government in London, which the Soviet Union refuses to recognize.

The British, South African and Polish crews have flown 100 bombers on these missions, not only facing the hazard of German night fighters, but coming in over Warsaw low and slow in order to drop the badly needed arms accurately and offering easy targets for ground gunners.

Presentations Made To Two Of Kinsmen

MARMORA, Aug. 20—(ENS)—A special meeting of the Marmora Kinsmen Club which took the form of a dinner meeting was held at the Royal Hotel Thursday evening. The purpose of the dinner was a presentation to be made to Past President Wally Hilton who is shortly leaving the district.

President "Mike" Corrigan presented Mr. Hilton with a pen and pencil set and in a short speech praised the guest of honor for nis strong support of the work of the Club.

William Graham another member who is shortly leaving the district was given a billfold. Included in the gathering was Vie Knowles of Montreal, a former member of the club who has been renewing acquaintances in the district. Adjournment was later made to the residence of Immediate Past President Gregory Murray where a social evening was spent.

Thieves Take $49 From Louis Billiards

Supposerly unlocking a rear window while in playing billiards over the week-end, a thief or thieves stole $49 from the Louis Billiards Store on George street. William C. Inese, proprietor, told the Examiner to-day a quantity of cigarettes were stolen. To-day, police reported they had made no arrests as yet.

Scratches on the boarding below the window indicate more than one thief entered that way, and the fact neither the lock or the clasp holding the window were broken, proves the thieves paved the way for the robbery the previous evening, it is believed.

The thieves evidently were familiar with the billiard shop, and $12 was taken from a cash register behind the cigarette counter, and the remaining money was stolen from a locked drawer. When they couldn't force the lock on the drawer, the intruders pulled out the drawer immediately beneath, and smashed the bottom from the top drawer, where the money was concealed in the bottom of a cigar box.

Only 60 Nazi Divisions In All Balkans

BARI, Italy, Aug. 21—(AP). — A German force of fewer than 60 divisions, most of them far under strength, is holding the entire Balkans, including the front facing Russia, an examination of the most recent reports reaching this listening post indicated Sunday.

The Germans have strung out two-thirds of this number across 600 mountainous miles between the Black Sea and Krakow in Poland, dispersed about a dozen divisions south of the Danube and concentrated the remained in Central and Northwestern Yugoslavia.

These troops constitute the minimum with which Germany can hope to retain the Balkans, it is believed here, and withdrawals to help meet the new Allied invasion are unlikely.

The enemy's transportation situation has become critical, principally because of Allied bombing operations against the installations at Ploesti and elsewhere.

The German Air Force, bolstered by Romanian, Hungarian and Bulgarian units, probably is able to muster 800 to 1,000 fighter planes of all types in the Balkans. They are based principally in Eastern Austria, Hungary, Romania and Eastern Yugoslavia for defence of refineries, freight yards and war factories.

A Mixture.

Most of the German divisions in the south have been saturated with foreign troops—Poles, Czechs, Slovaks, Serbs and Armenians — a probable indication the Reich means to jettison them whenever it becomes necessary. Field Marshal Gen. Maximillian von Weichs, who directs all operations in Yugoslavia, Albania and Greece, is believed to have no more than five or six all-German divisions left in his command.

The burden of holding the Carpathians against Soviet forces south of Krakow, 200 miles from Vienna and 180 miles from Budapest, has been placed on the Hungarian Army. It is believed to have 12 of its 17 or so divisions in the line. Only three German divisions, one of them a cavalry outfit of 10,000 to 12,000 men, are known to be in this region.

Romania, which is already estimated to have lost 1,500,000 men in Russia, is believed to have 11 of its 30 under-strength divisions on the Soviet front. Others are massed in the rear to defend the narrow gap between Galatz and Transylvania — also the gateway to Bucharest and the Ploesti oil fields.

head, the 7th Army followed the effective tactics of by-passing enemy strong points.

The count of prisoners passed the 14,000 mark and more were coming in hourly.

Captures Staff.

Among the newest captives were Maj-Gen. Hans Schubert and his staff of six officers and 30 men. Schubert, chief of a district liaison staff until June, was chief administrative officer for south-west France with headquarters at Toulouse.

The Nazis defending Toulon were putting up a stiff battle against French infantry and armor on approaches to the city from the east and north.

But other 7th Army units swinging around to the northwestward closed in toward the coast, threatening to cut off the last escape route westward toward Marseille.

French troops captured Le Revest, three miles directly north of Toulon, and the adjacent height of Monte Caume. They threatened to cut highway eight —one of the enemy's major escape routes.

Farther north-west, other French units penetrated to the vicinity of Cuges, on highway eight, 6½ miles from the coastal road linking Toulon and Marseille. Once they are astride that route the Nazis in Toulon would have no alternatives to surrender or annihilation.

American forces advanced 15 miles from Rians and linked up with the French patriots surrounding the enemy garrison in Pertuis, a town of 5,000 26 miles north of Marseille. By yesterday afternoon, Gen. Patch's speeding columns were less than 40 miles from Avignon and the Rhone river.

Southwest of St. Maximin, the Allies rolled through the vicinity of St. Zacharie. This force was reported last to be within 15 air miles east-north-east of Marseille.

Lose Highways

With the Allies in the outskirts of Aix-en-Provence, the Germans had lost all hope of effective use of the network of highways north o Marseille and or withdrawal toward Avignon. To escape the closing trap, they could hope only to pull out rom Marseille along two roads west and north-west to Arle, then northward up the Rhone Valley.

An Allied spokesman, commenting on the situation at Toulon, said: "The enemy has given evidence of being determined to defend it stubbornly." The villages of Meounes, Les Montrieux and Sollies-Toucas to the northeast have been occupied.

Allied medium, light and fighter bombers methodically destroyed enemy gun positions, railway rolling stock and bridges behind the battle lines. Five locomotives, 36 motor vehicles, 20 railcars and two barges were included in yesterday's toll.

Allied headquarters disclosed meanwhile, that a first hand survey of the invasion area had been made by Lt.-Gen. Jacob L. Devers, deputy commander-in-chief in the Mediterranan and commander of American forces in that theatre; Lt.-Gen. Ira C. Eaker, Allied air commander; and Maj.-Gen. John K. Cannon, commander of the U.S. 12th air force.

the responsibilities commensurate with its powers."

Sir Alexander said he thought the Dumbarton meeting should concentrate on principles rather than details of organization and so keep constantly in mind that it is not the exact kind of organization so much as the will of countries to cooperate which in the end will ensure peace.

Peace Not Enough

He said: "We must remember that peace, in the negative sense of absence of war, is not enough. No world system can endure unless it permits of growth and unless it tends to promote the well-being of humanity as a whole. Hence, however, we may fit the various non-political world organizations into our general system, we must attempt to discover means whereby the expanding force of modern scientific discoveries is turned into constructive rather than into destructive channels . . ."

"Let us never forget that acute discomfort in the economic and social field will constantly hamper the smooth operation of the best political plans. In other words, freedom from fear and freedom from want must, so far as human agency can contrive it, move forward simultaneously."

He said the "working party" from the United Kingdom was recruited from the official level and said it followed that "so far as we are concerned, these talks are necessarily exploratory and non-committal."

"It cannot be emphasized too often," Mr. Hull said, "that the principle of sovereign equality of all peace-loving states, irrespective of size and strength, as partners in a system of order under law, must constitute the foundation of any future international organization or the maintenance of peace and security."

Unity Of Effort

Mr. Hull said that it is unity of effort which is now driving the United Nations to victory and only through continued unity can the peace-loving nations "assure for themselves security and orderly progress with freedom and justice."

He continued: "It is generally agreed that any peace and security organization would surely fail unless backed by force to be used ultimately in case of failure of all other means for the maintenance of peace.

"That force must be available promptly, in adequate measure, and with certainty. The nations of the world should maintain, according to their capacities, sufficient forces available for joint action when necessary to prevent breaches of the peace."

Mr. Hull said it was the American intention that after the Anglo-American-Chinese talks immediately following these sessions with the Russians, the conclusions reached at Dumbarton Oaks should be circulated among all the United Nations and "as soon as practicable" should be given out to all people "for public study and debate."

MORE ABOUT— Patton's 3rd Army

The Canadians were busily engaged in punching a hole in the Seine corner to the east where new pockets might be carved out. They crossed the Touques River in a two-mile advance just south of Lisieux.

MORE

Madly charging into a Canadian band of steel, the Germans made violent efforts yesterday to break out of a mid-Normandy trap, field dispatches said, and were smashed back by the combined efforts of 1st Canadian Army troops and rocket-firing R.A.F. fighters.

Canadian gunners poured fire over open sights into the pocket below Chambois, 10 miles southeast of Falaise. Field guns, anti-tank guns and even anti-aircraft guns blasted shells into milling masses of Germans.

Canadians Hung On.

Ross Munro, Canadian Press war correspondent, quoted a senior Canadian staff officer as saying the going was "sticky" for a while, but the effort finally was smashed and "nothing substantial got out." Enemy losses, said Munro, were "terrific," but Canadian casualties so far in the gap-blocking operation had been light.

Using about 70 tanks scraped up from the elements of five divisions the Germans attacked British troops from the westernmost pocket in another battle which raged all night, with the result still obscure today.

Thirty-three tanks were reported destroyed in the two suicide lunges.

While rain slowed Canadian advances, British elements of Gen. Crerar's command crossed the Vie river in real force, heading toward the Seine, and hammered eastward to within three miles of Lisieux, important communications centre, Livarot, 10 miles southeast of Lisieux, fell to the British forces.

These developments came as other elements of the U. S. 3rd Army fought German elements in the vicinity of Versailles, within 10 miles of the heart of Paris, and established themselves along the Seine south-east of the French capital. Paris itself was said to be seething in revolt in anticipation of liberation from German rule.

(The German official D. N. B. agency declared in a broadcast dispatch that " Allied reconnaissance forces are in the suburbs of Paris.")

Casualties Heavy.

Another front dispatch, describing furious fighting by trapped Germans around Chambois, said enemy casualties were suffered on both sides. It said German troops outside the trap attempted to pierce the Allied line and open a corridor for the Nazi inside.

The first German attempt failed. A second attack was launched from the Gouffern forset south-west of Chambois.

A British staff officer was quoted in the dispatch as saying: "We do not known yet how many Germans got out, but we know they suffered severe losses."

More than 7,500 trapped Germans were captured yesterday—2,200 on the British front alone. Supreme headquarters officially announced the capture of Argentan, on the southern edge of the now-closed escape gap of the original Normandy pocket.

The thrust into Cabourg by British troops on the left flank of the Allied offensive, which is forcing Field Marshal Von Kluge's forces back upon the Seine, took the Allied force to about 25 miles along the coast from the mouth of the Seine.

Farther inland British troops of the Canadian Army thrust to within three miles of the communications hub of Lisieux, a front dispatch said.

The gigantic Allied drive to envelope Von Kluge's crushed forces was hemming the battered German columns into a 75-mile-wide area between Vernon, on the Seine, 4 miles north-west of Paris, and Cabourg.

Paris Incidental.

The fall of Paris appeared incidental to the much greater stakes for which Gen. Eisenhower was playing — complete destruction of the German 7th Army and its ill-fated reinforcements from the 15th Army. One Allied officer said, "We are shaking the tree to uproot the German Army, not primarily to get the fruit."

Unconfirmed reports reaching Headquarters from the field said two American correspondents were killed and three others were wounded or captured trying to get to Paris.

A dispatch from the Spanish border reported the Germans were fleeing north in efforts to get out of France, and it appeared the Germans were abandoning all of France south of Paris.

Taking advantage of bad weather the Germans are trying to flee across the Seine toward Dieppe and the Pas de Calais along four crossings between Elbeuf and the sea, 35 airline miles away. R.A.F. Mosquitos attacked their crossing attempts in that area last night.

The British 2nd Tactical Air Force and the U.S. 9th Air Force operating over the Allied left flank in the area from Pernay and Lisieux to the Seine, destroyed 62 tanks and 214 other vehicles. This did not include the destruction in the original Falaise-Argentan pocket which now is being handled by Allied artillery fire as it is too small and broken up for air force operation.

Von Kluge's troops are fleeing from pocket to pocket. With the Falaise-Argetan gap closed the Nazis now are trapped south of the Seine and are being hammered on every side. The news of the Allied crossing at Mantes means that even if the Germans get across the Seine they are in a position to be trapped by Lt.-Gen. Patton's 3rd Army men.

No direct assault was being made on Paris. The Germans were fanning out a few miles to the south to counter American patrols. There were reports the French underground was engaging the Germans in the streets of the capital.

The American sweep across the Seine to the north-west and the push to positions to the south-east threatens to envelop the capital, leaving it in an undefendable position where it will have to fall.

Southwest of Paris American columns were in the vicinity of Fontainebleau, 35 miles from the capital, and around Corbeiel and Melun, 15 and 25 miles respectively from Paris.

The arrival of Gen. Charles de Gaulle, head of the French Committee of National Liberation, in Cherbourg clearly indicates Paris is expected soon to be in Allied hands.

Surviving are his widow, one daughter, Mrs. H. Sales (Cordie) and one son, Douglas, both of Windsor.

THOMAS KELLY.

ROSENEATH, Aug. 21—(ENS).—The death occurred last week at Cobourg General Hospital of Thomas Kelly in his 81st year. Mr. Kelly had been in ill health for some years, but was confined to bed only a few weeks, three of them in Cobourg General Hospital.

He was a son of the late Thomas Kelly and Julia Smith Kelly and was born in Haldimand township near Grafton. Mr. Kelly operated a mill and farm in the western end of Alnwick township, and was widely known. He was a member of Centenary United Church and choir, a member of the Cemetery Board, and for many years choir leader.

Mr Kelly was twice married. His first wife was Annie Wellwood of Alnwick, who died about forty-three years ago. Of this marriage there were two children, May, who died many years ago, and Ernest, R.C.A.F., McLeod, Alberta. Mr. Kelly later married Lottie Carson of Alnwick, who survives her husband. Surviving also are three sons: Eric of Harwood, Fred of Port Hope, and Alvin at home. A sister, Mrs. Morris Jaynes, of Oshawa, survives also.

The funeral service was held on Friday afternoon at the family residence, and was conducted by Rev. R. C. White, pastor of Centenary United Church. Interment was made at Centenary Cemetery. Pall-bearers were three cousins, George, William and Luther Harvie, and three neighbors, Arnold Elder, Dawson Timlin and Percy Williamson.

French Patriots Capture Toulouse City

LONDON, Aug. 21 — (CP) — The Algiers radio said today that on Sunday the Maquis captured Toulouse, sixth largest city of France.

Toulouse (Pop: 213,200) is in southwest France, 60 miles north of the Spanish border. Frequent neutral reports have told of German withdrawals from that area.

French patriots now control one-third of France comprising eight departments, says Gen. Joseph Koenig, Commander of the French forces of the interior.

In a communique broadcast by the Algiers radio, Gen. Koenig said that during the week ended Aug. 19 French patriots killed 1,831 Germans, wounded 415 and captured 2,265, suffering only slight losses themselves.

Reports relayed here through Port Bou, Spain, said the Maquis controlled the entire Pyrenees region of southwestern France from the Atlantic to the Mediterranean. All German forces just north of the Spanish border have withdrawn northward and French patriots have appointed new civil administrators.

A dispatch from Irun, Spain, said the last German forces at Hendaye, just across the border in France, have pulled out and only regular French customs men guarded the frontier.

(The Brazzaville radio said in a broadcast reported yesterday by NBC that Maquis forces were in control of Vichy. The broadcast added that Gestapo agents had moved from Vichy and Paris to Nancy.)

Laval Moves

French-Swiss border reports said Pierre Laval and other Vichy officials had arrived at Belfort, near both Switzerland and Germany, and that Laval had established headquarters in a chateau 10 miles outside Belfort.

Marshal Petain's whereabouts was a mystery. A frontier dispatch to the London Daily Mail said he was believed still at Vichy, "waiting at the Pavilion de Sevigne to hand over his powers to those who will be called upon to represent the new France." The Ankara radio said Petain was expected at Belfort.

(After his arrival in France yesterday, Gen. Charles De Gaulle, head of the French Committee of National Liberation, said in a speech from the Cherbourg city hall that "we are all united in the same will—the will to French greatness.")

A Good Idea

LONDON, August 21 —(CP) —The "post-war policy group" of members of both houses of parliament Saturday night issued a memorandum suggesting that compensation for civilian war victims be obtained on German customs, railway, steamship and street car services.

KEEPING PROMISE.

Board of Works men began this morning laying a concrete sidewalk on the east side of Stewart street and the south side of Wolfe street fronting the C. G. E. plastic building on the old porcelain plant property which extends from Townsend to Wolfe street.

Dieppe Veteran Murdered On Way Home

LOST RIVER Que., August 21 — Provincial Police were still searching yesterday for the person who shot and killed Pte. Hugh Miler, 31, of Weir, Jue., 60 miles north of Montreal, with shotgun slugs shortly before midnight last Friday. Pte. Miller, a wounded Dieppe veteran, was on his way home, his leg still in a plaster cast, to visit his wife and 10-year-oldd aughter, at the time of the mysterious shooting.

Dr. A. R. Cote, of Brownsburg, the district coroner, declared last night that he had adjourned the inquest indefinitely until detectives discover the assailant.

Detective Sergt. Maurice Valliquet and Detective Lucien Durocher of Montreal, sent to the scene by Chief of Provincial Police Detectives Louis Jargaile, were still near the scene of the shooting last night questioning witnesses and nearby residents.

Miller was still about 10 miles from home as he passed through Lost River on leave from Ste. Anne de Bellevue Hospital.

Details of the shooting were meagre with the exception of the information given police by Pte. James Bates of Lost River, also a wounded veteran. Bates told police he and the victim were speaking in front of the Brunelle Hotel when a shotgun blast cut Miller down.

Dr Jean Marie Roussel of Montreal, medico-legal expert, told the police that the shotgun charge had been fired from less than 50 yards, and that the pellets lodged in a group in his upper body.

While investigators were reticent, it was held that the shooting was not accidental.

Meanwhile this little Laurentian Mountains village was watchful over the week-end as the detectives questioned residents, others along the highway, and visited Weir as well as other settlements of the district.

LOOT LEFT BEHIND BY NAZI IN FRANCE—There was a strange assortment of equipment left behind by the Germans in many of the sectors in the Normandy fighting. Roseneath Boy Reunited With C.W.A.C. Wife

TORONTO, Aug. 21.— Romance won broad smiles and sympathetic looks in the Exhibition reception centre early Sunday morning when two uniformed figures met after the hospital train with Canadian wounded from Normandy and Italy had arrived. Even relatives and frends who were meeting others paused for a few minutes to watch the tall young officer on crutches and his pretty thrilled young uniformed wife.

It was exactly three years, one month and two weeks—A. CSM Lois Arber knew the exact number of days even—since they had said goodbye to each other. And now Lieut. J. C. Ardber of the Queen's Own Rifles was back home to her and she had 10 whole days' leave to spend with him. The two stood and gazed at each other and hugged each other; they were like a pair of youngsters at the beginning of a long, long holiday.

Mrs. F. C. Arber of Tweed, mother of the tall young officer, was with them, smiling happily, but just a little bashful about all the attention they couldn't help attracting. The young wife was known to many of the girls of the CWAC who were present; the word had got around the place about her expecting her husband. And other officers kept stopping to shake hands and congratulated them.

Lieut. Arber worked at the Roseneath branch of the Royal Bank before going overseas in 1941. He had his right leg amputated at the hip as a result of wounds recelevd invasion days. The officer also received neck and shoulder wounds.

"Happy?" echoed the slender soldier. "Are we? Boy, I'm telling you we're happy."

When anybody asked questions about over there the young wife would answer first; she admitted she knew "everything about him because he wrote lots." He lost his leg in Normandy on D-Day, though he had cleared the beach and got well inland. It was an 88-mm. airburst, the boys told him, though he didn't even hear it; just came to as a casualty.

"Ten whole days of holiday together," smiled A-CSM Arber. "We were married just before he joined up; he's been gone so long. Now we really are together again. I can't describe how I feel."

Legion Decides To Retain Cot

COBOURG, Aug. 21—(ENS)—Canadian Legion at a special meeting held to determine what should be done in regard to the lot which was deeded to the Legion by the town and now is wanted as a factory site, decided to retain the lot. The land, which is situated on Albert street, was deeded to the Legion so that the organization would have a site for the proposed Legion Hall.

Last week Mayor Jack Burnet, at a special meeting of the town council, informed the council that a company desired a 60-day option on the Legion Hall site and council decided to ask the Legion if it would give up the lot and take one somewhere else. A suggestion was the lot on George street at University, and council deferred action in the matter until the Legion held a meeting to decide what they would do. However the Legion later indicated that the members did not want to make any change.

Moose Fumerton Ace Flier Bags 14 Planes

OTTAWA, Aug. 21—(CP)—A big, strapping guy with a deceiving gentleness and a row of decorations got off a train here Sunday and told newsmen he didn't think he'd have time to get back in the fighting over Europe because the Germans were fading too fast, but he hoped to see some service in the Pacific.

If he does, it will round out the sky-fighting career of Group Capt. Carl (Moose) Fumerton of Fort Coulonge, Que., that started in the Battle of Britain, included Malta and Egypt, and three weeks ago saw him flying support for the grounded forces in Normandy.

"You're a 'groupie' now, then," the reporter grinned and showed "The Moose," an official paper with his promotion recorded.

"Gosh, I hope that doesn't mean I'm to be grounded," he said with genuine concern, studying the document which had been released while he was on his way home.

The famous flier with a record of 14 enemy aircraft destroyed and one damaged, said on his last flight over France three weeks ago: "Our lads down on the ground seemed to be having it pretty much their own way."

The veteran fighter and intruder pilot almost blushed when a reporter called him group captain. "No, just wing commander," he said pointing to the ringlets on his sleeve.

Like Pacific Prospect

He said this almost enviously, for he added: "Those guys used to gripe at the inactivity in Britain and sort of envy us the continuous action we used to get in the early days. Now they all get the action. The only opposition we get is from the ground defenses these days. The German Air Force is almost a thing of the past. That's why I'd like to take a crack at the Pacific."

He was interested to learn that Flt. Lt. George (Buzz) Beurling, Canada's leading ace from Verdun, had applied to fly for China in the Pacific. The Moose was with Beurling in Malta. "He'll sure be bad medicine for the Japs, eh?" he grinned.

Fumerton said over the years he had watched a gradual deterioration of the Luftwaffe. Their strength had dwindled perceptibly in the last few months, and the quality of their pilots was low. He thought they seemed to lack training. The enemy would not stay and fight, and he thought they must be acting under orders to conserve what was left of the once powerful force "for the next war."

"When you do catch up with them, they are an inferior type of the German airmen we met at the start of the war," the ace declared.

He said the Germans' lack of training was probably traceable to their growing lack of training facilities and planes as Allied strategic bombing chewed up their war plants.

The "Messerschmidt Fund."

"It's got so now that the chaps around the English 'dromes ironically speak of 'The Messerschmidt Fund' — a mythological scheme to raise money to buy the Germans some planes, so we can get some action," he said.

Fumerton said that he had recently had a chance to talk to a group of German prisoners and he found the great majority thought "the jig was up" and were ready to throw in their hands. "They've lost all the old bravado we used to see at the start of the war and they're convinced now that they've lost the war," he said.

He spoke of the air cover over Allied armies in France and said: "We've got such an abundance of crews and planes these days that we can keep the sky full all the time and Jerry just doesn't stand a chance."

He told of the resourcefulness of some of his comrades in developing a technique to combat the German robot bombs— a techinque which he said, had been successful.

New Anti-Robot Technique.

"The lads found they couldn't catch them because they go too fast. But they knew they travelled at about 1,500 feet, so our boys climb above this altitude and wait. You can see the 'doodlebug' exhaust for more than 18 miles and this gives our lads time to make a long dive and the additional speed thus gained gives them a chance of knocking out the bombs."

He thought an eventual development would be anti-robot planes powdered with jet ropulusion which would be fast enough to overtake the bombs and destroy them before they could do any harm. "Of course, I'm pretty sure that it won't be very long before the launching areas are in our hands anyhow," he said.

With "The Moose" were 300 other airmen repatriates who will go through documentary formalities here to-day and then continue to homes throughout Canada for a 30-day leave. Most of them will become instructors; some will remuster from groundcrew to aicrew and a few will continue hospital treatment at air force stations.

Economy May Prove Expensive

Speaking recently at Port Arthur the Minister for Naval Affairs, the Hon. Angus Macdonald, expressed the hope that the Canadian Navy would never again be allowed to sink to the depths which it reached during the twenty years which preceded this war. We hope that Mr. Macdonald's words will be remembered and heeded during the coming years of peace. Canada's Navy has done great work in the present war, founding a reputation for itself which will not be dimmed by the passing of time. But we must bear in mind that our Navy had to be built from virtually nothing; ships, men and organization all had to be found while we were actually at war.

The quickest and likeliest way of sabotaging our Navy in the future is to cut off its supplies of money. Navies cost a great deal to keep up. If, in ten years or so, we should permit a craze for economy to cripple our Navy we shall be penny wise and pound foolish, and we shall regret our action bitterly. Just a century ago the parliament of Great Britain was seized with such a passion for economy, and the London Times expressed itself thus:

> "Economy is a good thing, and a popular thing; but economy has ere now been found to be in the end an expensive virtue; and the popularity which is founded on no other merit than that of having saved money at the expense of national safety or national honour, is as fleeting as it is contemptible. The most expensive warfare in which a country can be engaged is that in which it is involved without adequate preparation".

That could not be better expressed. This war has shown us that Canada needs a Navy, and that Canada is capable of producing a Navy which is worthy of the best traditions of the great Royal Navy. If we keep our Navy in good condition we shall be respected by nations which take it into their heads to become aggressive, and that respect may deter them from provoking us to war. It is much cheaper in the long run to keep our Navy up to date and strong than it is to fight a costly war every quarter of a century.

Desirable, But Improbable

Dr. Robert Newton, the president of the University of Alberta, recently made some interesting remarks on bilingualism in relation to Canadian unity, and he is quoted thus in L'Action Catholique:

> "If Canada is to contribute to post-war reconstruction, it will have to fulfil an indispensable condition first: to realize its own natonal unity. And to bring that about, it will have to solve the problem of bilingualism. We will have to determine then what our system of teaching will be, for this system will have to be completely bilingual. Our prejudices have increased through the fault of our present system. We will never attain national unity if we do not modify it".

In commenting on Dr. Newton's suggestion the Ottawa Citizen has this to say:

> "Without going so far as to demand a completely bilingual educational system, a good beginning toward national unity and understanding as between French and English-speaking Canadians would be a reasonably fluent conversational knowledge of French on the part of all English-speaking citizens.
> "Perhaps the progressive West might be able to institute such teaching, at present largely lacking. And it might be founded in the first instance upon a thorough study on the part of the teachers of that hopeful and helpful, yet profound book, by Frederick Bodmer 'The Loom of Language'. The learning and teaching of French—and perhaps even the learning of English—might lose half its terrors in consequence.
> "And the West, through such teaching, might help greatly in bridging this gap in understanding. Prejudices seem to be harder and faster in the East. And in this way the indispensable condition of which Dr. Newton speaks, the achievement of national unity, may more easily come to be realized".

If we thought that this point of view had any hope whatever of being realised in fact, we should support it joyously. But we do not. Bilingualism would only become common in Canada if it were 'practical'—that is to say, if it were impossible to make money without it. It is unquestionably an advantage for the majority of the people of a country to be in possession of two languages; it broadens their horizons and combats their tendencies toward provincialism. But purely intellectual values have never cut any ice in Canada as a whole, and get scant attention in our universities. We are, partly through necessity, and partly through inertia, a deeply materialistic country, and if the choice lies between preserving a prejudice and doing a little work with our heads, we will hug the prejudice like grim death. Bilingualism is one of the things which Canada needs, but will probably never get.

Shakespeare In Toronto

Toronto is in the only city in Canada which, in any real sense, supports the legitimate theatre, and it supports it valiantly and enthusiastically. The disappearance of the living theatre in Canada was brought about by the depression and the coming of the talkies; the depression struck at all manifestations of art, and for a time it was widely believed that talking movies would supplant the living theatre. But the fact of the matter is that the living theatre, which has existed for at least three thousand years, is unkillable, because the appetite for it exists deep in the heart of mankind.

Toronto has not only a winter theatrical season, but a flourishing summer season as well, and this year the smash-hit of the summer was Shakespeare's tragedy of Hamlet. It was so well received that it ran for two weeks, instead of the usual one, and packed the Royal Alexandra Theatre at every performance. Encouraged by this success, the management is producing The Merchant of Venice. Shakespeare has been an excellent box-office attraction for three hundred years, and apparently he is very much to the taste of Toronto audiences.

But we are sorry that good plays can only be seen in Toronto. The journey from Peterborough is inconvenient and expensive, and consequently few people undertake it. But the appetite for the theatre exists in Peterborough just as it does everywhere else, and we should like to see it satisfied. How long will it be before the smaller cities of Ontario get their theatres back again? Reckoning on a basis of population, we judge that if the Toronto company were to play here for a week, alternating its performances of Hamlet and The Merchant, it would do excellent business. It could certainly play for a week in Kingston, and for a fortnight in Ottawa, Belleville and Brockville might prove to be good 'stands'. And this is only in Eastern Ontario; west of Toronto there are cities enough to make possible a six-weeks' tour at the least.

The company which played in Toronto was predominantly Canadian, and we think that the time has come when this Dominion could support at least one first-rate touring theatrical company, with a repertory of good plays, not necessarily all of them from the classical repertoire. How long will it be before we have such a company? The audience exists already; so does the nucleus of the company; what we lack is a supply of adequate theatres.

NOTE AND COMMENT

This is one of those summers which will be referred to in future as "a good old-fashioned summer". We all live through one, and we never forget it.

A news item tells us that "Canadians have conquered the birthplace of the Conqueror: William, Duke of Normandy, was born at Falaise". And on the wrong side of the blanket, if we remember correctly, a matter upon which he was deeply sensitive.

Prof. Albert Einstein has disavowed the authenticity of much material in the new biography of him written by his former son-in-law. Somehow it makes the distinguished scientist seem much more human to know that though he may understand relativity, relatives present about the same problems to him as to the rest of us.

Other papers are making merry at the expense of Toronto Saturday Night which predicted that 'Conservatives would get 1 and Liberals 11 of the 63 seats in Alberta's election'. Unfortunately neither Liberals nor Conservatives ran any candidates, and there are only 57 seats in the Alberta House. But we approve of the Saturday Night's principle: if you are going to make a boner, make a good one.

The King's Own Scottish Borderers are unable to find enough bagpipes in Scotland to outfit a pipe band. Ottawa Citizen's T.D.F. thinks that unless something is done about this—and right away—our triumphal entry into Berlin might as well be called off, because he would dislike to see the parade headed by Yanks with mouth organs. As far as we are concerned, mouth organs and a brass band will do every nicely—with, of course, a powerful balalaika accompaniment.

Farming News and Views

By HON. DUNCAN MARSHALL

HARVESTING in Ontario made rapid progress during the fine weather. Grain came in quickly and I have heard no complaints about the heads not filling. The soil was in good condition to fill and ripen spring grain and Ontario is promised a generous harvest.

Pastures have suffered from the hot sun but there was a good undergrowth of greenness so the cattle can get a nourishing bite yet. August has long been the difficult month for pastures until alfalfa came to the rescue, and a field of good second crop alfalfa has frequently saved dairy cows from falling of in their milk and beef cattle from "standing still" for a few weeks.

It is a good while since Rudyard Kipling, in referring to the tile drains put down in England, under Danish rule, made this remark about the dry month:

In the midst of drouthy August,
When the bones of meadows show,
You can see the lines they followed,
Fourteen hundred years ago.

It's not that bad this year, however, and we may have a few showers before this is in print.

PROF. J. A. Scott Watson, who represented the British Department of Agriculture at the Embassy in Washington and at the office of the British High Commissioner in Canada, has returned to England and has been making some remarks there in which Canadian farmers have a good deal of interest. Of Canada, he said:—"She was looking for a market for wheat, cheese and bacon. We should need her wheat and in our trade with her wheat would have to be regarded as priority No. 1. In the case of bacon, she expected us to take some of her surplus, and as we should probably want to trade again with Denmark and the Low Countries, it might mean that we should have to have a smaller bacon industry at home."

Referring to the beef cattle surplus in Canada, Professor Scott Watson said he thought they could import quite considerable quantities into England without upsetting the home market. "We are," he said, "at the present time importing beef from Eire, and I see no reason why those cattle should not come from Canada. The same argument applies to dairy heifers. Canada has some very fine animals, tested for T.B. and abortion and they are a better lot than those from Southern Ireland.

THERE have been some complaints, in the pig business, about sows not having a sufficient supply of milk. Some careful experiments have been made by both scientific men and pig raisers, with regard to this trouble. The difficulty in getting enough feed strong in protein has turned attention to mineral deficiencies in growing pigs. The result has been the development of the fact that in the production of milk it is minerals, and particularly lime, that is more important even than protein. On a diet deficient in lime a gilt, or sow, may look in good condition yet fail to milk properly. The results from lime deficiency may work in a progressive fashion and finally bring disastrous results. It is all important to keep up your supply of mineral feeds and 3 or 4 per cent of minerals should be added to meal rations and this ought to be strong in lime, which it will be if both edible bone meal and ground limestone are fed. Growing gilts should have no lime deficiency in their feed.

THERE is a Bill before the British House of Comons for the licensing of boars. This shows a keen interest in the proper type of pig. When this bill passes, no farmer will be permitted to keep a boar for breeding unless it is inspected and licensed. There is considerable discussion as to whether or not the boar must be a pedigree animal. I would think this should be the case without question, as the pedigree is the only positive record of the animal's ancestry, and it is often very valuable to know this so as to form an opinion as to his usefulness as a breeder. If a boar of poor ancestry is licensed, the results may be quite unfortunate.

This question has brought up the difficulty in England with quite a number of breeds in pigs. In a country with a population such as Britain has, there is a demand for a butcher's pig in the large sale of fresh pork. There is no export market whatever as they cannot supply the home market. In Canada it is strictly different. We are large exporters to only one country, Britain, so we must satisfy the customer, and it is better to use the breed that does this for our own home production as well.

PEAS are a good crop in Ontario this year. One extensive grower told me last week he never had a crop with as fine a show of pods as this year. Peas are wanted in England, no grain, except wheat, is so important in feeding the troops. As I have often pointed out before, both livstock and crops are sold by auction in Britain. Some fields of peas were sold in this way in May "down in Somerset," if you please, and a six acre field of "Canadian Early Eclipse brought £400, which would amount to almost $300 per acre. Looks like a nice price. Several lots were sold at similar prices.

INTERESTING letters are coming all the time from soldiers in the battle areas, and not a few are from farmers who are fighting. One from the Far East tells of seeing an Arab ploughing with a three "horse" team which consisted of a camel, a cow and a donkey. The greatest difficulty seemed to be to keep the camel in the furrow as its splay feet were not designed for such a walk. I suppose it never occurred to the Arab to hitch the camel on the "nigh side" and so put him on the land. This soldier remarks that Arab workers move very slowly and take frequent rests, while their implements or "beasts of burden" are not designed for speed. He says he found some very good land in Palestine and where irrigation was used, the climate was excellent for producing good crops.

Men who are with the Forces in India are asking to have Farm Papers and Agricultural literature forwarded to their camps. We at home can scarcely understand what magazines and newspapers of all kind men to men in the active services.

A Board of Governors, for the Ontario Agricultural College, is to be appointed by the Ontario Government, it is announced, to take it out of politics. As a matter of fact, politics never interfered with the O.A.C. except in the case of the personal prejudices of a Minister of Agriculture who cared nothing for Agricultural Education, when more than once the college was made to suffer. This year, for the first time in a long period, there were no two-year students, because no money was provided to advertise or secure students for this course, the most important the college offered. Alberta had a Board of Agricultural Education appointed in 1913 and it did very effective work. Some years later, it disappeared because a Minister of Agriculture never summoned it to meet. That was his method of blocking Agricultural Education. The revival of this Board is now being discussed. What Ontario needs is a revival of the enthusiasm for a better knowledge of science in farming. The O.A.C. has never suffered from politics but it has had a good deal of grief from the whims of some people who controlled the financing of its work.

How London Beat The Germans

(NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE)

AMID the enthusiasm which all must feel for the achievements of the Allied armies, one should not overlook the curious, yet perhaps decisive, military contribution of the civilian population of "London and southern England." When the British people proved during the great blitz of 1940-'41 that they could "take it" they won a significant yet purely negative and passive victory. Under the even more harrowing test of the flying bombs their fortitude has played, however unintentionally, a far more active part in the unfolding of Fate's grand design.

It is hardly too much to say that in the Second Battle of France the Germans have been beaten, first of all, by London's civilians. It now seems quite evident that from the moment when it appeared that the Normandy landing could not be repulsed, the Germans made the flying bombs the foundation of their strategy. They did not imagine that the bombs could win the war, but they obviously did calculate that the horrible pressure which these weapons would bring on the British people would force General Eisenhower to make the "bomb coast" of the Pas de Calais his primary objective.

The calculation had two active consequences. The Germans immobilized in the Pas de Calais defences the troops which might have affected events in Normandy; and when the Normandy break-through could no longer be averted they massed their major forces around the Caen pivot, letting their left wing in Brittany take care of itself. As a means of meeting and crushing an attack upon the Pas de Calais both moves were eminently sound. But this preconceived German idea that the flying bomb platforms were the critical element in the strategy of the campaign had a further result. The American armor reached out around the undefended flank, heading for Paris. The Germans could see at once that by such a course the "military idots" were merely going the long way around toward an objective which could not be directly threatened from before Paris or from anywhere south of the Seine. The obvious counter was to let American armored columns dangle in the vacuum they were invading, for only a military idiot would conform to enemy threats which were meaningless. On the assumption that the Pas de Calais was and had to be the main Allied object, the decision was shrewd.

There was only one trouble with it, which was that the assumption was wrong. Eisenhower was not aiming for the Pas de Calais or even for Paris; he was aiming for the German 7th Army itself, which had thus been tricked into laying itself open to entrapment. But why was he able to do so? Primarily because the people of London and southern England were not being reduced to disorganization and panic by the hideous ordeal they were daily sustaining. They gave the Allied command the foundation on which alone it could design the Cannae now in progress; it was those civilians in their offices and kitchens and bomb shelters who first beat the Germans by affording to Eisenhower and Montgomery, with their life blood, the opportunity to do so. When the histories are written, their contribution must not be forgotten.

Potato Blossoms

No poet is heard extolling the beauty of the potato blossom, and no country makes it her national flower.

Actually the blossoms are lovely enough to be used as a table bouquet, though the leaves are too coarse to be suitable for this purpose....

The pretty cream-coloured flowers with yellow cone-shaped centres have a pleasant fragrance.—Dauphin Herald.

Tribute to British

Prof. D. B. Johnstone-Wallace of Cornell University, who has returned to the United States after 18 months of service with the British Ministry of Agriculture, states that Great Britain "is producing about 75 per cent of her own food requirements." This statement is in itself a tribute to the remarkable way in which the British have been able to maintain and increase their agricultural production, despite the urgent calls upon manpower for arms manufacture and service with the armed forces.—Montreal Gazette.

A Farmer Rings the Bell

To The Herald-News, of Passaic, New Jersey, we are indebted for the news that Lester A. Crandall, a farmer of Dallas, Iowa, recently became so concerned about the national fiscal position that he sent to the Treasury a cheque for $900.27, the sum total of payments made to him over the past six years under the AAA parity program. Mr. Crandall, who is the father of eleven children, included a note in which he said:

"With our Government borrowing from the future at an unprecedented rate, and public debt proved to be the greatest enemy of a free people, I don't feel that I can use this kind of money be used directly in our war effort and not be used be used drectly n our war effort and not be used to corrupt the electorate."

We rise to our feet to salute Mr. Crandall. Millions of people are stirred by the threat to American solvency, but those who are stirred $900 worth would rattle around in an undersized feed-box.—Saturday Evening Post.

Editorial Repartee

The Oakland, Calif., Tribune publishes a photograph of a beauty spot in Oregon under the caption, "A Stretch of California Shoreline." Thereupon the Portland Oregon runs a picture of the San Francisco Golden Gate Bridge and calls it, "A Little Bridge, Built by Boy Scouts, on the Oregon Coast."

In that light-hearted fashion, once upon a time, the newspapers of this land jollied one another as a regular thing. Their readers were believed to enjoy it and to expect it. But that was long ago. In vain we comb the exchanges of this week and last for a parallel instance. They're all talking about subjects like politics and war.

In that far and fondly remembered day the perennial feud between Editor Jones of the Billtown Banner and Editor Smith of the Joyville Javelin was a national sporting event. The fur flew and the language. The dictionary was made to yield up its choicest words of scorn and insult this side of downright libel. An empire falling got less space on the editorial page than "the puerile and poisonous opinions of our esteemed contemporary across the street." —New York Times.

Learning Languages

Though the difficulties of learning languages are real, they are also easy to exaggerate. Generally, the adult has more to show after a three months' course at a commercial institute than an adolescent after three years' study of a foreign language in a British secondary or American high school. One reason for this is that the adult pupil is clear about why he or she is taking the course. Another is that the teacher is usually clear about why he or she is giving it.

This is not the whole story. To sins of omission we have to add all the positive obstacles which early formal education places in the way of those who have no strong personal inclination for liguistic studies.... We have not yet got away from education designed for the sons of gentlemen. Educational Platonism sacrifices realizable proficiency by encouraging the pursuit of unattainable perfection. The child of the immigrant learns a language by blundering his or her way into greater self-confidence. Adults accept the mistakes of children with tolerant good humour, and the genial flow of social intercourse is not interrupted by a barrage of pedantic protestas. The common sense of ordinary parents or customs officials recognises that commonplace communication unhampered by the sting of grammatical guilt must precede real progress in the arts of verbal precision. Most of us could learn languages more easily if we could learn to forgive our own linqustic trespasses.—From "The Loom of Language," by Frederick Bodmer.

A Bible Message

All thy works shall praise thee, O Lord; and thy saints shall bless thee. They shall speak of the glory of thy kingdom, and talk of thy power; to make known to the sons of men his mighty acts, and the glorious majesty of his kingdom. (Ps. 145: 10-12.)

And the city had no need of the sun, neither of the moon, to shine in it, for the glory of God did lighten it, and the Lamb is the light thereof. And the nations of them which are saved shall walk in the light of it: and the kings of the earth do bring their glory and honour into it.

Letter To The Editor

DANCE HALL IN SOUTH END

Sir,—Your paper of Wednesday, August 16th contained an acount of our City Council's activities under the heading "Council Unenthusiast over Dance Hall Plan." It is to be sincere hoped for the sake of property owners in the Lansdowne-Morrow street district that the council will remain unenthusiastic.

Peterborough has too many districts that have been spoiled by the indiscriminate building this, that and the other. One rather dreads having a vacant lot, or an old house, near for fe of what might spring up at one. However during this last year we breathed a little easier our council showed signs that they were becoming conscious of the need of proper town planning. True, it is a little late to do any good the central part of the town, but at least we the suburbs were to be spared.

As Ald. Bradburn pointed out, there are so nice homes in this district. I should hate think of the same district if a dance hall permitted. Cars parked in front of our homes car doors banging half the night, papers litter over the lawns, and very little sleep for oursel or our children. If the building in question worth $100,000 it would still be a nuisance.

If there is any possibility that this permit be granted let every alderman ask himself "H would I like it near my home?"

I have lived in this district for nearly thi years. I own my own home and have spen few thousand dollars, to say nothing of the h work, improving it. Our home means as m to us as the homes of the more fortunate liv in "restricted areas." Let the city fathers us to keep them "homes."

There is already one dance hall in the so end so there really cannot be a very great n for another.

Thanking you most sincerely for the privi of voicing my opinion. Yours truly,

Nazis Claim Baltic Trap Broken

Russians Gain On Wide Front Beyond Warsaw City

LONDON, Aug. 21.—(CP).—The German communique said to-day that Nazi tank formations pushing west of Tukums in Latvia had crashed through the Soviet corridor to the Baltic west of Riga and "re-established temporarily lost contact" with the 30 or so German divisions in Latvia and Estonia.

The Russians at midnight admitted local reverses in that sector, but did not indicate the corridor had been cut. The force of up to 300,000 Germans were severed from land communications several weeks ago. The Germans said a naval flotilla aided the tank force.

The Germans asserted also the Russians had driven a third bridgehead across the broad Vistula river west of Kazimierz, 75 miles south of Warsaw and 35 miles east of Radom.

In the Warsaw sector, meanwhile, Russian troops have driven closer to Praga, suburb to the east of the city, and have captured some vital positions to the north-east, front dispatches said.

Marshal Ivan S. Konev's 1st Ukraine Army, thrusting up the west bank of the Vistula, liquidated the trapped Germans north of Sandomirez. "As the enemy refused to surrender, most of the encircled enemy troops were killed," theRussian war buletin declared.

The victory freed Konev's forces for a posible drive either south-west on the rail fortress of Krakow, or north toward Warsaw, or directly west across the Polish plains toard German Silesia, which would snap the Polish capital's communication lines.

The slight Red Army reverse occurred in the Jelgava sector near the Gulf of Riga, where 144 German tanks and self-propelled guns were reported knocked out.

In Estonia, Gen. Ivan Maslennikov's 3rd Baltic Army, capturing more than 150 populated places, drove to within seven miles of Tartu on the Tallinn-Riga railway.

South of the Estonian sector in Latvia Gen. Andrei Yeremenko's 2nd Baltic Army, sweeping up more than 70 places, advanced to within 55 miles east of Riga with the capture of Erglin on the Madona-Riga railway.

Super Bombers Batter 4 Jap Cities

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21 —(AP)— Bombers in the second wave of Sunday's double-strike at Japan reported today sighting the flames of destruction wrought by the daylight flight of Superfortresses while still a half-hour flight from industrial targets on Kyushu.

Four of the huge bombers were reported lost to enemy action in the co-ordinated day and night attacks by the 20th Air Force.

The important Yawata industrial section was the target of both flights.

The bombers shot down 15 enemy fighters, while 13 were probably destroyed and 12 damaged.

The Tokyo radio, as usual, minimized the efforts of the raids, terming damage "negligible" and claiming 23 planes out of a total of 80 were destroyed in the first raid. It also asserted that 20 parachuting American airmen were captured. The Japanese broadcasts said the first raid was against four cities on Kyushu, the southernmost main island, naming Fukuoka, Mojo, Kokura and Yawata. The latter, site of numerous heavy industries, has been hit twice previously.

Possibility that a big naval base also was a target was seen in the Japanese statement that both raids were directed at "Northern Kyushu and the western Choguku district." The office of War Information identified "Choguku" as Shikoku, a naval base on the main island of Honshu. The German D.N.B. agency, which relayed the Japanees broadcast, however, said it was the Island of Shikuku, east of Yyushu.

The 20th Air Force, noting that the initial attack was the first daylight operation over Japan proper since the attack on Tokyo headed by Lt.-Gen. James Doolittle April 18, 1942, had no information on results of the second foray.

Planes Rake Germans Along Seine

Gather 1,200 Barges On The River To Effect Retreat

By GLADWIN HILL
Associated Press Staff Writer

LONDON, Aug. 21.—(AP).—R. A. F. Mosquitoes and Mitchells raced up and down the Seine river throughout last night, bombing and strafing Nazi river bank troop concentrations and barges struggling across the 200 yard water barrier which impedes Germans fleeing Allied armies in France.

The Nazis' four principal crossings at Elbeuf, Duclair, Caudebec and Quillebeuf, were hammered in flare-lit tree-top level attacks as the record scourge from the skies to-day swept into its fifth day, despite handicapping weather.

A line of barges extending for three-fourths of a mile and reportedly salvaged from the abortive 1940 campaign to invade England were blasted near Quillebeuf. American fighter bombers in daylight and evening attacks knocked out 20 others.

A simultaneous night-long attack on the belt west of the Seine, through which the beaten Nazis are streaming from the Falaise trap, knocked out 136 vehicles and 16 tanks to bring the day's total for both the R.A.F. and R.C.A.F., and the U.S. Army Air Force to more than 350 vehicles and nearly 100 tanks.

The original total barge force upon which the Germans are depending for their miniature Dunkerque over the bridgeless river was estimated at 1,200 to 1,500. The Germans also have used hinged pontoon bridges, which swing back against the shrub-shrouded river in the daytime, but these are very susceptitble to bombing.

The attacks are taking place a scant 25 miles down the Seine from the American bridgehead.

Canadian Spitfire and Typhoon pilots destroyed or damaged more than 400 German vehicles in furious week-end attacks on the remnants of the German 7th Army.

In addition, the U.S. 9th Air Force fighter bombers and the 8th Fighter Command reported that the 10-day score up to Saturday night of German transport destroyed or damaged included 979 locomotives, 8,500 railroad cars, 1,253 road vehicles and 281 armored vehicles.

R.A.F. figher bombers alone reported 114 tanks destroyed or damaged yesterday.

Four squadrons of rocket firing Typhoons did a neat precision job, breaking up the German effort to smash out of the Falaise trap with an assault by 20 to 30 massed tanks toward Trun.

Carefully avoiding the almost interlocked Allied ground columns, the Tyhpoons destroyed 12 tanks and damaged eight more.

The Germans threw in light aerial opposition. Nine of thier planes were shot down, while the R.A.F. lost four from 861 sorties.

LONDON, Aug. 21—(AP)— Pte. Richard Martin of Shinnston, W. Va., is nicknamed "Rabbit's Foot." In Tunisia someone stole his jeep. In France he thumbed a ride in a jeep, decided the seat felt familiar, and scratched the paint off a certain place on the hood. There were his name and serial number, proving it was his old machine.

37 Per Cent 18 To 45 Now In Army

OTTAWA, Aug. 21 — (CP) — Intake from the nine provinces into the Canadian Armed forces from the start of the war to March 31, 1944, totalled 913,092 or 36.9 per cent. of the estimated 2,474,000 men in the military 18-to-45 years age groups, it was disclosed today by Wartime Information Board.

In addition 15,226 was taken in outside Canada, thus bringing the total intake to 938,318.

The intake figure does not take discharges into consideration and must not be confused with the total strength of the armed forces, 756,900, June 30.

Previous figures have been broken down by military districts, but today's were the first released by Province. They showed Nova Scotia with a total intake of 56,128 of its 123,000 military age males leading the list with a percentage of 45.6.

Quebec with a total of 154,503 of its 699,000 military age males trailed with a percentage of 22.1.

Behind Nova Scotia came following provinces:— British Columbia, 44.4 per cent; New Brunswick, 43.8 per cent; Manitoba, 43.5 per cent; Ontario, 43.3 per cent; Alberta, 40.1 per cent; Saskatchewan, 38.9 per cent Prince Edward Island, 38.4 per cent.

A study of the army figures showed that in the two biggest provinces, Ontario, with a military age population of 830,000 had 209,639 volunteers while Quebec, with 699,000 eligible males had 80,624.

Quebec to in 46,443 draftees compared to Ontario's 41,502.

The compilation also showed that in the period since Sept. 30, 1943, when the last compilation was dated the per centage of Canadian manhood of military age drawn into but not necessarily remained in the forces moved up from 35.1 to 36.9. The new All-Canada total of 913,092 compared with the previous total of 867,590.

Bag 21 Planes

ROME, August 21 —(CP) — Mediterranean air force planes shot down 21 enemy planes in the week ending Saturday, despite the opening of full-scale invasion. The low score was not brought about by bad marksmanship, but by the lack of German planes in the area.

Casualties For Canada Total 46,394

8,721 Added In June Air Force Have 9,475 Dead

OTTAWA, Aug. 21.—(CP).—Canadian war casualties jumped 8,721 in the June period to raise the war total to 46,394 made up of 18,821 dead, 5,311 missing, 5,365 prisoners or internees and 16,897 wounded, according to official figures released to-day by War-time Information Board.

A breakdown of the 8,721 figure showed the army, in action in France and Italy, had suffered the greatest casualty increase—7,782; with the R.C.A.F. suffering an increase of 892 and the navy 47.

The breakdown showed that Canada in the junior period suffered 1,799 dead, 1,646 missing, 229 prisoners or interned and 5,047 wounded.

The war total for the army and air force up to May 31 and the navy up to May 29 was previously announced as 37,673. To-day's announcement covers all theatres for the army up to June 30 and fighting in Normandy from June 6 to July 20, the navy up to June 26 and the aair force up to June 30.

The army suffered the biggest increase with a total of 29,471 casualties, compared with the previously announced total of 21,689.

The army total was made up of 8,187 dead, 1,726 missing, 3,731 prisoners or internees and 15,827 wounded.

Navy casualties, not including 81 prisoners taken after the destroyer Athabaskan was sunk near the French coast, total 1,714 made up of 1,159 dead, 335 missing, eight prisoners or internees and 212 wounded.

Air force casualties total 15,209 made up of 9,475 dead, 3,250 missing, 1,626 prisoners or internees and 858 wounded.

The last compilation giving the 37,673 total was made up of 1,667 casualties for the navy, 21,689 for the army and 14,317 for the air force.

Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Forces has announced the Canadian losses in Normandy from June 6 to July 20 as 6,545 made up of 919 dead, 4,354 wounded, 1,272 missing.

Here is the latest table for the three armed forces:

25,000 Germans Surrender Trapped In Normandy Bulge

Patton's 3rd Army Takes 49,650 In Drive On Paris

ALLIED SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, Aug. 21 — (CP) — American tanks had thrust into sectors on opposite sides of Paris today to the east, Canadians were driving towards the mouth of the Seine, and Gen. Montgomery told Allied troops the enemy in north-western France had suffered a defeat "definite, complete and decisive" with the end of the war "in sight."

The Americans had established a firm bridgehead across the Seine at Mantes, 25 miles nohtwest of the capital, where they threatened a sweep toward the rocket coast. But they were meeting heavy resistance in that direction.

Tanks had probed as far as Corbeil Melun and Fontainebleau on a 20-mile front 15 to 35 miles southeast of Paris where they were pointing toward the First Great War battlefields of Soissons, Reims and the Marne northeast of Paris.

ON THE BRITISH FRONT IN FRANCE — (AP). — An estimated 25,000 German prisoners had been captured in the Normandy bulge battle around the Falaise-Argentan gap by 6:45 p. m. to-night (12:45 p.m. EDT.)

They were fighting in the vicinity of Versailles, the western suburb of Paris and were meeting only negligible resistance, while travellers from the capital itself told of a rising wave of violence in which French underground forces anticipated the hour of liberation.

Already, it was announced that Gen. Patton's 3rd Army in its sweep to Paris had captured 49,650 Germans, killed 11,025 and wounded 48,900—a total of 109,575.

Now the invasion of the territory north of the Seine at Mantes threatened new destruction of Germans caught in a 75-mile-long corner below the bridgeless River.

"The end of the war is in sight. Let us finish of the business in record time," Gen. Montgomery declared in his message in which he said there were fresh surprises in store for the enemy.

At least 10,000 men from the combat elements of possibly 18 enemy divisions were caught in a succession of pockets west and east of Falaise and the total bag of German killed and captured was likely to total 36,000—equal to the number captured in the Cotentin peninsula.

Being Cut to Pieces

While the Germans made wild efforts to break out of the original pocket, now reduced to an area about six by 10 miles, British, Canadian and American forces were cutting it to pieces.

Occagnes, Sentilly, Bailleul and Goulet, all about three miles north of Argentan, were captured in these slashes.

Troops Enter Toulon

ROME, Aug. 21.—(AP. —American forces have captured Valensole, 50 airline miles north of Toulon. The U.S. 7th Army has entered Toulon.

Forward elements are nine miles from Marseille.

On the coast east of Toulon the French captured the enemy stronghold of Redon and Hotel De Golf, a mile from Hyeres.

Marseille, Toulon Isolated In Lightning Drive

By NOLAND NORGAARD,
Associated Press Staff Writer.

ROME, August 21 — (AP) —Hard driving French troops virtually encircled Toulon, breaking through to within three miles of the naval base while American infantry, within 15 airline miles of Marseille, fanned out to-day through the Durance valley and headed for the Rhone against disorganized enemy resistance.

The Americans sped forward on both sides of the town of Pertuis, 11 miles north of Aix-en-Provence across the Durance river, and joined French patriots who had surrounded Nazi troops within the town.

Another of Maj.-Gen. Alexander M. Patch's Allied columns charged on several miles to the north-east of Aix, key junction of seven highways 15 miles north of Marseille. Another unit was last reported in the outskirts of Aix and to-day possibly had completed occupation of that town.

Navy Shells Port.

(The German radio said Allied warships shelled Toulon Sunday. It claimed hits on one of "several" battleships and one of nine cruisers in the attacking fleet by Nazi batteries, which, it was claimed, also struck a destroyer and torpedo boat.)

A dispatch from Joseph Dynan, Associated Press Correspondent with French troops driving on Toulon, said French commandos, joined with patriot forces and former members of the French navy, were dominating the Faron area just north of Toulon.

The Nazi garrison in Hyeres, about 8½ miles east of Toulon, was virtually isolated, Dynan said.

The Germans have given no indication of strength or determination to make a real stand in or near the mouth of the Rhone valley.

Disorganization among the Germans indicated the Nazi command might be resigned to eventual liquidation of the entire area.

The Eastern sector of the bridgehead facing towards Cannes and the Italian frontier was reported "mostly stable," without reference to new gains.

In most sectors of the rapidly expanding southern France bridge-

Allied Cruisers Shelling Bayonne Area

IRUN, Spain, Aug. 21 (AP)—Three light Allied cruisers began shelling almost non-existent German defences in the Bayonne area of southern France before dawn today.

Spanish residents of this border town 18 miles to the south had a grandstand seat.

The cruisers which first patrolled the coast south of Bordeaux evidently were feeling out German defences, but drew only an occasional reply from two or three coastal batteries near Bayonne.

South of Bayonne Hitler's so-called Atlantic wall no longer exists, for the Germans pulled out last night, leaving their defence works in ruins.

An American motorised column meanwhile was reported to have passed through Angouleme, 130 miles south of Nantes on the Loire River and 165 miles northwest of Bayonne, without encountering resistance on its way toward the Spanish frontier.

The three Allied warships were plainly visible from the Spanish coast when the fog veiling their approach had lifted.

They shelled the coastline methodically for more than half an hour. Splashes of shells in the water around the cruisers from the light German counter-fire were also seen, but no hits were observed.

The warships ceased fire about 7:45 a.m. and disappeared northward.

Churchill Fires Gun In Italy

ROME, Aug. 21 (AP)—Prime Minister Churchill personally shot a big American gun at two German cannon positions north of Pisa, it was disclosed today.

After he pulled the lanyard, the shell fell 200 yards short of the target. A gunnery officer corrected the elevation and two rounds later, both enemy guns were destroyed. An artillery spotter flying overhead reported fires and explosions at both gunpits.

Mr. Churchill's personal participation in the war occurred during a recent visit to the 5th Army front.

Ravens Imitate

DETROIT, Aug. 21 — (AP) — The Aleutian Islands, says Lt.- Col. Floyd Pfeiffer, home on leave, are a "strange and fascinating country."

For example, there are the Ravens with a wingspread exceeding a man's reach and a penchant for imitating airplanes.

Before American planes arrived, Col. Pfeifer said, the Ravens acted just as you'd expect a bird to act.

"But after watching those planes," he said, "they learned to run for a take-off. They swooped, buzzed the field, zoomed around and looped the loop."

Rocket Guns Combat Robots

LONDON, August 21 —(CP) — Britons, counting dozens of dea and injured after sharp week-en flying bomb attacks, found cheer to day in news that rocket guns we being used successfully against th robots.

British hope of relief from flyin bombs was heightened by prospec that swift Allied advances in wes ern France soon might drive t Nazis from some of their launchi sites.

Both British coastal and aer observers expressed belief so launching platforms already h been forced to move farther nort east.

Brazilian Unit Fights In Italy

ROME, Aug. 21 —(AP)—Polish forces on the Adriatic have advanced seven miles to within 12 miles of the Italian port of Pesaro, where eastern outposts of the Germans' trans-peninsular Gothic Line are reputed to begin.

The Germans pulled their defences behind the Metauro River, Gen. Alexander's headquarters announced. In the advance, the Poles captured Cerasa.

Eighth Army patrols made deep penetrations east of Florence, between the Upper Arno and Tiber Rivers.

West of Florence, the Germans shelled 8th Army positions south of the Arno River. Conditions within Florence were reported "somewhat quieter." Food and other provisions poured in for the citizens.

It was disclosed for the first time that the Brazilian expedtiionary force under Maj. Gen. Moraes de Mascarenhas had joined the Allied 5th Army in the area extending inland from the Tyrrhenian Sea south of Pisa.

Off Target Bombing Common In Italy

TORONTO, Aug. 21 — (CP) — Veterans of the Sicilian and Italian campaign returned to Toronto yesterday and said there were instances in that theatre of Allied bombs falling on Allied troops.

Sgt. J. W. Smith of Toronto told of crouching in a trench during Cassino while Allied bombs fell around him and Capt. A. W. Hamilton, Dover, Ont., told of being bombed by three Allied planes in Sicily. Smith said "it wasn't very bad" and Capt. Hamilton said of his bombing that "it was over in a second and there were no casualties."

Pte. Earl Fare of St. Catharines said "it happened quite a few times in Sicily" and one regiment "got it pretty badly in Italy."

Used Hay

ARTHUR, Ont., Aug. 21 (CP)—A tip to tire-troubled motorists is held in the experience of two young New Hamburg motorists on their way home from a dance, after fixing three flats in their four tires, found one tube was ruined, they decided to pack the tire casing with hay. It worked and they got home without further tire trouble.

Victory Decisive In Normandy

WITH BRITISH TROOPS IN FRANCE, August 21 — (CP). — Gen. Montgomery told his troops to-night:

"The end of the war is in sight. Let us finish off the business in record time."

Gen. Montgomery's special message said the German armies in North-west France had suffered a decisive defeat.

"As an Allied Commander and over-all Commander of the Land Forces under Gen. Eisenhower, I can praise the fighting qualities and tenacity in battle of the British, Canadian and Polish troops on the eastern flank," he declared. "They fought the enemy relentlessly and took a heavy toll of him during the whole days of this great battle."

Gen. Montgomery voiced also "high admiration of the brave fighting qualities of the American Armies in the opening stages of the break-in battle of July 25 and the following days."

He said "It matters little who did this or that," adding, "All that matters is that it was well and truly done by the whole Allied team."

"There will be many surprises in store for the fleeing remnants," he asserted.

Montgomery said the victory had been "definite, complete and decisive."

Hull Says Force Imperative If World Peace To Be Held

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21 —(CP)— State Secretary Cordell Hull opened the history-making post-war security talks today with a declaration the organization of peace must be backed by force "available promptly, in adequate measure, and with certainty."

His assertion in a prepared address indicated the United States is entering the four-power meetings with plans for strong commitments on the use of its own forces in support of world security for generations to come.

Sir Alexander Cadogan, British representative, appealed for the British, American, Soviet and Chinese governments to act speedily in erecting a world peace structure in order to get some of it working before the war ends.

He evidently referred to the British proposal that at a minimum the big-four nations should band themselves together now in some sort of provisional council until a permanent organization can be formed.

The delegates were gathered at Dumbarton Oaks, historic Washington estate, where all their meetings are to be held.

Speaking for President Roosevelt as well as himself, Mr. Hull as official host opened the first session—the first international meeting to block out a security organization since formal work started on the ill-fated League of Nations 25 years ago. Sir Alexander and Ambassador Andrie Gromyko, Soviet representative, spoke in response to Mr. Hull, who then turned over the leading American role to Under-Secretary of State Edward R. Stettinius, Jr.

Both the British and American spokesmen sought to reassure small countries as to their position in the projected world agency.

Sir Alexander said of the large-and-small countries issue that our problem is to construct a machine which will give to each of them

Pilots Destroy 400 Vehicles

By DOUGLAS AMARON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON, Aug. 21—(CP Cable).— Canadian Spitfire and Typhoon pilots destroyed and damaged more than 400 German vehicles in week-end attacks on the shattered German 7th Army.

Poor flying conditions limited operations yesterday but reports from Normandy bases said 50 vehicles were hit during two morning sorties by airmen from the Spitfire wing commanded by Group Capt. W. R. MacBrien of Ottawa and Toronto.

Yesterday's successes in the area west of Bernay were scored by Wolfe and Red Indian squadrons.

The Wolfe squadron left three vehicles in flames, 13 smoking and 10 damaged while the Red Indian marked up six flames, eight smokers and 10 damaged. PO. O. H. Levere, Belleville, Ont., hit another.

Group Capt. MacBrien's wing shot up 209 vehicles Saturday and fliers in a wing led by Wing Cmdr. Dal Russel, Montreal, 180.

A breakdown of figures showed for MacBrien's wing: 59 flamers, 71 smokers, 80 damaged; for Russel's: 59 flamers, 34 smokers, 87 damaged. Five tanks and several armored vehicles also were hit.

In Saturday's forays the Red Indian squadron destroyed 23 vehicles, left 47 smoking and 41 damaged. Flt.-Lt. B. T. Gilmour, St. Thomas, Ont., and FO. M. Flood, Hearst, Ont., each made eight successful attacks on vehicles.

Lie Detector Traps Negro

Faces Murder Count At Niagara Falls

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y., Aug. 21 (AP)—Robert W. Barnes, 34-year-old negro charged with first-degree murder in connection with the strangle-slaying of Mrs. Miriam Kennedy, 25, has been ordered held for the September Grand Jury.

He waived preliminary examination when arraigned today before Police Justice Francis L. Giles. Police Supt. Maritn T. Considine has declared Barnes admitted the slaying following the lie detector tests at Buffalo police headquarters Friday.

Mrs. Kennedy's body was discovered in her home at the Pineacres Federal Housing Project, August 4. Her throat bore finger marks and a flimsy undergarment was bound tightly around her neck. She was the mother of three children.

Niagara County district attorney John Marsh said Barnes continued to deny any connection with the unsolved strangle-slaying of Mrs. Dorothea Newgarden, 40, mother of eight. Her body was found in a vacant house at the propect February 12, about two blocks from the Kennedy home.

Canadian Units Turn Back Hun Tank Push

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press War Correspondent

WITH THE 1ST CANADIAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Aug. 21 (CP Cable)—A frantic, disorganized attempt to break through the Canadian-Polish barrier blocking the Trun gap has been smashed by the combined efforts of 1st Canadian Army troops and artillery.

The German thrust was made yesterday with a hastily scraped-together force which tried to break open the trap between Trun and Chambois on a front about a mile wide. About 30 tanks lent their weight to the Nazi punch.

Enemy losses piled up as Canuck artillery and rocket-firing R.A.F. Typhoons poured devastating fire on their milling quarry. A German corps commander was captured by Polish forces and prisoners taken by the Canadian Army yesterday numbered at least 2,300, to bring the bag to between 4,000 and 5,000 since Falaise fell four days ago.

Plenty Remains

It was stated at Canadian Army headquarters that there still is "quite a lote of stuff in the trap" and that the enemy still is trying to force his way out.

The German force which tried the break-through had support for their effort from the other side of the barrier where a tank-led Nazi force moved in to meet them.

This outside force massed north-east of Trun, near Vimoutiers, and was taken on by the R.A.F. who accounted for 13 tanks there. The going was what a senior Canadian officer called "sticky" for a while, but the effort finally was smashed and "nothing substantial got out."

While spectacular gains were lacking on the Canadian front, British troops under Lt.-Gen. Crerar's command hammered to within three miles of the important communications centre of Lisieux on a front between Les Mesnil Mauger and Le Mesnil Durand.

The 1st Canadian Army is now across the Vil River in real force, heading toward the Seine. Livarot was captured and Canadian armor now is providing a real threat to Lisieux.

Roads Mucky

Heavy rain which began during the night, turning the roads into muck, could only slow the Canadian advances and work to the Germans' advantage.

But Canadian artillery in open-sight firing from positions gained through the capture of Falaise was slaughtering German troops herded along the Falaise-Chambois barrier like frightened cattle in a pen.

"The job of liquidating the pocket is continuing. It is being reduced hourly," said a Canadian officer.

To the R.A.F. the Nazis lost 49 tanks damaged or destroyed yesterday and about 300 vehicles. Eleven German planes were shot down and eleven more damaged during daylight, and one was destroyed when it came over to attack shipping during the night.

Robombs Harass English Cities

LONDON, Aug. 21 (Monday) — (CP) — After a lull of several hours, the Germans fired more flying bombs on Southern England today adding to Sunday's casualties, which included at least 11 killed, two of them Canadian soldiers.

Meanwhile, it was disclosed, there has been a drop in war production in some sections of the London area and the Government is moving some subcontract plants to safer areas. The Ministry of Aircraft Production said the decline was "not serious", but it urged other smaller plants and their workers to move also and maintain their maximum output.

On the other hand, London's legitimate theatre is making a comeback. During the height of the robot bombing some of the theatres were hit and many shows closed or took to the road. Now more and more theatres are reopening.

Flying bombs Sunday wrecked blocks of tenements.

21 R.A.F. Planes Lost In Raid

LONDON, Aug. 21 (CP) — Great fires raged in Warsaw when R.A.F. heavy bombers—implementing British policy to help any one who fights the Germans—roared over and dropped guns and ammunition to patriots fighting the occupation forces in the Polish capital, it was disclosed Saturday.

The planes, 21 of which have been destroyed by German gunners within the city, flew from Mediterranean bases on a 1,750-mile round-trip flight—a perilous adventure which Britain undertook, although her Russian ally is at Warsaw's outskirts.

While there is no official comment, British policy appears to be the answer to the anomalous situation, for the nearby Russians have disavowed Gen. Bor's forces in Warsaw as creatures of the Polish Government in London, which the Soviet Union refuses to recognize.

The British, South African and Polish crews have flown 100 bombers on these missions, not only facing the hazard of German night fighters, but coming in over Warsaw low and slow in order to drop the badly needed arms accurately and offering easy targets for ground gunners.

Presentations Made To Two Of Kinsmen

MARMORA, Aug. 20—(ENS)—A special meeting of the Marmora Kinsmen Club which took the form of a dinner meeting was held at the Royal Hotel Thursday evening. The purpose of the dinner was a presentation to be made to Past President Wally Hilton who is shortly leaving the district.

President "Mike" Corrigan presented Mr. Hilton with a pen and pencil set and in a short speech praised the guest of honor for his strong support of the work of the Club.

William Graham another member who is shortly leaving the district was given a billfold. Included in the gathering was Vie Knowles of Montreal, a former member of the club who has been renewing acquaintances in the district. Adjournment was later made to the residence of Immediate Past President Gregory Murray where a social evening was spent.

Thieves Take $49 From Louis Billiards

Supposerly unlocking a rear window while in playing billiards over the week-end, a thief or thieves stole $49 from the Louis Billiards Store on George street. William C. Inese, proprietor, told the Examiner to-day a quantity of cigarettes were stolen. To-day, police reported they had made no arrests as yet.

Scratches on the boarding below the window indicate more than one thief entered that way, and the fact neither the lock or the clasp holding the window were broken, proves the thieves paved the way for the robbery the previous evening, it is believed.

The thieves evidently were familiar with the billiard shop, and $12 was taken from a cash register behind the cigarette counter, and the remaining money was stolen from a locked drawer. When they couldn't force the lock on the drawer, the intruders pulled out the drawer immediately beneath, and smashed the bottom from the top drawer, where the money was concealed in the bottom of a cigar box.

Only 60 Nazi Divisions In All Balkans

BARI, Italy, Aug. 21—(AP). — A German force of fewer than 60 divisions, most of them far under strength, is holding the entire Balkans, including the front facing Russia, an examination of the most recent reports reaching this listening post indicated Sunday.

The Germans have strung out two-thirds of this number across 600 mountainous miles between the Black Sea and Krakow in Poland, dispersed about a dozen divisions south of the Danube and concentrated the remained in Central and Northwestern Yugoslavia.

These troops constitute the minimum with which Germany can hope to retain the Balkans, it is believed here, and withdrawals to help meet the new Allied invasion are unlikely.

The enemy's transportation situation has become critical, principally because of Allied bombing operations against the installations at Ploesti and elsewhere.

The German Air Force, bolstered by Romanian, Hungarian and Bulgarian units, probably is able to muster 800 to 1,000 fighter planes of all types in the Balkans. They are based principally in Eastern Austria, Hungary, Romania and Eastern Yugoslavia for defence of refineries, freight yards and war factories.

A Mixture.

Most of the German divisions in the south have been saturated with foreign troops—Poles, Czechs, Slovaks, Serbs and Armenians — a probable indication the Reich means to jettison them whenever it becomes necessary. Field Marshal Gen. Maximillian von Weichs, who directs all operations in Yugoslavia, Albania and Greece, is believed to have no more than five or six all-German divisions left in his command.

The burden of holding the Carpathians against Soviet forces south of Krakow, 200 miles from Vienna and 180 miles from Budapest, has been placed on the Hungarian Army. It is believed to have 12 of its 17 or so divisions in the line. Only three German divisions, one of them a cavalry outfit of 10,000 to 12,000 men, are known to be in this region.

Romania, which is already estimated to have lost 1,500,000 men in Russia, is believed to have 11 of its 30 under-strength divisions on the Soviet front. Others are massed in the rear to defend the narrow gap between Galatz and Transylvania — also the gateway to Bucharest and the Ploesti oil fields.

head, the 7th Army followed the effective tactics of by-passing enemy strong points.

The count of prisoners passed the 14,000 mark and more were coming in hourly.

Captures Staff.

Among the newest captives were Maj-Gen. Hans Schubert and his staff of six officers and 30 men. Schubert, chief of a district liaison staff until June, was chief administrative officer for south-west France with headquarters at Toulouse.

The Nazis defending Toulon were putting up a stiff battle against French infantry and armor on approaches to the city from the east and north.

But other 7th Army units swinging around to the northwestward closed in toward the coast, threatening to cut off the last escape route westward toward Marseille.

French troops captured Le Revest, three miles directly north of Toulon, and the adjacent height of Monte Caume. They threatened to cut highway eight —one of the enemy's major escape routes.

Farther north-west, other French units penetrated to the vicinity of Cuges, on highway eight, 6½ miles from the coastal road linking Toulon and Marseille. Once they are astride that route the Nazis in Toulon would have no alternatives to surrender or annihilation.

American forces advanced 15 miles from Rians and linked up with the French patriots surrounding the enemy garrison in Pertuis, a town of 5,000 26 miles north of Marseille. By yesterday afternoon, Gen. Patch's speeding columns were less than 40 miles from Avignon and the Rhone river.

Southwest of St. Maximin, the Allies rolled through the vicinity of St. Zacharie. This force was reported last to be within 15 air miles east-north-east of Marseille.

Lose Highways

With the Allies in the outskirts of Aix-en-Provence, the Germans had lost all hope of effective use of the network of highways north o Marseille and or withdrawal toward Avignon. To escape the closing trap, they could hope only to pull out rom Marseille along two roads west and north-west to Arle, then northward up the Rhone Valley.

An Allied spokesman, commenting on the situation at Toulon, said: "The enemy has given evidence of being determined to defend it stubbornly." The villages of Meounes, Les Montrieux and Sollies-Toucas to the northeast have been occupied.

Allied medium, light and fighter bombers methodically destroyed enemy gun positions, railway rolling stock and bridges behind the battle lines. Five locomotives, 36 motor vehicles, 20 railcars and two barges were included in yesterday's toll.

Allied headquarters disclosed meanwhile, that a first hand survey of the invasion area had been made by Lt.-Gen. Jacob L. Devers, deputy commander-in-chief in the Mediterranan and commander of Americ forces in that theatre; Lt.-Gen. Ira C. Eaker, Allied air commander; and Maj.-Gen. John K. Cannon, commander of the U.S. 12th air force.

the responsibilities commensurate with its powers."

Sir Alexander said he thought the Dumbarton meeting should concentrate on principles rather than details of organization and so keep constantly in mind that it is not the exact kind of organization so much as the will of countries to cooperate which in the end will ensure peace.

Peace Not Enough

He said: "We must remember that peace, in the negative sense of absence of war, is not enough. No world system can endure unless it permits of growth and unless it tends to promote the well-being of humanity as a whole. Hence, however, we may fit the various non-political world organizations into our general system, we must attempt to discover means whereby the expanding force of modern scientific discoveries is turned into constructive rather than into destructive channels . . ."

"Let us never forget that acute discomfort in the economic and social field will constantly hamper the smooth operation of the best political plans. In other words, freedom from fear and freedom from want must, so far as human agency can contrive it, move forward simultaneously."

He said the "working party" from the United Kingdom was recruited from the official level and said it followed that "so far as we are concerned, these talks are necessarily exploratory and non-committal."

"It cannot be emphasized too often," Mr. Hull said, "that the principle of sovereign equality of all peace-loving states, irrespective of size and strength, as partners in a system of order under law, must constitute the foundation of any future international organization or the maintenance of peace and security."

Unity Of Effort

Mr. Hull said that it is unity of effort which is now driving the United Nations to victory and only through continued unity can the peace-loving nations "assure for themselves security and orderly progress with freedom and justice."

He continued: "It is generally agreed that any peace and security organization would surely fail unless backed by force to be used ultimately in case of failure of all other means for the maintenance of peace.

"That force must be available promptly, in adequate measure, and with certainty. The nations of the world should maintain, according to their capacities, sufficient forces available for joint action when necessary to prevent breaches of the peace."

Mr. Hull said it was the American intention that after the Anglo-American-Chinese talks immediately following these sessions with the Russians, the conclusions reached at Dumbarton Oaks should be circulated among all the United Nations and "as soon as practicable" should be given out to all people "for public study and debate."

MORE ABOUT—
Patton's 3rd Army

The Canadians were busily engaged in punching a hole in the Seine corner to the east where new pockets might be carved out. They crossed the Touques River in a two-mile advance just south of Lisieux.
MORE

Madly charging into a Canadian band of steel, the Germans made violent efforts yesterday to break out of a mid-Normandy trap, field dispatches said, and were smashed back by the combined efforts of 1st Canadian Army troops and rocket-firing R.A.F. fighters.

Canadian gunners poured fire over open sights into the pocket below Chambois, 10 miles southeast of Falaise. Field guns, anti-tank guns and even anti-aircraft guns blasted shells into milling masses of Germans.

Canadians Hung On.

Ross Munro, Canadian Press war correspondent, quoted a senior Canadian staff officer as saying the going was "sticky" for a while, but the effort finally was smashed and "nothing substantial got out." Enemy losses, said Munro, were "terrific," but Canadian casualties so far in the gap-blocking operation had been light.

Using about 70 tanks scraped up from the elements of five divisions the Germans attacked British troops from the westernmost pocket in another battle which raged all night, with the result still obscure today.

Thirty-three tanks were reported destroyed in the two suicide lunges.

While rain slowed Canadian advances, British elements of Gen. Crerar's command crossed the Vie river in real force, heading toward the Seine, and hammered eastward to within three miles of Lisieux, important communications centre, Livarot, 10 miles southeast of Lisieux, fell to the British forces.

These developments came as other elements of the U. S. 3rd Army fought German elements in the vicinity of Versailles, within 10 miles of the heart of Paris, and established themselves along the Seine southeast of the French capital. Paris itself was said to be seething in revolt in anticipation of liberation from German rule.

Casualties Heavy.

Another front dispatch, describing furious fighting by trapped Germans around Chambois, said enemy casualties were suffered on both sides. It said German troops outside the trap attempted to pierce the Allied line and open a corridor for the Nazi inside.

The first German attempt failed. A second attack was launched from the Gouffern forset south-west of Chambois.

A British staff officer was quoted in the dispatch as saying: "We do not known yet how many Germans got out, but we know they suffered severe losses."

More than 7,500 trapped Germans were captured yesterday—2,200 on the British front alone. Supreme headquarters officially announced the capture of Argentan, on the southern edge of the now-closed escape gap of the original Normandy pocket.

The thrust into Cabourg by British troops on the left flank of the Allied offensive, which is forcing Field Marshal Von Kluge's forces back upon the Seine, took the Allied force to about 25 miles along the coast from the mouth of the Seine.

Farther inland British troops of the Canadian Army thrust to within three miles of the communications hub of Lisieux, a front dispatch said.

The gigantic Allied drive to envelope Von Kluge's crushed forces was hemming the battered German columns into a 75-mile-wide area between Vernon, on the Seine, 4 miles north-west of Paris, and Cabourg.

Paris Incidental.

The fall of Paris appeared incidental to the much greater stakes for which Gen. Eisenhower was playing — complete destruction of the German 7th Army and its ill-fated reinforcements from the 15th Army. One Allied officer said, "We are shaking the tree to uproot the German Army, not primarily to get the fruit."

Unconfirmed reports reaching Headquarters from the field said two American correspondents were killed and three others were wounded or captured trying to get to Paris.

A dispatch from the Spanish border reported the Germans were fleeing north in efforts to get out of France, and it appeared the Germans were abandoning all of France south of Paris.

Taking advantage of bad weather the Germans are trying to flee across the Seine toward Dieppe and the Pas de Calais along four crossings between Elbeuf and the sea, 35 airline miles away. R.A.F. Mosquitos attacked their crossing attempts in that area last night.

The British 2nd Tactical Air Force and the U.S. 9th Air Force operating over the Allied left flank in the area from Pernay and Lisieux to the Seine, destroyed 62 tanks and 314 other vehicles. This did not include the destruction in the original Falaise-Argentan pocket which now is being handled by Allied artillery fire as it is too small and broken up for air force operation.

Von Kluge's troops are fleeing from pocket to pocket. With the Falaise-Argetan gap closed the Nazis now are trapped south of the Seine and are being hammered on every side. The news of the Allied crossing at Mantes means that even if the Germans get across the Seine they are in a position to be trapped by Lt.-Gen. Patton's 3rd Army men.

No direct assault was being made on Paris. The Germans were fanning out a few miles to the south to counter American patrols. There were reports the French underground was engaging the Germans in the streets of the capital.

The American sweep across the Seine to the north-west and the push to positions to the south-east threatens to envelop the capital, leaving it in an undefendable position where it will have to fall.

Southwest of Paris American columns were in the vicinity of Fontainebleau, 35 miles from the capital, and around Corbeiel and Melun, 15 and 25 miles respectively from Paris.

The arrival of Gen. Charles de Gaulle, head of the French Committee of National Liberation, in Cherbourg clearly indicates Paris is expected soon to be in Allied hands.

He was a son of the late Thomas Kelly and Julia Smith Kelly and was born in Haldimand township near Grafton. Mr. Kelly operated a mill and farm in the western end of Alnwick township, and was widely known. He was a member of Centenary United Church and choir, a member of the Cemetery Board, and for many years choir leader.

The parents of the little girl were with her in their automobile and reported that she was more scared htan hurt, although there was a slight bruise on her left side. Both owners agreed to pay for the minor damages to their cars.

French Patriots Capture Toulouse City

LONDON, Aug. 21 — (CP) — The Algiers radio said today that on Sunday the Maquis captured Toulouse, sixth largest city of France.

Toulouse (Pop: 213,200) is in southwest France, 60 miles north of the Spanish border. Frequent neutral reports have told of German withdrawals from that area.

French patriots now control one-third of France comprising eight departments, says Gen. Joseph Koenig, Commander of the French forces of the interior.

In a communique broadcast by the Algiers radio, Gen. Koenig said that during the week ended Aug. 19 French patriots killed 1,821 Germans, wounded 415 and captured 2,265, suffering only slight losses themselves.

Reports relayed here through Port Bou, Spain, said the Maquis controlled the entire Pyrenees region of southwestern France from the Atlantic to the Mediterranean. All German forces just north of the Spanish border have withdrawn northward and French patriots have appointed new civil administrators.

A dispatch from Irun, Spain, said the last German forces at Hendaye, just across the border in France, have pulled out and only regular French customs men guarded the frontier.

(The Brazzaville radio said in a broadcast reported yesterday by NBC that Maquis forces were in control of Vichy. The broadcast added that Gestapo agents had moved from Vichy and Paris to Nancy.)

Laval Moves

French-Swiss border reports said Pierre Laval and other Vichy officials had arrived at Belfort, near both Switzerland and Germany, and that Laval had established headquarters in a chateau 10 miles outside Belfort.

Marshal Petain's whereabouts was a mystery. A frontier dispatch to the London Daily Mail said he was believed still at Vichy, "waiting at the Pavilion de Sevigne to hand over his powers to those who will be called upon to represent the new France." The Ankara radio said Petain was expected at Belfort.

(After his arrival in France yesterday, Gen. Charles De Gaulle, head of the French Committee of National Liberation, said in a speech from the Cherbourg city hall that "we are all united in the same will—the will to French greatness.")

A Good Idea

LONDON, August 21 —(CP) —The "post-war policy group" of members of both houses of parliament Saturday night issued a memorandum suggesting that compensation for civilian war victims be obtained on German customs, railway, steamship and street car services.

Dieppe Veteran Murdered On Way Home

LOST RIVER Que., August 21 — Provincial Police were still searching yesterday for the person who shot and killed Pte. Hugh Miler, 31, of Weir, Jue., 60 miles north of Montreal, with shotgun slugs shortly before midnight last Friday. Pte. Miler, a wounded Dieppe veteran, was on his way home, his leg still in a plaster cast, to visit his wife and 10-year-oldd aughter, at the time of the mysterious shooting.

Dr. A. R. Cote, of Brownsburg, the district coroner, declared last night that he had adjourned the inquest indefinitely until detectives discover the assailant.

Detective Sergt. Maurice Valiquet and Detective Lucien Durocher of Montreal, sent to the scene by Chief of Provincial Police Detectives Louis Jargaile, were still near the scene of the shooting last night questioning witnesses and nearby residents.

Miller was still about 10 miles from home as he passed through Lost River on leave from Ste. Anne de Bellevue Hospital

Details of the shooting were meagre with the exception of the information given police by Pte. James Bates of Lost River, also a wounded veteran. Bates told police he and the victim were speaking in front of the Brunelle Hotel when a shotgun blast cut Miller down.

Dr Jean Marie Roussel of Montreal, medico-legal expert, told the police that the shotgun charge had been fired from less than 50 yards, and that the pellets lodged in a group in his upper body.

While investigators were reticent, it was held that the shooting was not accidental.

Meanwhile this little Laurentian Mountains village was watchful over the week-end as the detectives questioned residents, others along the highway, and visited Weir as well as other settlements of the district.

LOOT LEFT BEHIND BY NAZI IN FRANCE—There was a strange assortment of equipment left behind by the Germans in many of the sectors in the Normandy fighting. Legion Decides To Retain Cot

COBOURG, Aug. 21—(ENS)—Canadian Legion at a special meeting held to determine what should be done in regard to the lot which was deeded to the Legion by the town and now is wanted as a factory site, decided to retain the lot. The land, which is situated on Albert street, was deeded to the Legion so that the organization would have a site for the proposed Legion Hall.

Last week Mayor Jack Burnet, at a special meeting of the town council, informed the council that a company desired a 60-day option on the Legion Hall site and council decided to ask the Legion if it would give up the lot and take one somewhere else. A suggestion was the lot on George street at University, and council deferred action in the matter until the Legion held a meeting to decide what they would do. However the Legion later indicated that the members did not want to make any change.

American Sailor Helps Sell Tags

COBOURG, Aug. 21.—(ENS).—"Hurry, hurry, hurry. Come on folks, get 'em before they're all gone. Step right up and buy one. Come on lady, how about you? Thank you, thank you—hurry, hurry, hurry."

The spieler, although he was in the garb of a U.S. sailor, must have been a circus barker in his civilian days at one time or other. He had noticed a little girl selling tags on Saturday afternoon for the Cobourg General Hospital tag day and stepping up and standing alongside her, he opened up with his sales talk to the passersby. As a result of his efforts, the girl did a rushing business.

ESTABLISHED 1881 — A MUTUAL COMPANY

D. V. KETCHESON,
Branch Manager, Royal Bank Building

Roseneath Boy Reunited With C.W.A.C. Wife

TORONTO, Aug. 21.— Romance won broad smiles and sympathetic looks in the Exhibition reception centre early Sunday morning when two uniformed figures met after the hospital train with Canadian wounded from Normandy and Italy had arrived. Even relatives and frends who were meeting others paused for a few minutes to watch the tall young officer on crutches and his pretty thrilled young uniformed wife.

It was exactly three years, one month and two weeks—A. CSM Lois Arber knew the exact number of days even—since they had said goodbye to each other. And now Lieut. J. C. Ardber of the Queen's Own Rifles was back home to her and she had 10 whole days' leave to spend with him. The two stood and gazed at each other and hugged each other; they were like a pair of youngsters at the beginning of a long, long holiday.

Mrs. F. C. Arber of Tweed, mother of the tall young officer, was with them, smiling happily, but just a little bashful about all the attention they couldn't help attracting. The young wife was known to many of the girls of the CWAC who were present; the word had got around the place about her expecting her husband. And other officers kept stopping to shake hands and congratulated them.

Lieut. Arber worked at the Roseneath branch of the Royal Bank before going overseas in 1941. He had his right leg amputated at the hip as a result of wounds receieved invasion days. The officer also received neck and shoulder wounds.

"Happy?" echoed the slender soldier. "Are we? Boy, I'm telling you we're happy."

When anybody asked questions about over there the young wife would answer first; she admitted she knew "everything about him because he wrote lots." He lost his leg in Normandy on D-Day, though he had cleared the beach and got well inland. It was an 88-mm. airburst, the boys told him, though he didn't even hear it; just came to as a casualty.

"Ten whole days of holiday together," smiled A-CSM Arber. "We were married just before he joined up; he's been gone so long. Now we really are together again. I can't describe how I feel."

INVALIDED HOME—Lieut. J. C. Arber, formerly employed by the Roseneath Branch of the Royal Bank, was among the group of Normandy and Italy casualties to reach Toronto Sunday. He was met by his wife, A.C.S.M. Lois Arber, C.W.A.C.

Moose Fumerton Ace Flier Bags 14 Planes

OTTAWA, Aug. 21—(CP)—A big, strapping guy with a deceiving gentleness and a row of decorations got off a train here Sunday and told newsmen he didn't think he'd have time to get back in the fighting over Europe because the Germans were fading too fast, but he hoped to see some service in the Pacific.

If he does, it will round out the sky-fighting career of Group Capt. Carl (Moose) Fumerton of Fort Coulonge, Que., that started in the Battle of Britain, included Malta and Egypt, and three weeks ago saw him flying support for the grounded forces in Normandy.

"You're a 'groupie' now, then," the reporter grinned and showed "The Moose," an official paper with his promotion recorded.

"Gosh, I hope that doesn't mean I'm to be grounded," he said with genuine concern, studying the document which had been released while he was on his way home.

The famous flier with a record of 14 enemy aircraft destroyed and one damaged, said on his last flight over France three weeks ago: "Our lads down on the ground seemed to be having it pretty much their own way."

The veteran fighter and intruder pilot almost blushed when a reporter called him group captain. "No, just wing commander," he said pointing to the ringlets on his sleeve.

Like Pacific Prospect

He said this almost enviously, for he added: "Those guys used to gripe at the inactivity in Britain and sort of envy us the continuous action we used to get in the early days. Now they all get the action. The only opposition we get is from the ground defenses these days. The German Air Force is almost a thing of the past. That's why I'd like to take a crack at the Pacific."

He was interested to learn that Flt. Lt. George (Buzz) Beurling, Canada's leading ace from Verdun, had applied to fly for China in the Pacific. The Moose was with Beurling in Malta. "He'll sure be bad medicine for the Japs, eh?" he grinned.

Fumerton said over the years he had watched a gradual deterioration of the Luftwaffe. Their strength had dwindled perceptibly in the last few months, and the quality of their pilots was low. He thought they seemed to lack training. The enemy would not stay and fight, and he thought they must be acting under orders to conserve what was left of the once powerful force "for the next war."

"When you do catch up with them, they are an inferior type of the German airmen we met at the start of the war," the ace declared.

He said the Germans' lack of training was probably traceable to their growing lack of training facilities and planes as Allied strategic bombing chewed up their war plants.

The "Messerschmidt Fund."

"It's got so now that the chaps around the English 'dromes ironically speak of 'The Messerschmidt Fund' — a mythological scheme to raise money to buy the Germans some planes so we can get some action," he said.

Fumerton said that he had recently had a chance to talk to a group of German prisoners and he found the great majority thought "the jig was up" and were ready to throw in their hands. "They've lost all the old bravado we used to see at the start of the war and they're convinced now that they've lost the war," he said.

He spoke of the air cover over Allied armies in France and said: "We've got such an abundance of crews and planes these days that we can keep the sky full all the time and Jerry just doesn't stand a chance."

He told of the resourcefulness of some of his comrades in developing a technique to combat the German robot bombs— a techinque which he said, had been successful.

New Anti-Robot Technique.

"The lads found they couldn't catch them because they go too fast. But they knew they travelled at about 1,500 feet, so our boys climb above this altitude and wait. You can see the 'doodlebug' exhaust for more than 18 miles and this gives our lads time to make a long dive and the additional speed thus gained gives them a chance of knocking out the bombs."

He thought an eventual development would be anti-robot planes powdered with jet ropulusion which would be fast enough to overtake the bombs and destroy them before they could do any harm. "Of course, I'm pretty sure that it won't be very long before the launching areas are in our hands anyhow," he said.

With "The Moose" were 300 other airmen repatriates who will go through documentary formalities here to-day and then continue to homes throughout Canada for a 30-day leave. Most of them will become instructors; some will remuster from groundcrew to aicrew and a few will continue hospital treatment at air force stations.

Economy May Prove Expensive

Speaking recently at Port Arthur the Minister for Naval Affairs, the Hon. Angus Macdonald, expressed the hope that the Canadian Navy would never again be allowed to sink to the depths which it reached during the twenty years which preceded this war. We hope that Mr. Macdonald's words will be remembered and heeded during the coming years of peace. Canada's Navy has done great work in the present war, founding a reputation for itself which will not be dimmed by the passing of time. But we must bear in mind that our Navy had to be built from virtually nothing; ships, men and organization all had to be found while we were actually at war.

The quickest and likeliest way of sabotaging our Navy in the future is to cut off its supplies of money. Navies cost a great deal to keep up. If, in ten years or so, we should permit a craze for economy to cripple our Navy we shall be penny wise and pound foolish, and we shall regret our action bitterly. Just a century ago the parliament of Great Britain was seized with such a passion for economy, and the London Times expressed itself thus:

> "Economy is a good thing, and a popular thing; but economy has ere now been found to be in the end an expensive virtue; and the popularity which is founded on no other merit than that of having saved money at the expense of national safety or national honour, is as fleeting as it is contemptible. The most expensive warfare in which a country can be engaged is that in which it is involved without adequate preparation".

That could not be better expressed. This war has shown us that Canada needs a Navy, and that Canada is capable of producing a Navy which is worthy of the best traditions of the great Royal Navy. If we keep our Navy in good condition we shall be respected by nations which take it into their heads to become aggressive, and that respect may deter them from provoking us to war. It is much cheaper in the long run to keep our Navy up to date and strong than it is to fight a costly war every quarter of a century.

Desirable, But Improbable

Dr. Robert Newton, the president of the University of Alberta, recently made some interesting remarks on bilingualism in relation to Canadian unity, and he is quoted thus in L'Action Catholique:

> "If Canada is to contribute to post-war reconstruction, it will have to fulfil an indispensable condition first: to realize its own national unity. And to bring that about, it will have to solve the problem of bilingualism. We will have to determine then what our system of teaching will be, for this system will have to be completely bilingual. Our prejudices have increased through the fault of our present system. We will never attain national unity if we do not modify it".

In commenting on Dr. Newton's suggestion the Ottawa Citizen has this to say:

> "Without going so far as to demand a completely bilingual educational system, a good beginning toward national unity and understanding as between French and English-speaking Canadians would be a reasonably fluent conversational knowledge of French on the part of all English-speaking citizens.
> "Perhaps the progressive West might be able to institute such teaching, at present largely lacking. And it might be founded in the first instance upon a thorough study on the part of the teachers of that hopeful and helpful, yet profound book, by Frederick Bodmer 'The Loom of Language'. The learning and teaching of French—and perhaps even the learning of English—might lose half its terrors in consequence.
> "And the West, through such teaching, might help greatly in bridging this gap in understanding. Prejudices seem to be harder and faster in the East. And in this way the indispensable condition of which Dr. Newton speaks, the achievement of national unity, may more easily come to be realized".

If we thought that this point of view had any hope whatever of being realised in fact, we should support it joyously. But we do not. Bilingualism would only become common in Canada if it were 'practical'—that is to say, if it were impossible to make money without it. It is unquestionably an advantage for the majority of the people of a country to be in possession of two languages; it broadens their horizons and combats their tendencies toward provincialism. But purely intellectual values have never cut any ice in Canada as a whole, and get scant attention in our universities. We are, partly through necessity, and partly through inertia, a deeply materialistic country, and if the choice lies between preserving a prejudice and doing a little work with our heads, we will hug the prejudice like grim death. Bilingualism is one of the things which Canada needs, but will probably never get.

Shakespeare In Toronto

Toronto is in the only city in Canada which, in any real sense, supports the legitimate theatre, and it supports it valiantly and enthusiastically. The disappearance of the living theatre in Canada was brought about by the depression and the coming of the talkies; the depression struck at all manifestations of art, and for a time it was widely believed that talking movies would supplant the living theatre. But the fact of the matter is that the living theatre, which has existed for at least three thousand years, is unkillable, because the appetite for it exists deep in the heart of mankind.

Toronto has not only a winter theatrical season, but a flourishing summer season as well, and this year the smash-hit of the summer was Shakespeare's tragedy of Hamlet. It was so well received that it ran for two weeks, instead of the usual one, and packed the Royal Alexandra Theatre at every performance. Encouraged by this success, the management is producing The Merchant of Venice. Shakespeare has been an excellent box-office attraction for three hundred years, and apparently he is very much to the taste of Toronto audiences.

But we are sorry that good plays can only be seen in Toronto. The journey from Peterborough is inconvenient and expensive, and consequently few people undertake it. But the appetite for the theatre exists in Peterborough just as it does everywhere else, and we should like to see it satisfied. How long will it be before the smaller cities of Ontario get their theatres back again? Reckoning on a basis of population, we judge that if the Toronto company were to play here for a week, alternating its performances of Hamlet and The Merchant, it would do excellent business. It could certainly play for a week in Kingston, and for a fortnight in Ottawa, Belleville and Brockville might prove to be good 'stands'. And this is only in Eastern Ontario; west of Toronto there are cities enough to make possible a six-weeks' tour at the least.

The company which played in Toronto was predominantly Canadian, and we think that the time has come when this Dominion could support at least one first-rate touring theatrical company, with a repertory of good plays, not necessarily all of them from the classical repertoire. How long will it be before we have such a company? The audience exists already; so does the nucleus of the company; what we lack is a supply of adequate theatres.

NOTE AND COMMENT

This is one of those summers which will be referred to in future as "a good old-fashioned summer". We all live through one, and we never forget it.

A news item tells us that "Canadians have conquered the birthplace of the Conqueror: William, Duke of Normandy, was born at Falaise". And on the wrong side of the blanket, if we remember correctly, a matter upon which he was deeply sensitive.

Prof. Albert Einstein has disavowed the authenticity of much material in the new biography of him written by his former son-in-law. Somehow it makes the distinguished scientist seem much more human to know that though he may understand relativity, relatives present about the same problems to him as to the rest of us.

Other papers are making merry at the expense of Toronto Saturday Night which predicted that 'Conservatives would get 1 and Liberals 11 of the 63 seats in Alberta's election'. Unfortunately neither Liberals nor Conservatives ran any candidates, and there are only 57 seats in the Alberta House. But we approve of the Saturday Night's principle: if you are going to make a boner, make a good one.

The King's Own Scottish Borderers are unable to find enough bagpipes in Scotland to outfit a pipe band. Ottawa Citizen's T.D.F. thinks that unless something is done about this—and right away—our triumphal entry into Berlin might as well be called off, because he would dislike to see the parade headed by Yanks with mouth organs. As far as we are concerned, mouth organs and a brass band will do every nicely—with, of course, a powerful balalaika accompaniment.

Farming News and Views

By HON. DUNCAN MARSHALL

HARVESTING in Ontario made rapid progress during the fine weather. Grain came in quickly and I have heard no complaints about the heads not filling. The soil was in good condition to fill and ripen spring grain and Ontario is promised a generous harvest.

Pastures have suffered from the hot sun but there was a good undergrowth of greenness so the cattle can get a nourishing bite yet. August has long been the difficult month for pastures until alfalfa came to the rescue, and a field of good second crop alfalfa has frequently saved dairy cows from falling of in their milk and beef cattle from "standing still" for a few weeks.

It is a good while since Rudyard Kipling, in referring to the tile drains put down in England, under Danish rule, made this remark about the dry month:

> In the midst of drouthy August,
> When the bones of meadows show,
> You can see the lines they followed,
> Fourteen hundred years ago.

It's not that bad this year, however, and we may have a few showers before this is in print.

PROF. J. A. Scott Watson, who represented the British Department of Agriculture at the Embassy in Washington and at the office of the British High Commissioner in Canada, has returned to England and has been making some remarks there in which Canadian farmers have a good deal of interest. Of Canada, he said:—"She was looking for a market for wheat, cheese and bacon. We should need her wheat and in our trade with her wheat would have to be regarded as priority No. 1. In the case of bacon, she expected us to take some of her surplus, and as we should probably want to trade again with Denmark and the Low Countries, it might mean that we should have to have a smaller bacon industry at home."

Referring to the beef cattle surplus in Canada, Professor Scott Watson said he thought they could import quite considerable quantities into England without upsetting the home market. "We are," he said, "at the present time importing beef from Eire, and I see no reason why those cattle should not come from Canada. The same argument applies to dairy heifers. Canada has some very fine animals, tested for T.B. and abortion and they are a better lot than those from Southern Ireland.

THERE have been some complaints, in the pig business, about sows not having a sufficient supply of milk. Some careful experiments have been made by both scientific men and pig raisers, with regard to this trouble. The difficulty in getting enough feed strong in protein has turned attention to mineral deficiencies in growing pigs. The result has been the development of the fact that in the production of milk it is minerals, and particularly lime, that is more important even than protein. On a diet deficient in lime a gilt, or sow, may look in good condition yet fail to milk properly. The results from lime deficiency may work in a progressive fashion and finally bring disastrous results. It is all important to keep up your supply of mineral feeds and 3 or 4 per cent of minerals should be added to meal rations and this ought to be strong in lime, which it will be if both edible bone meal and ground limestone are fed. Growing gilts should have no lime deficiency in their feed.

THERE is a Bill before the British House of Comons for the licensing of boars. This shows a keen interest in the proper type of pig. When this bill passes, no farmer will be permitted to keep a boar for breeding unless it is inspected and licensed. There is considerable discussion as to whether or not the boar must be a pedigree animal. I would think this should be the case without question, as the pedigree is the only positive record of the animal's ancestry, and it is often very valuable to know this so as to form an opinion as to his usefulness as a breeder. If a boar of poor ancestry is licensed, the results may be quite unfortunate.

This question has brought up the difficulty in England with quite a number of breeds in pigs. In a country with a population such as Britain has, there is a demand for a butcher's pig in the large sale of fresh pork. There is no export market whatever as they cannot supply the home market. In Canada it is strictly different. We are large exporters to only one country, Britain, so we must satisfy the customer, and it is better to use the breed that does this for our own home production as well.

PEAS are a good crop in Ontario this year. One extensive grower told me last week he never had a crop with as fine a show of pods as this year. Peas are wanted in England, no grain, except wheat, is so important in feeding the troops. As I have often pointed out before, both livstock and crops are sold by auction in Britain. Some fields of peas were sold in this way in May "down in Somerset," if you please, and a six acre field of "Canadian Early Eclipse brought £400, which would amount to almost $300 per acre. Looks like a nice price. Several lots were sold at similar prices.

INTERESTING letters are coming all the time from soldiers in the battle areas, and not a few are from farmers who are fighting. One from the Far East tells of seeing an Arab ploughing with a three "horse" team which consisted of a camel, a cow and a donkey. The greatest difficulty seemed to be to keep the camel in the furrow as its splay feet were not designed for such a walk. I suppose it never occurred to the Arab to hitch the camel on the "nigh side" and so put him on the land. This soldier remarks that Arab workers move very slowly and take frequent rests, while their implements or "beasts of burden" are not designed for speed. He says he found some very good land in Palestine and where irrigation was used, the climate was excellent for producing good crops.

Men who are with the Forces in India are asking to have Farm Papers and Agricultural literature forwarded to their camps. We at home can scarcely understand what magazines and newspapers of all kind men to men in the active services.

A Board of Governors, for the Ontario Agricultural College, is to be appointed by the Ontario Government, it is announced, to take it out of politics. As a matter of fact, politics never interfered with the O.A.C. except in the case of the personal prejudices of a Minister of Agriculture who cared nothing for Agricultural Education, when more than once the college was made to suffer. This year, for the first time in a long period, there were no two-year students, because no money was provided to advertise or secure students for this course, the most important the college offered. Alberta had a Board of Agricultural Education appointed in 1913 and it did very effective work. Some years later, it disappeared because a Minister of Agriculture never summoned it to meet. That was his method of blocking Agricultural Education. The revival of this Board is now being discussed. What Ontario needs is a revival of the enthusiasm for a better knowledge of science in farming. The O.A.C. has never suffered from politics but it has had a good deal of grief from the whims of some people who controlled the financing of its work.

REVEALED —By Goldberg

How London Beat The Germans

(NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE)

AMID the enthusiasm which all must feel for the achievements of the Allied armies, one should not overlook the curious, yet perhaps decisive, military contribution of the civilian population of "London and southern England." When the British people proved during the great blitz of 1940-'41 that they could "take it" they won a significant yet purely negative and passive victory. Under the even more harrowing test of the flying bombs their fortitude has played, however unintentionally, a far more active part in the unfolding of Fate's grand design.

It is hardly too much to say that in the Second Battle of France the Germans have been beaten, first of all, by London's civilians. It now seems quite evident that from the moment when it appeared that the Normandy landing could not be repulsed, the Germans made the flying bombs the foundation of their strategy. They did not imagine that the bombs could win the war, but they obviously did calculate that the horrible pressure which these weapons would bring on the British people would force General Eisenhower to make the "bomb coast" of the Pas de Calais his primary objective.

The calculation had two active consequences. The Germans immobilized in the Pas de Calais defences the troops which might have affected events in Normandy; and when the Normandy break-through could no longer be averted they massed their major forces around the Caen pivot, letting their left wing in Brittany take care of itself. As a means of meeting and crushing an attack upon the Pas de Calais both moves were eminently sound. But this preconceived German idea that the flying bomb platforms were the critical element in the strategy of the campaign had a further result. The American armor reached out around the undefended flank, heading for Paris. The Germans could see at once that by such a course the "military idots" were merely going the long way around toward an objective which could not be directly threatened from before Paris or from anywhere south of the Seine. The obvious counter was to let American armored columns dangle in the vacuum they were invading, for only a military idiot would conform to enemy threats which were meaningless. On the assumption that the Pas de Calais was and had to be the main Allied object, the decision was shrewd.

There was only one trouble with it, which was that the assumption was wrong. Eisenhower was not aiming for the Pas de Calais or even for Paris; he was aiming for the German 7th Army itself, which had thus been tricked into laying itself open to entrapment. But why was he able to do so? Primarily because the people of London and southern England were not being reduced to disorganization and panic by the hideous ordeal they were daily sustaining. They gave the Allied command the foundation on which alone it could design the Cannae now in progress; it was those civilians in their offices and kitchens and bomb shelters who first beat the Germans by affording to Eisenhower and Montgomery, with their life blood, the opportunity to do so. When the histories are written, their contribution must not be forgotten.

Potato Blossoms

No poet is heard extolling the beauty of the potato blossom, and no country makes it her national flower.

Actually the blossoms are lovely enough to be used as a table bouquet, though the leaves are too coarse to be suitable for this purpose....

The pretty cream-coloured flowers with yellow cone-shaped centres have a pleasant fragrance.—Dauphin Herald.

Tribute to British

Prof. D. B. Johnstone-Wallace of Cornell University, who has returned to the United States after 18 months of service with the British Ministry of Agriculture, states that Great Britain "is producing about 75 per cent of her own food requirements." This statement is in itself a tribute to the remarkable way in which the British have been able to maintain and increase their agricultural production, despite the urgent calls upon manpower for arms manufacture and service with the armed forces.—Montreal Gazette.

A Farmer Rings the Bell

To The Herald-News, of Passaic, New Jersey, we are indebted for the news that Lester A. Crandall, a farmer of Dallas, Iowa, recently became so concerned about the national fiscal position that he sent to the Treasury a cheque for $900.27, the sum total of payments made to him over the past six years under the AAA parity program. Mr. Crandall, who is the father of eleven children, included a note in which he said:

"With our Government borrowing from the future at an unprecedented rate, and public debt proved to be the greatest enemy of a free people, I don't feel that I can use this kind of money be used directly in our war effort and not be used be used directly n our war effort and not be used to corrupt the electorate."

We rise to our feet to salute Mr. Crandall. Millions of people are stirred by the threat to American solvency, but those who are stirred $900 worth would rattle around in an undersized feed-box.—Saturday Evening Post.

Editorial Repartee

The Oakland, Calif., Tribune publishes a photograph of a beauty spot in Oregon under the caption, "A Stretch of California Shoreline." Thereupon the Portland Oregon runs a picture of the San Francisco Golden Gate Bridge and calls it, "A Little Bridge, Built by Boy Scouts, on the Oregon Coast."

In that light-hearted fashion, once upon a time, the newspapers of this land jollied one another as a regular thing. Their readers were believed to enjoy it and to expect it. But that was long ago. In vain we comb the exchanges of this week and last for a parallel instance. They're all talking about subjects like politics and war.

In that far and fondly remembered day the perennial feud between Editor Jones of the Billtown Banner and Editor Smith of the Joyville Javelin was a national sporting event. The fur flew and the language. The dictionary was made to yield up its choicest words of scorn and insult this side of downright libel. An empire falling got less space on the editorial page than "the puerile and poisonous opinions of our esteemed contemporary across the street." — New York Times.

Learning Languages

Though the difficulties of learning languages are real, they are also easy to exaggerate. Generally, the adult has more to show after a three months' course at a commercial institute than an adolescent after three years' study of a foreign language in a British secondary or American high school. One reason for this is that the adult pupil is clear about why he or she is taking the course. Another is that the teacher is usually clear about why he or she is giving it.

This is not the whole story. To sins of omission we have to add all the positive obstacles which early formal education places in the way of those who have no strong personal inclination for liguistic studies....We have not yet got away from education designed for the sons of gentlemen. Educational Platonism sacrifices realizable proficiency by encouraging the pursuit of unattainable perfection. The child of the immigrant learns a language by blundering his or her way into greater self-confidence. Adults accept the mistakes of children with tolerant good humour, and the genial flow of social intercourse is not interrupted by a barrage of pedantic protestas. The common sense of ordinary parents or customs officials recognises that commonplace communication unhampered by the sting of grammatical guilt must precede real progress in the arts of verbal precision. Most of us could learn languages more easily if we could learn to forgive our own linqustic trespasses.—From "The Loom of Language," by Frederick Bodmer.

Unconsidered Trifles

A man called on an AFS pal and found him standing on the hearth rug with his back to the fire.

They discussed the weather, Hitler, garden pests, etc., and presently a spark flew out and landed on the seat of the AFS man's trousers. He took no notice.

"Yours trousers are smouldering," said his friend.

"I know," replied the AFS man, "but this is my day off!"

The farmer took his small son to market. A prospective buyer was examining some cattle, and Johnny inquired, interestly:

"Why's that man pinching those bullocks, Dad?"

The folowing day the farmer was busy in his yard when Johnny came tearing towards him yelling at the top of his voice:

A Bible Message

All thy works shall praise thee, O Lord; and thy saints shall bless thee. They shall speak of the glory of thy kingdom, and talk of thy power; to make known to the sons of men his mighty acts, and the glorious majesty of his kingdom. (Ps. 145: 10-12.)

And I saw a new heaven ann a new earth: for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away; and there was no more sea. And I John saw the holy city, new Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband....

And the city had no need of the sun, neither of the moon, to shine in it, for the glory of God did lighten it, and the Lamb is the light thereof. And the nations of them which are saved shall walk in the light of it: and the kings of the earth do bring their glory and honour into it.

And the gates of it shall not be shut at all by day: for there shall be no night there. And they shall bring the glory and honour of the nations into it.

And there shall in no wise enter into it anything that defileth, neither whatsoever worketh abomination or maketh a lie; but they which are written in the Lamb's book of life. (Rev. 21: 1, 2, 23-27.)

Letter To The Editor

DANCE HALL IN SOUTH END

Sir,—Your paper of Wednesday, August 16th contained an acount of our City Council's activities under the heading "Council Unenthusiastic over Dance Hall Plan." It is to be sincere[illegible] hoped for the sake of property owners in th[illegible] Lansdowne-Morrow street district that the coun[illegible]cill will remain unenthusiastic.

Peterborough has too many districts that ha[illegible] been spoiled by the indiscriminate building [illegible] this, that and the other. One rather dreads ha[illegible]ing a vacant lot, or an old house, near for fe[illegible] of what might spring up at one. However du[illegible]ing this last year we breathed a little easier [illegible] our council showed signs that they were becom[illegible]ing conscious of the need of proper town pla[illegible]ning. True, it is a little late to do any good [illegible] the central part of the town, but at least we f[illegible] the suburbs were to be spared.

As Ald. Bradburn pointed out, there are so[illegible] nice homes in this district. I should hate [illegible] think of the same district if a dance hall [illegible] permitted. Cars parked in front of our hom[illegible] car doors banging half the night, papers litte[illegible] over the lawns, and very little sleep for oursel[illegible] or our children. If the building in question [illegible] worth $100,000 it would still be a nuisance.

If there is any possibility that this permit [illegible] be granted let every alderman ask himself "[illegible] would I like it near my home?"

I have lived in this district for nearly [illegible] years. I own my own home and have spe[illegible] few thousand dollars, to say nothing of the h[illegible] work, improving it. Our home means as m[illegible] to us as the homes of the more fortunate li[illegible] in "restricted areas." Let the city fathers [illegible] us to keep them "homes."

There is already one dance hall in the s[illegible] end so there really cannot be a very great [illegible] for another.

Thanking you most sincerely for the priv[illegible] of voicing my opinion. Yours truly,

A SOUTH END PROPERTY OWN[illegible]

MAN SHOULD SHOP FOR A WIFE
He Should Try To Get Qualities He Wants And Needs in a Woman

DEAR DOROTHY DIX: What qualities should a young man look for in picking out a wife? Can a man teach his wife to be thrifty after marriage even though she was not thrifty before marriage?

B. B. R.

ANSWER: Before a man marries he should take stock of himself as well as the girl and decide what qualities he wants and is going to need in a wife, and then try to see that he gets them.

Most men don't do this. Every day we see poor men, earning small salaries, who marry girls who have nothing but pretty faces to recommend them, which is just as silly as if they put everything they possessed or ever expected to have in a fancy automobile, when what they needed was a serviceable truck.

So be sure of what you need in a wife when you go looking the girls over. If I were a young man hunting for a wife, the first thing I would take into consideration would be her disposition because that is the thing he will have to live with. I would pass up the girls whose tempers are hung on a hair-trigger and who have to be appeased always and handled with gloves. Likewise not for me the selfish and the naggy and the bossy. I would look for a girl who was good-natured and amiable and easy to get along with and one you could talk things over with without getting into a fight.

I would try to marry a healthy girl, a sensible girl, a domestic girl and one whose ideas jibed with mine and one who would be a helpmate instead of a dead weight.

Of course, it is possible to teach some wives to be thrifty, but a man who marries a spendthrift thinking he can reform her is taking a big gamble because a girl who has not been reared to save and to live within her income rarely changes. Money burns in her pocket and she can never be brought to see why, as long as she has a dollar and a charge account, she shouldn't buy whatever she wants.

DEAR MISS DIX: We are the wives of service men. With our husbands gone we want to help keep up the morale of the boys who are still here so we go dancing at moderately good night clubs and see no harm in enjoying ourselves and we are sure that our husbands would not want us to be lonesome waiting for them. We are good wives and write mind if they knew. They would not our husbands regularly to let them know we think of them every day so people should not talk about us the way they do.

Should we let these evil-minded people get in our hair? We usually get in by 2 o'clock.

SERVICE MENS' WIVES

ANSWER: If it is necessary to keep up the morale of the civilians by dancing with them at night clubs, don't you think it might be well to leave the job to the unmarried girls? You may be instigated by the noblest motives in your missionary work but you are sure to be misjudged. Especially by the thousands upon thousands of single girls who, in these days of many shortage, are certain to be strongly in the opinion that married women should take a back seat and give them a show.

However, a good way to settle this problem is to put yourself in your husband's place and see how you would like it if you had a pretty young wife from whom you were separated by thousands of miles and if you were sleeping in foxholes and undergoing all the hardships and dangers of war, if you knew that she was staying out until two o'clock at night and later having good times with other men. And do you think you would take much stock in her alibi that she was doing it just to cheer up the boys at home?

Put that in your cigarette and smoke it.

DEAR MISS DIX: Don't you think people have worries enough now without having to be inundated with chain letters threatening them with bad luck if they break the chain?

A VICTIM

ANSWER: I think the post office department should stop this pest before it makes any more headway. I thought it already had been suppressed by law.

Madoc Man Weds In Perrytown

St. Paul's Anglican Church, Perrytown, was the setting for a pretty evening wedding recently, when Eleanor Isobel Retallick, only daughter of Mrs. Edith Retallick and the late Edwin Retallick, became the bride of William McKinley Rankin, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Rankin of Madoc. Rev. Lloyd Delaney officiated, and Mrs. Edwin Wilson played the wedding music.

Given in marriage by her grandfather, Mr. Reid Wilson, the bride wore a tailored suit of grey tweed, with moss green accessories, and a corsage of pink roses and sweet peas. She was attended by Miss Mary Turck of Port Hope, in powder blue wool, with contrasting accessories, and a corsage of yellow roses. Mr. Carrol Nichols, of Port Hope, was best man, and Mr. Jackson Wilson was usher.

THE TEA HOUR GOSSIP . . . .

My talk today is going to be on what to do. and what not to do, when baking cakes, so that you will have a fluffy, evenly browned cake. If these rules are followed, you will never have a cake failure. Many a woman has won an enviable reputation as a born cook because of her ability to bake fluffy, delicious cakes. Although whole books have been written on the art of cake baking, there are only a few essentials to remember. Use the exact ingredients specified in the recipe you are following, substitutions can endanger the success of your cake. Allow all ingredients to come to room temperature. If they are, your cake will be higher and fluffier. Be sure you have the size and type of pan called for in the recipe. If you use a pan too large, your cake will not bake properly, nor will it rise to the top and brown well. If, on the other hand, your cake will rise and run over the sides and will not brown evenly. Check to make sure the oven rack is on in the proper position for baking. When baking a loaf cake, place one rack in centre of the oven. When baking layer cakes, use two racks, placing each at equal distance from the bottom of the oven. Do not place the layers one above the other in the oven, but at equal distance from either side. Always pre-heat your oven half an hour before putting your cakes in to bake. Follow these rules and you will never have a cake failure.

Brown Sugar Leaf Cake.

1-3 cup shortening, ¾ cup firmly packed brown sugar, 2 eggs, 1¾ cups flour, 3 taespoons baking powder, ¼ easpoon salt, 2-3 cup milk, 1 teaspoon vanilla. Cream together shortening and sugar and add eggs, one at a time, beating after each addition. Sift together flour, baking powder and salt and add alternately with milk to creamed mixture. Add vanilla. Pour into a greased pan 3" x 8" x 2". Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F) for 45 minutes. Cool 5 minutes, then remove cake from pan, and cool on a wire rack. Use following recipe for frosting. 1½ cups brown sugar, 1-3 cup water, 2 egg whites, pinch of salt, 1 teaspoon vanilla. Boil together sugar and water (until a soft ball will form when dropped in cold water). Beat egg whites stiff and gradually add syrup, being consistency until frosting holds shape. Add salt and vanilla and spread over top and sides of cake. This makes a delicious cake.

Spice Loaf Cake.

Half cup shorting, 1 cup sugar, 2 eggs, 1¼ cups flour, ¼ teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon baking soda, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, ½ teaspoon cloves. 1 teaspoon nutmeg, 2-3 cup milk. Cream together shortening and sugar and add eggs one at a time. Sift together flour, salt, soda and spices. Add alternately with milk to creamed mixture. Pour into well greased pan 8" x 8" x 2". Bake in moderate oven ((325 degrees F) for one hour. This cake is nice without frosting of any kind and it may be used as a pudding with pudding sauced poured over it.

THE STARS SAY . . . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

A DEFINITE show of opposing forces and conditions may add perplexity and surprise to the events of this day. While there may be signs of crystallization, delay and static situations yet there is a powerful uprooting force, radical and far reaching. Shrewd and capable uprooting of such conflicts may result in astonishing denouement, affecting the business as well as domestic or romantic matters. With controlled impulses and emontions, and with sturdy application and good sense, lasting foundation may be laid upon the ruins of devasation and upheaval.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of surprises and upheavals with aspading up of old static and crystallized conditions and situations. With good reasoning and sturdy application to the tenacious obstructions it is probable that sound and enduring benefits may be reaped. This applies to finances, property and to all domestic and affectional relaions. But impulsive and emotional conduct might prove disintegrating. Work to preserve solid foundations built upon radical change or promising spadework, in home and in business.

A child born on this day may be original, independent, having fine skills and ingenuity, with firmness and dependability of character. It may suffer in its affectional life.

Picnic Platters
Swift's Table-Ready Meats are the perfect answer to the picnic problem

Trenton To Meet Plazas Here In First Game

The first game of the Intermediate "A" O.A.S.A. playoffs between Plazas and Trenton will be played at Riverside Park Wednesday evening, starting at 6:15 p.m.

Plazas won the right to represent this city in the playoffs when they polished off the strong Soldier team in the semi-finals and then dropped Switchgear, who had finished first in the league schedule, into the discard, winning four out of the five games in the finals.

Strongly fortified in every department Plazas have three starting pitchers ready, Frank Stokoe, Dave Wilson and Terry Woods. Out of nine games in the City League playoffs this trio lost only two games.

This is the first time in a number of years that the local representatives have not been called upon to meet Oshawa in the first round, the Motor City getting a bye. Trenton will field a strong club for Wednesday night's game, and will likely draw some of the players from the Trenton airport as the Fliers are not competing in the Ontario playdowns.

Wednesday night's game will start at 6:15 and should draw one of the largest crowds of the season.

All-American Gets Underway

CHICAGO, Aug. 21 (AP)—There'll be swinging room only at Tam O'Shanter Country Club to-day, when the vanguard of some 600 golfers start lashing at par in the season's greatest fairways show—the $42,500 all-American championships.

Approximately 300 amateurs and 100 feminine contenders will provide their share of fireworks in the week-long three-ply event, but the big doings will be the all-American open in which upward of 200 professionals will square off for a record first prize of $13,462 in war bonds.

The unique meet doesn't get down to brass tacks until Thursday when survivors in all three divisions play 72 holes of medal play lasting through Sunday and perhaps longer if history repeats. Last year, Jug McSpaden and Pte. O'Neal (Bucko) White had to struggle 18 extra holes for the open title, which went to McSpaden by a stroke.

The amateurs tomorrow will bustle through an 18-hole test for 24 tournament berths and the same screening set-up is cheduled for the women Tuesday. The qualifying phase ends Wednesday when unexempted pros battle to round out a title field of more than 80 players.

All three 1943 champions—McSpaden in the open; Lieut. Patty Berg of the Marines in the women's open, and Dale Morey of Martinsville, Ind., in the amateur—will be on hand for title defenses.

Bob Hamilton Defeats Nelson

SPOKANE, Wash., Aug. 21 —(AP)—Bob Hamilton of Evansville, Ind., won the 1944 United States Professional Golfers' Association golf championship Sunday when he defeated Byron Nelson, Toledo, O., one up in the 36-hole finals at the Manito Course.

The reversal that saw Nelson a 10-to-1 favorite as they teed off this morning, beaten by such a newcomer was the most surprising since the big links event exclusively for the professionals was founded in 1916.

It exceeded in drama the upset that Tom Creavy wrote into the records in 1931.

Creavy, like Hamilton, was playing in his first P. G. A. championship when he knocked over Densmore Shute at Providence, R. I. Shute, however, was not such an outstanding player as Nelson, former United States Open and P.G.A. title winner.

Hamilton trimmed an opponent who played 196 holes in 30 under par during the seven-day competition. If the tournament had been at medal play, Nelson would have spread-eagled the field.

At match play, the United States ranking star bowed out, but he contributed heavily to his own defeat. He three-putted the ninth, 16th and 29th holes to lose those three. In addition, he continually missed others on the green which he usually taps in without difficulty when in peak form.

7 Army Records Broken At Toronto

TORONTO, August 21 — (CP).—Seven command records were broken yesterday at the third annual track and field championship meet of No. 1 R.C.A.F. Training Command at Varsity Stadium here.

The Hagersville Service Flying Training School team won the meet with 29 points, LAC. Eric Coy of Winnipeg breaking two command records for them—the discus throw and shot put. LAC. Stewart Allan of Hanover, Ont., broke the 220-yard dash mark, and the Hagersville women's relay team also came through to set a new record.

Maning Depot, Toronto, came second with 23 points and the Royal Norwegian Air Force team was third with 16. Camp Borden and Picton were tied with eight points each.

Rat Steals Coupons

TUSTIN, Calif., Aug. 21 —(AP)—The local ration board replaced the 1,085 gasoline ration stamps Lew Betts reported stolen from his filling station. But when he came back a second time to report the same loss, the board said twice was once too often. It turned out all right, though. A mama rat had used the coupons as bedding for the youngsters.

Sandlot Winners To Go To Kansas

TORONTO, Aug. 21—(CP)—Canadian Commissioner Lloyd Douglas of the National Sandlot Baseball Congress announced yesterday that London, winners of the 1944 Canadian Sandlot title, will not go to Wichita, Kan., for the world's championship tournament.

The Londoners would be unable to take three of their important players with them and Commissioner Douglas is loathe to send a weakened entry.

Mr. Douglas, however, is trying to make arrangements for a special "North American" series. He proposes bringing the American Sandlot winners to London for a seven-game series, and negotiations are now under way.

Toronto Girls Smother All Stars 10-1

The Sunday Morning Class, girls all star softball team of Toronto lived up to everything that has been said about them when they defeated the Peterborough All Stars 10 to 1 at Riverside on Saturday night. Close to 2,000 people saw the game which was staged by the Kinsmen in behalf of the club charities.

The Toronto girls played sparkling ball in every position and Thelma Golden, one of Canada's outstanding pitchers, gave an exhibition in the last our innings when she struck out five of the 13 players who faced her. Isobel Bullock got the only hit off the champion and that was a nice single through second base.

Isobel Bullock, Westclox catcher, starred for the All Stars, for she caught, she pitched and she played in right field. At the bat she got three hits in four times to the plate.

Norma Strickland started for the All Stars and went great guns for the first three innings, allowing only nine of the Sunday Morning Class to face her, and was given splendid support by her team mates. She weakened in the fourth and had difficulty finishing the fifth. Joyce Withers started the sixth but was wild, was hit freely and had to come out in the seventh. Isobel Bullock finished the game and although she was none too steady at first, when the bags became loaded, she tightened down in the last two innings after she walked the first batter in the eighth, and allowed none to reach first.

The record of the three All Star hurlers when in the box was:

	R	SO	W	H
Strickland	3	3	2	4
Withers	3	0	2	4
Bullock	3	4	2	3

Outside the sixth and seventh innings the Peterborough girls gave a good exhibition of ball, but in these two innings the Toronto girls ran wild on the bases, hit plenty and had the Peterborough team pretty well disorganized.

Double Play

The All Stars pulled a nice double play in the second when Norma Strickland took Shirley Smith's drive and then caught Kay Doughty at first, who had previously singled to right to start the innings for the visitors. Kay Doughty, the catcher for the Toronto team, in five times at bat scored three runs, got three hits, one of them a homer, and walked once.

Phyllis Rome scored the All Stars only run. She was first up in the third and laid down a nice roller which Carpalbo failed to field, she was advanced to second and third by sacrifices of Aggie Anderson and Norma Strickand and scored when June Schofield dropped Eleanor Craig's drive. The All Stars put two on in the fourth on hits by Isobel Bullock and Nona Whetung, but the innings ended with Phyllis Rome popping to first base. In the fifth Norma Strickland bunted safely after one was out, but was caught making second in a double play on Marg. Hawthorne's hit to short.

The sixth, seventh and eighth innings with Golden pitching saw the All Stars go down in a row.

The Toronto team in the fourth: Tony Morrison, the first one up, bunted safely, Marie Kirkpatrick was called out when she fouled a bunt, Kelly Parkhouse lifted one to Aggie Anderson, Kay Doughty hit a home run into deep left scoring Tiny Morrison, Shirley Smith also hit into left and made second and third on wild pitches, and Verna McCormick struck out.

June Schofield was safe in the fifth when her fly was dropped in left field, Thelma McRae walked, Theresa Carpalbo struck out, Tiny Morrison walked to fill the bases, Marie Krkpatrick sacrificed to score June Schofield, Kelly Parkhouse lifted one to Eleanor Craig.

Change Pitchers

Joyce Withers started the sixth. Kay Doughty hit over short, stole second and made third on a passed ball, Shirley Smith sacrificed her home, McCormick walked, June Schofield hit into centre field and Thelma McRae into left scoring Verna McCormick, Carpalbo lifted one to left fielder and Tiny Morrison to right fielder.

Marie Kirkpatrick started the wild seventh with a hit over second, made second on a wild pitch, Kelly Parkhouse walked and Joyce Withers went to the showers, Isobel Bullock walked Kay Doughty to fill the bases and Shirley Smith's single scored Kirkpatrick and Parkhouse, McCormick singled scoring Doughty, and June Schofield's hit scored Smith and McCormick, Thelma McRae lifted one to Marg. Hawthorne to end the innings.

LAWN BOWLING

By HERB MARTIN

On Wednesday afternoon (only) at 1.30 o'clock we are holding a mixed doubles tournament—fee 50c per couple, with three 10-end games and choose your own partner. The committee will accept as an entry a lady and gentleman or two ladies, but not two gentlemen. This tournament will in no way interfere with the men's doubles to be held at 7 o'clock in the evening.

The ladies' games committee has asked us to announce that the schedule games which were rained out on July 20 must be played not later than Thursday, August 24.

In Toronto Saturday at Withrow Lawn Bowling Club, C. Renaud of our club, supported by Mrs. Renaud, Mrs. J. Arnold and C. Williamson, won the "Oakley" Trophy. We believe that this is one of the biggest mixed rink tournaments to be held in Toronto. It is the first time the trophy has ever come to Peterborough. Congratulations are offered to the members of this rink.

The Saturday night mixed tournaments seems to be as popular as ever. It was again patronized by a goodly crowd.

The winning rinks were:

1st: Miss Williams, J. Withers, Mrs. R. Hendry, R. F. Downey (skip).

2nd: Mrs. G. Spence, C. Mowry, F. French, C. Lawrence (skip).

3rd: F. Reed, R. Brown, E. Coleman, H. Northrup (skip).

All received War Savings Stamps.

London And Galt Team Finalists In Inter-County Senior League

By The Canadian Press

London Baseball Club and Galt Terriers qualified for the Inter County Senior Baseball championship finals Saturday by eliminating their respective semi-final rivals. London eased Waterloo Tigers out of the running with a 3-0 decision on the losers' diamond for the second straight victory, although pitcher Tommy White was on the spot a couple of times and the losers had 12 men stranded on the bases.

At Stratford, the Nationals dropped their second successive match to the Terriers, 14-9, the winners having the edge with their Brantford battery, Pitcher J. Torti and Catcher Clark, plus Angelo Torti as relief twirler. Each team committed nine errors.

In the Junior Inter County final series, Terrier Pups went into the lead, two games to one, with an 8-2 triumph against Kitchener at Galt, the homesters scoring all their runs in the first three innings. Moundsman L. Laflomme fanned 11 of the Terrier Pups in his eight frames.

Kitchener Juveniles captured an Inter-County championship by polishing off Stratford 10-6 at Kitchener for their second win in a row and now face Ingersoll in the O.B.A. playdowns.

For the second year Kitchener Midgets took their series title in the Inter County loop by defeating Stratford 8-2 in the third and deciding game of the playoffs and will meet Hamilton in O.B.A. competition. Johnny Rodina held Stratford to five hits and fanned nine.

In the first of the O.B.A. playdowns at Ingersoll, Woodstock Juveniles set back the locals 9-7.

The Niagara Senior semi-finals became deadlocked at two games apiece when St. Catharines-Merritton Combines smashed Hamilton 13-2 on the latter's grounds, lacing out 16 hits in the process.

Senators Take Twin Bill From Browns

By JOE REICHLER,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

Visions of an All-St. Louis World's Series for the first time in Major League history may be just that — a vision.

The pennant-hungry Browns of St. Louis watched their first place lead dwindle to a mere 3½ games over Boston Red Sox as they bowed twice yesterday to the cellar-dwelling Washington Senators 4-2 and 12-1 to suffer their fourth straight defeat, their longest losing streak of the year.

The Red Sox became a pennant threat by vanquishing Cleveland Indians twice 8-6 and 11-4. They pound out 26 hits in the twin bill, 16 of them in the nightcap.

Detroit Tigers joined the dog-fight for the flag by sweeping a pair from New York Yankees 4-3 and 9-8, taking over third place from the Yankees, only five games away from the Browns.

Dizzy Trout gained his 20th triumph in the nightcap as he helped his own cause with a two-run homer his fourth of the season. Trout joins his teammate Hal Newhouser as the only 20-game winners in the majors.

Pittsburgh Pirates increased their second-place lead over Cincinnati Reds to two games by conquering Brooklyn Dodgers twice 10-7 and 7-1. Jim Russel hit a pinch-hit homer with the bases full in the seventh inning of the opener. Four Dodgers, Bobby Bragan, Luis Olmo, Whitlow Wyatt and acting-manager Charlie Dressedn were banished from the games for arguing. They joined Manager Leo Durocher, suspended Saturday for five days.

13 Loss for Cubs.

After losing the opener 7-4 to Chicago Cubs for their 13th straight defeat, New York Giants, behind Bill Voiselle's five-hit pitching, ended their slump, winning 3-1. Joe Medwick had a field day with seven hits in eight at bats.

Rookie Woody Rich pitched Boston Braves to a 5-3 victory over St. Louis Cardinals for his first National League victory, after the Cards had drubbed the Braves 15-5 in the opener.

Philadelphia Athletics and Chicago White Sox divided a twin bill, the Sox winning the opener 3-2 and the A's the aftermath 8-3.

Bucky Walters pitched and batted his way to his 18th victory of the season as Cincinnati Reds defeated Philadelphia Phillies 3-2 in a 12-inning opener of a twin bill. The Phils won the second game.

WILL RETIRE?—Reports say that Mervyn (Red) Dutton, popular managing director of the National Hockey League since the death of the late president, Frank Calder, will decline an invitation to accept the presidency at a meeting of the governors in Montreal early next month. It is said he will retire from professional hockey activity for the duration, because of pressure of private business.

TORONTO, Aug. 21.— (CP).— Now he's in, now he's out—. Mervyn Red Dutton is keeping everyone on the hot spot waiting for his announcement whether he will lead the N.H.L. this winter or retire to his contracting business. Concensus of opinion is Red will return to developing bulldozer drivers rather than accept the many and weighty cares of N.H.L. president. However, this suspense is providing a pile of good publicity for the coming hockey season.

Get Oshawa!

If Oshawa Generals stomp to the Ontario junior hockey championship again this winter, opposing teams may get a little comfort from the "no-replacement" rule proposed by the hockey moguls in session at Toronto. If adopted, it will prevent the various junior branch champions from adding to their strength, as was done last winter when four players could be legally taken on when the branch champions entered inter-provincial playoffs.

Post-War Plans.

Mel Harwood, one-time N. H. L. referee and now a U.S. coast guardsman, says that hockey will spread like wildfire through the U. S. after the war. He thinks the best ground for expansion of the ice game will be in the amateur and minor pro ranks. Incidentally, he says the smartest hockey promoters in the game are not in the N.H.L., but in the larger minor loops

Incidentally.

Hamilton Wildcats haven't chosen a coach yet, but the situation was a mite clarified when Ross Trimble announced he wouldn't be in the running for the Hamilton club job or any other coaching chore. Though the team officials were soured on Timmis, some pressure is being brought to bear to have him return to the helm.... Vincent Provencher and Clement Couture, two youthful flingers from Drummondville, Que., are getting the eagle eye from Toronto bossman Burleigh Grimes as possible Maple Leaf fodder....Strangest horse sale in some time was that staged in Vancouver, when a group of Vancouver horsemen (including one woman) rolled the dice for 11 brood mares in foal offered by Charlie Hemstead. They paid $12,000 sight unseen for the breeding stock.

Sports Spice

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.
Associated Press Sport Writer

NEW YORK, Aug. 21—(AP)— Looks as if the United States tennis championships at Forest Hills Labor Day week-end will be strictly a feminine show...Off the entries received so far, Lieut. Don McNeil shouldn't have any competition for the men's title if he's in condition but the gals not only will have all the top-flight stars on hand but so far this season they haven't paid the slightest attention to form (that is, playing form)...Any one of a half-dozen girls might win.

Suggestion Noted

Arguing that baseball "hasn't changed since fouls first were ruled as strikes," Dr. Clarence Rungee of New Haven, Conn., propose six-inning games with four outs in each inning...His idea is that players would "sprint" all the way, just as runners have stepped up the pace for the mile instead of coasting through three quarters and then cutting loose...Also, "there would be three less times for the players to the field and return and three less times for the pitchers to warm up between innings," Rungee adds. ...That's our idea of a real improvement.

Spill In Sixth Highlights Meet

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y., Aug. 21.—(AP). — A spill in the sixth race which injured horse and driver highlighted a featureless event at the Saratoga Raceway Saturday night.

Chin Up, driven by Frank Church of Cambridge, N.Y., was racing easily in second place as the field went into the back turn for the second time. Suddenly he faltered and pulled out, almost tangling with the horse behind. She staggered a few lengths and fell, throwing Church over the infield fence.

The horse had "choked up," losing her wind and was unable to breathe. Church was down for about five minutes. He suffered a wrench leg and possible rib fractures, but drove the eighth race. The horse was lamed in the fall.

Newark Bears Hold Top Spot In International

(By The Canadian Press).

What makes the Newark Bears tick?

That's what the seven other clubs of the International League are wondering today, for the Bears are on top of the Baltimore Orioles, previous tenants of the league lead.

The Bears' rise from the cellar, where they languished July 6, to first place is a tale of steady pitching, clutch hitting and the will to win. Yesterday they swept a twin bill from Jersey City 6-5 and 6-1.

But if the Bears are hot, Toronto Maple Leafs are sizzling. The Leafs won their ninth and 10th in a row as they took two from Montreal, 5-3 and 4-2, and drove to within 3½ games of third place. Harry Jordan won the first game, although he needed help from Earl Cook and tall Alex Mustaikis. Woody Crowson went the route in the nightcap, his shutout was spoiled only when Red Wurrett homered in the 7th.

By splitting with Baltimore, 2-11 and 3-1, the Red Wings tumbled the Orilols from first place. The opener, in which nine pitchers were used, Lou Sakas was the winner, Red Embree taking the loss. The second game was under Sam Lowry's control all the way.

Buffalo took two from Syracuse, 8-7 and 7-5. Andy Seminick, Hank Oana, each with one, and Otto Denning with two home runs all helped Joe Orrell to the decision in the first game. Eddie Kobesky came back in the finale to pole home runs numbers 22 and 23 to retain his league lead in that department.

Havelock IOOF Observes Decoration Day

HAVELOCK, Aug. 21 (ENS) — A large crowd was in attendance Sunday at the annual Decoration Day Service of Royal Lodge, I.O.O.F. No. 286 and Rebekah Lodge No. 98 which was held at Maple Grove Cemetery.

The members formed up in front of their lodge rooms on Quebec street and marched to the cemetery led by the band of the Midland Regiment from Campbellford under the direction of bandmaster E. C. Tolman. he service was opened by the singing of "O God Our Help in Ages Past" followed by prayer by the Chaplain E. J. Leeson, P.D.D.-G.M.

Place Flowers

The ceremony for the placing of the floral tributes on the plot for the late members of the Rebekah Lodge was conducted by Miss Minnie Williams, V.N.G., Mrs. R. McCutcheon, N.G., and Mrs. W. Woodbeck, secretary, these being placed in the form of a cross, while G. Kennedy and F. McKenzie officiated for the I.O.O.F. ceremony.

Rev J. W. Wilkinson of Havelock United Church delivered the address, standing at the foot of the floral cross. He stated that it was the task of the Christian church not only to preach the gospel but to go to the foot of the cross. He spoke of the scene on Calvary, of the great love portrayed there and of Christ's words of remembrance to John "Son behold thy mother" and "mother behold thy son" and connecting this thought with those who had been called from this life to their home beyond.

Way Of Remembering

The reading of their names from the lodge's book, he said, brought remembrances of their services in the home, the community, the church and the lodge. He closed his address with a poem, which was found on the body of an unknown soldier who was killed in action in Italy. Mr. Wilkinson stressed the fact that each one should make sure that their name was written in the Lamb's Book of Life.

A selection by the band, a short address by Carman Coon, acting Noble Grand brought the service to a close.

Civilian Gasoline Showing Decline

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20 — The problem of maintaining civilian stocks of gasoline is becoming difficult as refineries' production drops behind consumer demand, Deputy Petroleum Administrator Ralph K. Davies said.

Discussing the current tight gasoline situation throughout the nation, Mr. Davies said:

"Primarily, the situation is one of a shortage of supply. Crude oil production is at a record high and likewise refinery output is at its peak. But military requirements leave less and less gasoline available for civilian use.

"Refineries are unable to keep pace wtih the present demand of the civilian consumer under current allocations, and the nation's stockpile of civilian gasoline is diminshing at a fast rate.

"The nation's refineries are producing maximum quantities of petroleum products do not have additional capacity to produce as much gasoline as is needed to offset the heavy draft of civilian inventories.

"The country's stockpile of civilian gasoline has been declining for the lats eight weeks, and during the last 30 days stocks have been reduced more than 2,000,000 barrels.

"There just is not enough gasoline available anywhere to more than meet the very minimum requirements of essential civilian demands."

SMITH YOUTH OVERSEAS

In the Canadian Army a little over a year, having enlisted in July, 1943, Pte. Gordon Heigh, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Heigh, R.R. 2, Peterborough, is serving overseas with the R.C.A.M.C. Prior to his enlistment, the 20-year-old soldier worked on the farm.

TRAIN TICKET FOUND.

The Police Department reported this afternoon that they have had a serviceman's return furlough ticket to Ottawa, handed in at the station. The owner can collect it from the police.

NO WEEK-END RAIN

Farmers begin today another week with a slight morning promise of rain drifting away before the sun that was in full command of the sky by noon. Continuing lack of moisture is creating a rural problem that is almost bound to be reflected in depleted supplies, especially in milk, if August persists in its weeks of drought.

HAS BAD FALL

Broken glass on Armour road, north of Downer's Corners, punctured a tire of the bicycle on which E. L. Ainsley, 225 King George street, was riding Sunday afternoon throwing him over the handle bars in a heavy fall. Mr. Ainsley suffered bruises to his face and arms, and was taken to his home in the city police car that was called by radio communication.

HE WAS SMOKING.

Two youngsters, one 14, the other 16, were told by members of the Lions club on duty at the swimming pool and bathing beach last week, that underage boys were not allowed to smoke on the playground. "The cops see me smoking and never say a thing," one piped back. Both, however, decided to postpone their smoking while on the grounds when they were given a bit of sound advice by one of the Lions. The boys also admitted they had no trouble buying cigarettes in the stores.

HE LIKES BEER.

Spectators at the Inverlea regatta were amzed Saturday when an 8-year-old boy sauntered through the crowd carrying a pint of beer with a straw in it. He had had several nips from the bottle when one man asked him where he got it. "From my Daddy," was the answer. The bottle was immediately confiscated, much against the wishes of the boy.

CAME FOURTH

One of the highlights of the Regatta held Saturday at Inverlea, was when 12-year-old Ray Fowler, competing in his first long distance swim, came fourth in the mile. The son of Mr. and Mrs. C. Fowler, 195 Rubidge street, Ray has been swimming since he was seven years old. Mrs. Fowler, who attended the regatta earlier in the afternoon, left just before the mile swim took place, because she didn't think her son would enter it. "I sure was surprised when he came home carrying a cup for coming fourth," Mrs. Fowler said.

A SUGGESTION.

Dan Douglas came to bat to-day with a suggestion that seems to have merit. He wants to know why the T-wharf in Little Lake, opposite the Crescent stretet shoreline, could not be used as a bandstand. It would be a simple matter to keep the children off the wharf. A few more benches and lights and the stage would be set. Canoeists and others in boats could hear the concert from the water, and people all around the lake would enjoy the music as it travels readily over water. There is ample parking space along the shore.

ORCHIDS TO THE SERGEANT.

Normally in life, the poor sergeant is the man every soldier wants to shoot or hang, but this time an arm sergeant deserves a big bouquet. He is Sgt. Alf. Pink of the Exhibition Camp who was responsible for the regatta at Inverlea on Saturday. It was a grand affair, well managed and a huge crowd enjoyed it. He was given valuable assistance by Chief Gimblett, Parks Commissioner Butcher, Gordon Minty and Ruth Choate, the lifeguard at Inverlea.

WEEK-END FIRE ALARMS

Two alarms called out firemen Sunday afternoon and evening, the only occurences rpeorted over the week-end. The first was caused by a burning cigarette butt dropped through a sidewalk grate in front of Bacon's Barber Shop, Charlotte street; and the other was the result of the refrigerator motor at the Uptown Tobacco Shop, 439 George street, becoming overheated. No damage was caused.

NOT THE SAME

Nicholas De Carlo, who lives at 118 Sophia street, is not the Nicholas De Carlo whose name appeared in the police court news last week.

Children's Work Continues To Aid Victims

Since the month of August began, young school children have been quite to the forefront in raising money to assist the sufferers from robot bomb attacks over Britain, through the Peterborough and District Fund operating for that purpose, for out of fifteen reports that have appeared since the month began, their work has formed the main subject in this column on eight different occasions, which is slightly better than a 50 per cent average.

Today's subject also goes to the credit of these youngsters, this particular occasion bringing three Perry street girls, Beverly Hamblin, and Marion and Esther Brown into the spotlight, the two latter of whom have staged efforts for this fund on two previous occasions.

Choosing the family residence at 210 Perry street as the scene of their operations, they held a sale of homemade taffy, which was made for them by parents and neighbors, and in addition to this they solicited donations in cash, which in all amounted to $7.50 credited in their name today.

In once again reflecting how children can put their school holidays to such splendid use, in this manner by doing good for others, parents themselves must also get much satisfaction in seeing their offspring at such useful and needful work in these days of stress, for child welfare problems often sum up in finding something for them to engage their idle moments, there being as much truth as there is poetry in the adage that "Satan still will find some mischief for idle hands to do."

Many and various are the wrinkles thought up by the members of the Coffee Club to do a good turn in some way or other for other folk, the latest wrinkle being a sort of double event through one habitue being faced with the possibility of hunting people to buy five books of tickets on a car, the major prize at a carnival held most recently.

Exacting fifty cents from each of the members present with even the proverbial kicker joining in a few mornings ago, he proceeded to have someone outside the immediate circle pull five names out of the hat, these five each receiving a book, and the balance of $3 over and above the purchase price is listed in today's acknowledgments in the name of the club members.

Three penny boxes are listed today, collections having been made from these assists to the fund located in Grafton's Ltd., Zellers Store, and Warnes Jewellery Store, these bringing the total from this source of fund revenue up to the splendid sum of $2,322.16.

Personals List Wednesday

The response to the special appeal for personal gifts is still continuing, no form of helping being just comparable to this in an individual sense, the next report of this nature being allotted to next Wednesday's report, for which there already is a more than usual number on hand, and all such received at the fund headquarters by Tuesday evening will be included in this special account.

Cpl. Kennedy went overseas in November, 1941 and was employed by Johnson Motors of Peterborough prior to enlisting.

Bill Lech Wins Mile Swim Race At First Inverlea Regatta

Bill Lech, Dominion Junior Swimming champion, won the men's mile swim, the feature event at the Inverlea Regatta, held Saturday afternoon at Inverlea Park. The first prize for the swim was a silver cup, donated by the Sergeants' Mess, No. 32. Previously announced as an open mile swim, it was changed before the Regatta began to two separate mile swims; for women and men. Mrs. E. Hopkins took first prize in the women's mile swim.

A large crowd turned out to support the regatta, the first ever held at Inverlea. Sgt. Alf Pink, well-known in athletic circles, conceived the idea for, and organized the event, after presenting a regatta at Mount Julian, Stoney Lake, some time before.

The Sea Cadet Band marched to the Park at Inverlea early in the afternoon. Refreshment booths, with proceeds going to the British War Victims' Fund, were operated throughout the day, manned by youngsters recruited from the children who swim at Inverlea.

Diversified Program

Diving contests, canoe races, and swimming races for all ages rounded out the program, for valuable prizes. Among the feature attractions at the regatta, was a program of motion pictures, presented by the Natonal Film Board.

Many lifeguards were on duty, most of whom volunteered from the Training Centre. Other lifeguards were Andrews, from Toronto, Dorothy Murphy and Al Revoy, who kept watch over the contestants in the swimming and boating.

The helpers in the refreshment booth were: John Simpson, Ron. Wood, Jimmy Fowler, John Haugh, Nancy McIvor, Joyce Simpson.

The Sea Cadet band, along with giving a precision drill during the afternoon, also played two concerts. R. Ward, from the National Film Board, Ottawa, showed an entertaining program of Canadian films, topped off with a gigantic sing-song, in which all took part. Gordon Minty was the judge of the diving events; and three firemen were present in case their help should be required for artificial respiration.

The official judges of the contests were Joyce Darrell, and Audrey Stinson, Vern Janeway was starter.

The Inverlea Regatta was a big success, mostly due to the untiring work by Sgt. Pink. Cooperation by Parks Commissioner Butcher, Mayor James Hamilton, and members of the city council is also acknowledged.

LAC. Paul Meiklejohn Back From Overseas

LAC Paul Meiklejohn, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. Meiklejohn, McDonnel street, has returned from overseas and is spending a month's furlough with his parents, after which he will report to Toronto for further posting.

The young airman, who left Collegate to join the R.C.A.F. in May 1942, trained as a radio technician and won his sparks at Clinton. He went overseas in April 1943 and has been there since that time. He did not return as a casualty.

LAC Meiklejohn is another of the Peterborough boys who have married in England. He wed Miss Joyce Wells of Newcastle-On-Tyne, December, 1943, and although she has not yet arrived in Canada, she will come when passenger travel can be arranged.

BACK FROM OVERSEAS—LAC. Paul Meiklejohn, who has been overseas since April, 1943, has returned and is spending a month's furlough with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. Meiklejohn, McDonnel street. He was a radio technician with the R.C.A.F.

Girl Aged 11 Wins Kiwanis Car

An 11-year-old girl, Wilma Grace Hewitt, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Hewitt, 535 Rogers street, was the winner of the draw for the 1941 Dodge sedan, outstanding prize of the Kiwanis Club's 1944 carnival, at the conclusion of the two evenings of festivities at Riverside Park Saturday night.

The ticket had been purchased for her by her father, night foreman at the Farmers' Cooperative, who bought a book of tickets last Monday when the car was parked on George street and divided them among his family. The Hewitts already have a car, but state that they will most likely dispose of their present automobile in favor of the one that Lady Luck has deposited at their door.

Saturday evening witnessed an even larger crowd swarming the carnival grounds than was the case Friday, and the booths were still going strong when the car draw was made at 11:30 p.m., a half-hour later than the time originally scheduled. Indications are that the receipts for Kiwanis charities and war work, aided by the large sale of tickets on the automobile, will exceed any figures of recent years.

Mr. and Mrs. P. Schweir, 499 Albert street, received word over the week-end that their son, Gnr. Gerald (Jerry) Ralph Schweir, has been reported slightly wounded August 14, while fighitng in France. No particulars about the injury were given.

Prior to enlisting in 1941, the young soldier was employed at Mendel Braud's Chamberlain street store and the Kawartha Golf Club.

WOUNDED IN FRANCE—Gnr. Gerald (Jerry) Schweir, son of Mr. and Mrs. P. Schweir, 499 Albert street, has been slightly wounded while fighting with the R.C.A. in France. No further details are available about the nature of his injuries.

KILLED OVERSEAS — Gnr. Thomas Leo Laton, serving with an anti-tank regiment overseas, has been killed, according to word received by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Levi Laton of Havelock.

Gnr. T. L. Laton Killed Overseas

HAVELOCK, Aug. 21.—(ENS). — Mr. and Mrs. Levi Laton of Havelock, have been officially notified that thier son, Gunner Thomas Leo Laton of an anti-tank regiment, has been killed in action in England August 9. While no particulars were given, the parents believe it was during a robot bomb raid.

Gunner Laton enlisted in 1940, receiving his training at Petawawa and in Quebec, going overseas in October, 1941. Prior to his enlistment he worked as a carpenter, and also helped his father in farm work. There are two other sons serving, Sapper Francis Laton with the Royal Canadian Engineers overseas, where he has been for three years, and Pte. Levi Laton, who is in training in Kingston.

Kenneth Nice Dies Of Wounds

After receiving a telegram from Ottawa last week announcing that their son Paratrooper Kenneth Nice was wounded, Mr. and Mrs. T. G. Nice, 581 Douglas Avenue, were notified this morning that he died on August 9, the day after he was wounded.

The young soldier trained in many parts of Canada and the United States, including Fort Benning, Georgia. He went overseas during the summer of 1942 and has since been attached to the Toronto Scottish Regiment. No other details about the nature of his injuries have been received.

A brother Pte. Allen Nice, is with the Canadian Army overseas.

He is one of the few paratroopers from Peterborough to have been killed in action. Sgt. Emmett Guerin was killed a few months ago in Italy, where he was a member of the Special Tank Force.

Paratrooper Nice is believed to be the first such casualty reported from Normandy.

Kawartha Club Retains Inter-Club Cup

The Glover-Dobbin Trophy will rest on the mantel of the Kawartha Golf Club for another year. Although the Peterborough Club players defeated their visitors Saturday afternoon, 48 points to 36, they were not strong enough to overtake the 22-point lead established by the Kawartha golfers at their home course three weeks ago.

A very large crowd turned out and the weatherman did his best to make a perfect day. Fairways were hard and lent a tremendous roll to any well-hit ball. Some very fair scores were made and a sweepstake was held for each club. In the Peterborough sweep, O. E. Degraw took top honors with a noble effort against par, turning in a 76 gross. In the second flight Stanley Longhurst made 88 the hard way with 44 out and 44 in. Net scores showed some sub-par figures, and in the words of a popular song, "There'll be some changes made." Charlie Westbrook will have some teeth pulled for beating the old man by 3 strokes with a 90-24 handicap for net 66. M. G. Hardill now rounds into form with an 85, 18-67 for low net in the first flight. The handicap committee is reaching for the axe on this player, who always lays them on the line when it really counts. Many players Saturday did not take the opportunity of playing in the sweep, so leaving very few prizes to be distributed. This should prove disappointing to players like Tom Rodgers, Jim Wharry or Gordon Munroe, all of whom turned in net 69s, usually good enough to take home the bacon. Charlie Low burnt up the already parched fairways with a hot 72, going out in 34 and back again with 38. To Charlie goes the prize for low gross in the visitors' sweepstakes first flight handicaps of 1 to 20. In the second flight, 20 or over, Leo Ackford put together the best 89 shots he has hit in many a day for the other low gross. D. A. Macivor surprised the boys by throwing an eighty at them for a low net in the second bracket of 63.

BANCROFT BOY MISSING — Paratrooper Wallace Price, who was born in Bancroft, was reported missing in France in July and no further word as to his whereabouts have been received. He trained in Peterborough and went overseas a year ago. His father, Russell Price, is in Italy, and a brother, Bruce, in the R.C.N.V.R.

"Handicappers please note." Nice going, Mac. B. Bailey took home a little money with a 99-32, net 67. Other brisk scores just out of the money but worth mentioning were H. M. King's 99-30, net 69; J. Menzies with 89-18 net 71, nearly making the blue ribbon group. Orlie Degraw used up all his good shots Saturday and did not have enough left in his bag to turn back Joe Watson in their match towards the club championship. Orlie was having trouble with his putter and Joe always a threat kept plugging away to take the match 5 up and 4 to go. Watson now meets Abbott to decide which shall wait in the top bracket for bottom finalists.

Russ Kitchen and Herb Bradburn have not been able to play their match yet and this pair are urged to arrange a game at once. Stan Payne awaits the winner for the final assault on this cvoeted trophy.

All matches not brought up to date this week will be disqualified.

Horticultural Society Judges 600 Gardens

More than 600 Victory gardens have been judged this year, W. C. Wilks, secretary of the Horticultural Society, told the Examiner today in a boost for the society's flower show at the market hall Thursday and Friday nights this week.

"During these last four years the efforts of the Society have been directed toward food production through victory gardens, and this number I have just mentioned is an indication of what has been quietly accomplished. Co-operating with the local Wartime Housing committee and other groups, our society has had a hand in the production of tons of fresh green produce.

"For the first time since hostilities began we are resuming our flower and vegetable show, and we are asking for the support of the growers more than ever. We are also having an aquarium show as a new feature, but first of all we need the best co-operation our flower growers can give us. We are asking for their exhibits this year because it is not so easy getting back into the stride of the flower show after everything has been suspended for four years."

Proceeds go to the Women's Auxiliary of the Canadian Legion.

The junior show is being held at the same time as the senior, and parents are requested to note the dates and other details. Entries may be made from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. Wednesday (this week) and from 9 a.m. to 12 a.m. Thursday. Door and attendance prizes are on display in Grafton's window.

3 Cars Damaged In Traffic Crash

Three cars were damaged in a traffic crash at Simcoe and Stewart Streets on Saturday afternoon. South-bound on Stewart Street, William Payne, 196 River Road, was in collision with a car driven easterly by Morris Mandell, 545 Homewood Avenue, and was deflected against the third automobile, owned by rs. Margaret Kernohan, and parked in front of 359 Stewart Street.

From his investigation of the accident, Constable Gordon Trennum reported that the Payne car showed skid marks of 42 feet 10 inches after caroming from the Mandell car to the place where it stopped on the west side of Stewart Street.

Damage included a bumper and spring of the Mandell car, and to Mrs. Kernohan's the right front tire flattened and rim, bumper and fender damaged

Payne's right front bumper was crushed, also headlight, bumper and part of the radiator, and the running board and rear fender on the right side.

Constable Trennum reported that Payne told him he was alone in his automobile, but Mandell said he saw two girls jump out of Payne's car and run easterly on Simcoe Street. Trennum also reported that he had found a pint bottl of beer in Payne's car.

Fergus Mongraw, aJmes Street, was sentenced this morning by Magistrate Langley to two months in jail for theft of a meat loaf from Canada Packers Limited, with whom he was employed. He had pleaded guilty to the charge.

Lindsay Legion Has Memorial Service

Branch No. 67 of the Canadian Legion, Lindsay, held its decoration and memorial service at Kawartha Park on Sunday, August 20. Rev. C. D. Cross, B.A., of St. Paul's Anglican Church, was chairman, and assisted in prayers by Rev. J. J. Black of Cambridge Street United Church. The speaker was Rev. R. Harmer, B.A., B.D., of Cambridge Street Baptist Church, who spoke of veterans of both the First Great War and the present conflict who have paid the supreme sacrifice.

Aussies Reject Government Post-War Plan

BY J. E. HOLDSWORTH

SYDNEY, Australia, Aug. 21 — (CP) — Australians rejected by a vote of 1,733,978 to 1,506,846 Saturday the Government's request for sweeping powers to carry out its postwar planning, it was shown in figures released last night.

Votes cast by servicemen in various parts of the world have yet to be counted, but cannot affect the result, because the measure required not only a majority of votes, but a majority in four of the six States.

The only States in which a small majority showed were South Australia and Western Australia, where a negative vote had been expected. Strong opposition developed in New South Wales and Queensland, where Labor has its greatest representation, and the only two States where State Parliaments had gone on record as favoring the Government's plan.

Prime Minister Curtin said today he was "disappointed, but not surprised" by the result, and added: "It now remains for those who oppose our plan to produce a plan. Otherwise Australia will face an era of great difficulty."

Feared Conscription of Labor

Attorney-General H. V. Evatt, who led the Government's campaign in favor of the plan, attributed its defeat to the loss of regular Labor support in consequence of unjustified fears of postwar industrial conscription.

Under the Australian Constitution the Commonwealth Government is limited in peacetime in its jurisdiction over certain phases of national life. The National Security Act, which extends the Governmental powers greatly, expires soon after the end of the war.

Late in 1942 the Government called a convention of Commonwealth and State political leaders and drafted a 14-point program which would give the Government greatly increased peacetime powers for five years if approved in a referendum. At the end of the five-year period another referendum would determine whether the powers should be continued.

State Premiers approved the measure and agreed to urge their Parliaments to endorse it, but ratification was given freely only in New South Wales and Queensland.

The Fourteen Points.

The proposed law would have given the Government power to make laws respecting: 1, Care of returned servicemen and their dependents; 2, employment and unemployment; 3, organized marketing of commodities; 4, companies; 5, trusts, combines and monopolies; 6, profiteering and prices; 7, production and distribution of goods; 8, control of overseas exchange and overseas investment; 9, air transport; 10, uniformity of railway gauges; 11, national works; 12, national health; 13, family allowances; 14, aborigines.

The voters' "no" rejected the whole plan.

Referring to Labor's fear of the plan, the Sydney Morning Herald said Labor had "seen the substance of power pass from their elected representatives to the new bureaucracy.

"They've been ridden by regulations, browbeaten and generally pushed around," the Herald added. "Their mails have been opened and the contents used in policing minor wartime offenses. Here they have seen the whole daily press of Sydney suspended from publicaion (a reference to a recent dispute between the Government and the papers over censorship regulations).

"It is no wonder that popular mistrust and anger have been generated by the stifling proceedings about which Ministers have been complaisant."

The Sunday Telegraph ,which had advocated a "yes" vote, said many Australians who realized that unified powers are necessary had been stung by resentment over recent "maladministration" to register a vote of censure."

He Was Tired

INDIANAPOLIS, Aug. 21—(AP).—A burglar, apparently not satisfield with his loot, decided to steal a snooze—and that was his undoing. Police thought an alarm from a jewelry and loan firm was false until they spied the intruder snoring away behind a counter—his pockets bulging with $300 worth of valuables.

Much-Traded Car

SOMEWHERE IN SOUTHERN FRANCE, Aug. 21 — (AP).—Lieut. Bill Lyut, of Jersey City, N.J., 'discovered' a big sedan abandoned by German generals on D-Day. He traded it to Capt. Kenneth Barnaby, East Orange, N.J., for a yellow parachute. Barnaby tried to ford the river in the car and tore out the undercarriage and damaged the motor. So he traded it to a French unit for one chicken and seven eggs. When last seen the sedan was being driven by an American lieutenant. Details of the last trade were lacking.

Paris Virtually Flanked In Latest Push

By DE WITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

The German disaster in Western Europe has intensified over the week-end, both in the Paris theatre and in Southern France.

One of the most notable developments is the establishment of a bridgehead across the Seine at Mantes, 25 miles northwest of the capital, by one of Lt. Gen. Patton's armored columns. This was achieved while other American units continued their sweep around the south of Paris, thus threatening to flank the nerve centre of France.

The cutting of the Seine at Mantes is of vast importance strategically. It means that the remnants of Nazi Field Marshal Von Kluge's battered 7th Army, which have been retreating toward the Seine from the Normandy defeat, now are in a huge bowl-shaped trap whose lid is the river and a short stretch of coast south-west of the Seine's mouth.

Since all the bridges have been destroyed by the Allied air forces, the only means the Nazis have of escaping is by barges—and our bombers are circling the sky ready to pounce on them.

While this presents a grim picture we shouldn't assume that none of the Germans can escape. Probably considerable numbers already have made the crossing and others are likely to do so. Once they are on the northern bank of the Seine they will join strong elements of the Nazi 15th Army which is holding there. However, the retreat will be terribly costly in men and in equipment for the Hitlerites.

Moreover, with Paris virtualy flanked, the Nazis will have difficulty in defending any part of the line of the Seine. If they can't hold this line they will have to beat a retreat northward, taking their English Channel forces with them. In short, the Germans are in a nasty predicament which presages a wholesale withdrawal to their inner defences on the Rhine.

Proof there's still plenty of fight left in the Hitlerites came last night when the forces which are surrounded in the Falaise trap in Normandy made a determined attempt to break out. The Canadians took them on, and a fierce battle raged throughout the night, with heavy casualties on both sides. Dawn found the Canadians the victors and to-day the trapped troops are under terrific fire from rocket-firing Typhoons and Canadian artillery.

Allied Fliers Aided Maquis Forces

By JOSEPH DYNAN

SOUTHERN FRANCE, Aug. 21—(AP)—With the Allied landings on the French Riviera successfully accomplished it now can be revealed that the Allied general staffs maintained regular plane and parachute communications with Maquis patrols for more than a year prior to the invasion.

As early as September, 1943, Gen. Henri Giraud's staff, established plane routes to the interior of Southern France. French officers dropped by parachute to help organize and direct the Maquis movement.

French and other Allied planes brought in equipment for the Maquis and during the last few weeks huge supplies of British Bren guns were dropped by parachute.

The patriots levelled and guarded an airfield large enough for transport planes to ferry in key personnel and to bring out detailed maps. The planes landed and took off from the field without lights, but operated only in clear weather and during a full moon.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

WHEN NOT TO DOUBLE

ORDINARILY an informative or takeout double is the very best device to use when you are prepared to support a bid of any suit except the one called by your opponent. The careless thinker would tell you offhand that fair length and strength in the other three suits is the ideal situation for such a double. But you should always consider one other factor. Would you be pleased if your partner made a "business pass," called by some a "penalty pass," on a hand of fair strength, with some of it and pretty good strength in the opponent's suit?

North: ♠ A J 7 4; ♥ J; ♦ A 10 9 6 3; ♣ K 6 4
West: ♠ 6 3; ♥ A 8 4; ♦ K Q J 8 5; ♣ Q J 7
East: ♠ Q 5 2; ♥ Q 6 5 2; ♦ 7 4 2; ♣ 10 3 2
South: ♠ K 10 9 8; ♥ K 10 9 7 3; ♦ None; ♣ A 9 8 5

(Dealer: East. North-South vulnerable.)

East	South	West	North
1. Pass	Pass	1 ♦	Pass
Pass	Dbl.
2. Pass	Pass	1 ♦	Pass
Pass	2 ♦	Pass	3 ♠
Pass	4 ♠

This hand occurred in a team of four match with regular total point scoring. And it produced one of the "swings" which helped to decide the result.

Where South doubled, his partner delightedly passed, being sure he could give West's contract a licking. He did, with the aid of his partner, taking two tricks in spades, two in hearts, three in diamonds and two in clubs, a total of nine. That left West only four tricks so he was down three doubled, giving North and South a score of 500.

How much cleverer was South at the second table. Knowing that his bid of the opponent's suit could not very well mislead his partner into thinking he had a powerhouse, since he had passed on his first turn, he made the picture crystal clear. North knew from the bid that South was ready for any suit. A bid of four by him in his spades would have been beyond special criticism, but he made the modest strength shower of just three and South did the rest. This produced a game for the side, better for vulnerable people than a mere 500 which was scored at the first table.

Marmora Legion Decorates Soldier Graves

MARMORA, Aug. 21.—(ENS). — The annual Decoration Day service under auspices of Marmora Branch No. 237, Canadian Legion, was held Sunday afternoon.

A color party and other Legionnaires were present from Campbellford and the Hasting and Prince Edward (Reserve) Band under Lieut. Floyd Ketcheson, also attended. President T. E. Pritchard was in charge. Harold Nayler, for the fallen in the last war, and Corporal Frances Sine of the C.W.A.C. for the fallen in the present war, having placed flowers at the base of the two memorial tablets, a two minute silence was observed, preceded and succeeded by the Last Post and Reveille sounded by George Brooks.

Chooses Own Way.

The parade then went direct to the Public school grounds, where a service of remembrance was held. Hon. Capt. E. M. Cadigan, who was in charge, called upon Reeve W. R. Linn to speak briefly. W. J. Cottrell, diocesan lay leader, took the invocation prayer and Rev. J. Stephenson of Marmora Pentecostal church, then read portion of Hebrews 11 and 12 as the Scripture lesson. Prayers of thanksgiving supplication and intercession were taken by W. J. Cottrell.

The address was delivered by Capt. Cadigan, who chose as his text, 'And it came to pass when Pharaoh had let the people go that God led them not through the way of the land of the Philistines although that was near.' The preacher impressively drew a comparison between the journeying of the children of Israel to the Promised Land and the advance of the cause of freedom in the world in these past thirty years.

When realization looked near, God has said, 'not yet,' but nevertheless is guiding His people just the same. He also mentioned that Christ was tempted to make the leap from the pinnacle of the temple to expedite the conquest of men's hearts but instead He chose to go through the wilderness and to accept the way of the Cross. God is having us pass through the wilderness to-day but there is His guiding hand for us to accept, the minister declared.

Decorate Graves.

The Sacred Heart cemetery was then visited, where graves of departed comrades had been marked with small Union Jacks. Rev. Father H. J. Farrell welcomed the Legion, whom he commended for their work in keeping the memory of comrades fresh each year. He dwelt upon the link between those who paid the supreme sacrifice in this and the last war. Following prayers, flowers were placed on the graves. Before the flowers were deposited, Mr. Pritchard read the list of names whose memory was thus honored. The parade continued to Marmora Protestant cemetery with the same procedure of decoration being carried out.

Capt. Cadigan gave a short address on re-dedication of surviving comrades to the cause which had dominated the hearts of all comrades. Col. A. V. Yates, commanding officer of the Hastings and Prince Edward (Reserve) Regiment, then joined with members of the band, who formed part of a choir at this year's camp, singing 'The Old Rugged Cross." While the graves were being decorated the band played 'Lead Kindly Light.'

Here President Pritchard and Col. Yates thanked all for their cooperation in making the parade successful. Visiting Legionnaires and the band were later served refreshments by the local branch of the Canadian Legion in the Council Chamber.

17-Year-Old Boy Nearly Drowned

BEWDLEY, August 21 — (ENS). —Seventeen-year-old Bob Benson, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Halcot Benson, narrowly escaped drowning here recently. He and Murray Sidey, 15 years old, were swimming a short distance out from the dock about 10:30 in the evening. Benson became exhausted and tried to call. He remembered sinking twice and Murray Sidey, ten feet distant, heard a gurgling sound and called an alarm to shore.

Clare Morton on the dock immediately got a boat, but Sidey knowing that would be too late, swam to his friend, and at considerable risk, grabbing his arm he managed to get him to shore where he was assisted by Clare Morton, another local boy, and a number of others who had gathered.

After care and resting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Nordy Sidey, the young lad was able to return home.

Personal.

The tag day recently held at Bewdley for the Canadian Institute for the Blind and with donations coming in since, has reached the sum of $50.05. Mrs. Harry Goss, an active member of the Port Hope-East Durham Advisory Committee, supervised the young taggers. Bud Goss and Garth Manley on their wheels canvassed the surrounding vicinity a few days previous and assisted in the village tag day with Ann and John Erwin.

Sailors Finish R.C. Chapel InNewfoundland

A NEWFOUNDLAND PORT, Aug. 20—(CP)—End of the task of converting a sagging store built in 1825 into a dignified house of worship was marked here recently when Rev. B. C. Martin, Halifax, Roman Catholic chaplain of the Fleet for the Royal Canadian Navy, blessed and officially opened at St. John's the first Roman Catholic naval chapel ever built in Newfoundland.

To convert the abandoned store, which once did a thriving business in the sale of molasses, rum and fish, into the chapel, 60 sailors contributed voluntary labor, among them several non-Catholics.

In their own time, often late at night, RCN painters, plumbers, electricians, blacksmiths, stokers and men of other trades shared in the work done over a period of six months.

G. B. Murphy of Halifax, senior Roman Catholic naval chaplain in Newfoundland, saw the building's possibilities as a permanent naval chapel and had no trouble renting it for a dollar a year. He and his helpers admitted they did a good deal of "high-class scrounging in the best naval tradition" to get their chapel finished.

The "scrounging" consisted of accepting generous gifts which poured in from ships, shore establishments and civilians. The stations of the Cross were bought with cash contributed by Roman Catholic sailors. The smaller candlesticks for the altar are shell casings from the British cruiser H.M.S. Newfoundland the larger ones, similar casings, from ships of the RCN.

The holy water stoup is the inverted bell of the old steamer SS. Astrobel, with her name and the date of her launching—1677—inscribed on the bell's outer lip.

Listed on shields above the heads of the worshippers in the little church are the names of the first 16 Canadian warships lost in action since war started: Margaree, Spikenard, Raccoon, Charlottetown, Windflower, Louisburg, Weyburn, Ottawa, St. Croix, Levis, Chedabucto, Otter, Fraser, Bras d'Or, Athabaskan and Valleyfield.

Treatment Helps Goitre Condition

LONDON, Ont., August 20—(CP) —Two London physicians, Dr. E. M. Watson, head of the Department of Pathological Chemistry in the University of Western Ontario, and Dr. L. D. Wilcox, have been engaged in research connected with use of a new drug, thiouracil, a sulfa derivative which, though still in the experimental stage of development and not on the market, has produced beneficial results in cases of toxic goitre which may make it rival within the field of hyperthyroidism the famous sulfonamide drugs and penicillin

Originated in the United States, where much research has been done, thiouracil is administered by mouth. In local clinical experiments, of which Drs. Watson and Wilcox have recently published case records in the Journal of the Canadian Medical Association, remarkable results were obtained from the use of thiouracil in eleven cases reported; an even more striking case treated in London is as yet unreported formally, in which mental symptoms of a manic type requiring heavy doses of sedatives and hypnotics to control, cleared up rapidly under thiouracil therapy. Psychotic reactions from toxic goitre in a certain small percentage of such cases.

Dr. G. C. Hale, F.R.C.P. (C.). since 1925 Professor of Medicine in the University of Western Ontario has been appointed Professor Emeritus and has been succeeded as head of the Department of Medicine by Dr. F. J. H. Campbell. Dr. Campbell is also acting Dean of Medicine during the absence on leave of Group Capt. G. E. Hall, Dean of the Faculty, who is at present Directir of Medical Research for the Royal Canadian Air Force.

The pilotless plane continued in with motor roaring for about one quarter mile before crashing and bursting into flames.

Electricity

THE POWER BEHIND OUR NATION'S PROGRESS

By harnessing the surging power of our waterfalls and rivers the Canadian electrical industry unlocked a vast and vital treasure. Nowhere in the world is so much electricity per capita used as in this country. Approximately two out of every three families in the Dominion live in homes served by electricity. More than seven times as much Electric Power is being produced in Canada today as during the last war.

Electricity already has done great things for Canada. Yet Canadian electrification is destined for still greater development and use. Only one-fifth of this nation's potential water power resources have been harnessed. Still further electrical development applied to our other great natural resources—to our land, our minerals, our forests—can help to make Canada one of the richest countries in the world!

But such a programme can succeed only if every responsible citizen will "Think Big" and plan courageously, today. Some measure of planning is already under way—but more is possible. War demands must not for a moment be neglected—yet postwar needs must not be forgotten. For by planning today we prepare for action tomorrow. We prepare work for tomorrow, markets for tomorrow—markets which will absorb our fullest productivity, provide full employment, lay a foundation for our nation's future.

Pioneers in Canada's electrical development, Canadian General Electric has made a host of important contributions to home betterment and industrial progress in the Dominion. The seven great plants of the Company—now concentrating almost exclusively on the production of vital war supplies—are equipped and manned to produce "everything electrical"—from a toaster to a 100,000 horse-power generator.

Nazi Police Arrest Petain; Whisked Away From Hotel

GENEVA, Aug. 22—(AP).—German secret police arrested Marshal Henri Philippe Petain, French "Chief of State," at his residence and headquarters at the Hotel du Parc in Vichy, advices from France said today. The 88-year-old Marshal, hero of Verdun in the First Great War, and head of the German-dominated Vichy government of France since 1940, was reported seized Sunday morning along with a number of associates.

Others reported arrested were a Gen. Bridoux, possibly the Vichy War Secretary Lt.-Gen. Eugene Bridoux; an Admiral Blehaut; one Rochat, general secretary of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs; and Bernard Menetrel, private secretary to Petain.

The swift reported action of the Gestapo seemed an indication the Germans placed no trust in the Marshal.

The most reliable sources said that Petain refused a German request to go with Pierre Laval, the Chief of Government, to the new provisional capital at Belfort, and that the old Marshal was summarily arrested by force. Where he is was not known absolutely, although most guesses were that he is in Germany. Thus the old Chief of State became officially what he has

Fire Menacing Moncton City

FREDERICTON, Aug. 22—(CP).—A forest fire close to the western edge of Moncton to-day was officially reported as "still dangerous for the city of Moncton."

P. M. Harrison of the New Brunswick Department of Lands and Mines said that the blaze in the McKinnon's Siding district near Moncton was "burning fiercely" with more than 1,500 troops and civilian volunteers fighting the flames.

The number of ;fire fighters, Mr. Harrison added, was less than during the week-end and if the rainless weather continued "it might become necessary to ask for more volunteers."

"Fire is deep in the ground and Moncton residents will find it necessary to fight the flames without depending on rain as the blaze may burn for a long time until the earth becomes soaked," he continued.

Other fires in the province to-day were reported under control although there was a new outburst in the Sunny Brae district. Volunteers, however, fought out the flames within a short time.

Areas where fires were ranging last week were still being patrolled and every available soldier in the province had been detailed to fire-fighting or fire patrol duty.

Supt. R. E. Mercer, head of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police in New Brunswick, announced yesterday a thorough investigation was started into the cause of the forest fires in the province.

Allies Gain 5 Miles Inside Burma Border

KANDY, Ceylon, Aug. 22 (AP) — Allied columns advancing along the Tiddim Road have penetrated five miles inside Western Burma without contacting the fleeing Japanese and all indications point to a major enemy withdrawal, Allied headquarters declared today.

Rearguards of the Japanese forces retreating from India fought stubbornly for every mile on the Tiddim Road until Saturday, when they suddenly broke off contact.

Since Saturday night, headquarters said, the enemy has been engaged in a precipitate withdrawal and shows no signs of making a stand.

Allies Capture Bouisson

Former French Prisoner Paraded With Gestapo

By WILLIAM MILLER, (Distributed by The Canadian Press).

DRAGUIGAN, Southern France, August 22 —One of the biggest fish yet caught in the invasion of southern France identified as Fernand Bouisson, barrel-shaped, bald-headed, goateed former president of the Chamber of Deputies.

He was found hiding at the house of a friend four miles from St. Raphael and was jailed pending judicial procedure.

For safety, he was imprisoned at Draguigan, and yesterday the French partisans paraded him and other prisoners for the benefit of the French Information Service movie cameraman.

It was a bitter pill for the man who was 10 years Mayor of Marseille and former national hero of the Socialist party. He was paraded with a motley throng of gestapo spies and one woman whose head had been shaved for consorting with Germans.

A huge crowd gathered around the gendarmerie and booed and jeered. Tough young partisans kept rifles and machine at the ready.

Bouisson, who was merchant marine minister in the last war and who became Marshal Petain's information minister, and later joined Marcel Deat in editing the Collabortionist Paris daily L'Oeuvre, kept his head down during the short walk.

Bouisson was premier of France for five days. The cabinet he formed May 31, 1935, collapsed June 4.

Allies Inside Toulon; Port Shelled

Now 60 Miles Inland 2,000 Square Miles Held By South Units

By NOLAND NORGAARD, Associated Press Staff Writer.

ROME, August 22 (AP) —French troops of the 7th Army have fully encircled Toulon by land, cutting the last escape route for German garrison forces still resisting inside the fixed fortifications of the big Mediterranean naval base, Allied Headquarters announced to-day.

While an Allied naval armada off-shore and land batteries on the north hurled shells against enemy strong points, the French infantrymen advanced through the outskirts of the southern France port in house to house fighting.

American troops meanwhile swept steadily westward well to the north-west of Toulon in a drive which, unless halted, soon will isolate Marseille, France's second city. French forces were within eight miles of Marseille on the east.

Still other Allied advance elements on the east reached points 60 miles inland, and headquarters announced that the Allied grip on southern France now had been expanded to more than 2,000 square miles — an area more than double that of the beachhead late last week.

Maj.-Gen. Alexander M. Patch in an order of the day to the 7th Army declared:

Enemy Stunned.

"The enemy in our area is perplexed and stunned. Except for his coastal defence forces he is in full retreat.

"I therefore call upon every officer and every man, regardless of fatigue or possible shortages of food and equipment, for uninterrupted continuation of thir maximum energy and endurance so that the enemy may not have time to recover.

"Reject every temptation which could possibly interfere with this crucial duty. The opportunity for a decisive result is in front of us and we must and will move with the utmost speed and effctiveness."

After occupying the important communications centre of Aix-en-Provence, 15 miles due north of Marseille, American forces still were advancing and by midday yesterday were two miles along the road to the west.

This drive and the French thrust on Marseille from the east—a drive which already had passed through Aubagne—were steadily setting up a trap for the Germans remaining in that French city, second only to Paris in size.

Front dispatch said the Germans had set a forest fire east of Marseille in an effort to check the French.

North of Aix-en-Provence, which commands a trunk highway leading directly south into Marseille, a 7th Army column advancing westward along the south bank of the Durance River reached the vicinity of Le Puy yesterday morning and ma-

Urges Labor Stand United

MONTREAL, Aug. 22.—(CP). — Pat Shea, Canadian Congress of Labor representative for workers in the Maritime provinces, said here last night that organized labor must stand united asq "it may prove to be too late afterwards as, apparently, big corporations have only one wish, to go back to pre-war conditions, and we all know what they were."

Mr. Shea spoke at a labor rally held to welcome a delegation of workers from Halifax Shipyards Limited who are travelling to Ottawa to seek a solution of the 27-day-old strike at the shipyards. The workers are on strike to support their demands for a check-off and maintenance of membership clauses.

"Our fight is a fight to the finish," Mr. Shea said. "We are fighting for the democratic rights our sons, our brothers and others are dying for at this very minute on the field of honor.

"This fight is not only the fight of Halifax shipyards workers, not only the fight of shipyards workers in other parts of Canada, it is the fight of all organized labor in the country which must stand united to prevent the recurrence of the depression days of a decade ago."

Stuck In Can

ALEXANDRIA, Minn., Aug. 22—(AP). — Three-year-old Howard Gease took a nose dive into a cream can to retrieve a ball — and he got stuck. But the village blacksmith shop was nearby, so Howard, cream can and all, was taken to the smithy. The can was split down the sides and Howard, none the worse for wear, was released.

Allied Strategy Saves City Of Florence

ROME, Aug. 22.—(AP).— Florence has been completely occupied by Allied troops and 8th Army patrols now are pushing out beyond the famed art centre's northern outskirts, Gen. Alexander's Headquarters announced to-day.

Explaining the delay in ousting the last enemy opposition from the northern edges of Florence, the Allied Command said:

"Had troops of the 8th Army forced their way into the city before the enemy had been compelled to withdraw from the town by our continued pressure on his flanks, street fighting would inevitably have broken out. By skill and patience the city has fallen into our hands and extensive damage, apart from demolitions effected by the enemy, has been avoided.

"Unless the enemy decides to engage the city with long range artillery fire the city will rapidly return to normal and full assistance will be brought to the inhabitants by the AMG.

"When the time is ripe Allied armies will continue their advance, relieved to know that the ctiy has been spared irreparable damage."

Aside from brisk Patriot clashes and artillery duels, the only active sector of the Italian front continued to be the Adriatic area.

In the inland portion of this sector Italian troops captured Santa Maria Carpienaeta, three miles west of Pergola.

Nearer the coast Polish troops with tank support overcame strong enemy resistance north-east of Cerasa in a day long battle. Enemy losses were heavy and the Poles took 100 prisoners.

The 8th Army announced it had taken a total of 13,171 prisoners from May 11 to Aug. 1.

Flank Attack Threatens Warsaw City

Nazis Win Back Land Corridor From Latvia; Estonia

By EDDY GILMORE
Associated Press Staff Writer

MOSCOW, Aug. 22.—(AP).—Russian troops stormed across the Bug river northeast of Warsaw to-day in a grave new flanking threat in the prolonged siege of the Polish capital and battled hastily mustered German reserves on the west bank of the river.

Forcing the Bug, which flows into the Vistula 28 miles north of Warsaw, posed a threat to cross the larger river. Marshal Konstantin Rokossovsky's re-grouped and re-inforced group of armies pushed two Russian columns toward the confluence of the streams. He pushed ahead against furious German counter-attacks from 50 recaptured villages in what appeared to be the most serious threat to Warsaw in nearly two weeks.

An Izvestia dispatch from "north-east of Praga," the industrial eastern suburb of the Polish capital, said the Germans had introduced a new tank division from Italy and several divisions from other sectors, including Germany itself.

Many Planes.

Nazi counter-attacks were reported strongly supported by theier air force, by large concentrations of artillery and by groups of 100 to 120 tanks which came in "wave after wave, 10 or 12 times a day," Izvestia said.

The Germans have won back a land connection with two battered Baltic armies, isolated for three weeks in Estonia and Latvia, but front advices indicated they may use the corridor for an escape attempt to East Prussia rather than for reinforcement.

Another and growing threat to Warsaw was in the Eandomierz Region across the Vistula 100 to 110 miles southeast. The survival of only 1,550 prisoners, with the final killing of 12,000 in the Sandomierz trap where three divisions were encircled, was considered confirmation of the great shrinkage in Hitler's Divisions.

(The German communique said strong Russian tank and infantry forces were on the offensive in Romania, attacking southwest of Tiraspol and between the Prut and Sereth Rivers.)

Red Star, in a dispatch datelined "At the German Border" where the Russians last week reached the Frontier River Szeszuppe, said:

German Troops Want To Surrender Fear Reprisals From Poles, French

By WILLIAM STEWART,
Canadian Press War Correspondent.

WITH THE 1st CANADIAN ARMY IN FRANCE, August 22 — (CP Cable)— Thousands of dispirited soldiers of the shattered German 7th Army poured in a jumbled mass into the Canadian Army lines all day to-day, flooding the prisoner cages and overwhelming the shuttle service of trucks operating to the front.

Some Germans still are making ing frantic attempts to break out of the Allied ring that has been freshly strengthened, but their tanks are being knocked out and Canadian gunners meet them with withering fire open sights.

The great majority of the Germans want only to surrender.

They are terrified at the prospect of meeting the Polish or French troops who threw their lines across the escape roads, and are less terrified of the Canadians, though many of them know that S. S. troops have been charged with shooting Canadian prisoners and that makes them frightened of the Canadians too.

To Canadian soldiers who were in the fierce bridgehead battles of a few weeks ago the spectacle of a German army fallen to pieces is the most encouraging sight of the war. Canadians are lined along the muddy roads up which truckload after truckload and marching column after column of Germans have been coming since yesterday morning.

To-day their numbers have been larger than ever.

At mealtimes, the Canadians go over to the roadside and prop their mess tins on fence posts so as not to miss any part of the free show. You hear an occasional "pick 'em up

300,000 Huns Out Of Action Allies Shape Huge New Trap

By WES GALLAGHER—Associated Press War Correspondent

ALLIED SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, Aug. 22 — (AP) — Three Allied armies—British, Canadian and American—wheeled inland from the west to trap battered, disorganized Germans fleeing to the bridgeless river Seine today as U. S. columns struck powerfully down the river in the other arm of the gigantic new pincer movement. Supreme Headquarters, disclosing the fresh cut-off operation, declared 1,200 enemy tanks had been destroyed or damaged since D-Day—armored strength equivalent to 6½ Nazi Panzer Divisions—and field estimates said more than 300,000 Germans had been put out of action in Western France since June 6.

The Argentan-Falaise pocket is yielding at least 100,000 Germans captured, killed and wounded, according to best available information. The American 3rd Army in 21 days of vast, speedy flanking operations accounted for more than 100,000 more. As many more were eliminated earlier in Normandy.

Canadian, British and American armies striking eastward in this enveloping push gained up to 10 miles.

The American 3rd Army pounded northwestward along the looping Seine from its bridgehead at Mantes-Gassicourt 25 miles from Paris, bringing in the eastern arm of the pincers upon German 7th Army remnants stumbling back to the Seine and seeking to escape by ferries, small boats, and even swimming.

Evacuate 2 Cities

Heavy fighting was reported in the Paris area. U.S. forces met heavy resistance at Etampes, 27 miles south or Paris.

(Berlin announced evacuation of both Etampes and Malesherbes, 36 miles south of Paris, and 14 southwest of the American bridgehead across the Seine at Fontainebleau. The Germans said probing thrusts in the Orleans area southwest of Paris were checked.)

Orleans was under shellfire, and there was fighting at Ramboullet 22 miles southwest of Paris.

Since June 6 the Allies have counted 700 destroyed enemy tanks behind their lines, and 500 damaged ones. Others remain to be tallied.

The 1st Canadian Army advanced four to 10 miles on a broad front between the sea and Argenan, Belgian units took Cabourg on the Dives estuary, 16 miles across water from Le Havre. Netherlanders fought in the outskirts of Houlgate. British troops, gaining 10 miles, seized Gace, 15 miles east of Argentan. The American 1st Army also was pounding in toward the Seine.

The U.S. 3rd Army was hitting westward and northward from the

5 Persuasive Americans Capture 750 Huns Frightened Super-Men Fall For Fast Talk

WITH THE 1ST CANADIAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Aug. 22 (AP) Five persuasive American soldiers were the toast of the Canadian Army today for having marched 750 Germans into the Canadian lines.

Unfortunately the five must be nameless, the censors said, because they had been captured by the Germans inside the Falaise gap.

But a Canadian officer said they accomplished their feat with fast talk that would impress any main street vacuum cleaner salesman. Fed up with their position, they told the Germans they would get through the lines and see that artillery shelling ceased—if only the Germans would surrender.

The frightened supermen agreed. The Yanks went off and came back after a suitable length of time and told the Germans they had fixed it for the shelling to cease for 20 minutes. The gullible Germans eagerly lined up and the Americans marched them into the Canadian lines.

The cream of the jest is that by chance the shelling did cease during this parade of the wooden soldiers.

Robomb Barrage Heaviest Yet

LONDON, Aug. 22.—(AP).—With Allied armies racing toward robot launching sites in the Pas de Calais region, the Germans to-day hurled one of the heaviest daylight attacks since the first weeks of the flying bomb assaults on London and Southern England.

Throughout most of the day the enemy sent the buzz bombs across the Channel, capitalizing on the soupy weather that hid the robot roosts from grounded Allied bombers.

Heavy ack-ack fire, including some rockets, met the robots at the coast, and the gunners' score was good. Over one coastal area they shot down two in a couple of minutes.

The bombs that got through wrecked houses, stores, buses and one pub—but in only one place was a heavy death toll feared.

A young mother snatched her infant from a baby carriage and ran into a surface shelter as a bomb fell. She emeregd a few minutes later to find the pram wrecked.

Another bomb demolished several houses just as two busses passed. Several persons were killed, and the busses damaged. A newsboy on the corner was blown to bits. Within an hour three bodies had been removed from the ruined houses, and rescuers were digging for many other persons believed to be trapped.

A blind man who heard a bomb far in the distance warned a mother and child in the next house, and all three had time to take shelter. Their house was badly damaged but all three escaped injury.

The heavy raids started during the night after a lull of some 10 hours, probably caused by German inability to move bombs to the sites over their battered transportation lines.

French Underground Gains Occupies Pyrenees Frontier

By CHARLES S. FOLTZ—Associated Press Staff Writer

IRUN, Spain, Aug. 22—(AP).—Border dispatches told of the collapse of German resistance in one city and town after another throughout Central and Southern France today as French forces of the interior pressed a campaign to rid their country of the invaders. There still was no confirmation here, however, that the big Nazi bastion of Toulouse, 60 miles north of the Spanish border, had fallen. Toulouse was reported to have a Nazi garrison of 3,000 troops, mostly fanatical S.S. (Elite Guard) forces.

French patriots were said to be firmly astride all railroads and highways over which Germans in the Bordeaux area must fight their way to get through to the Reich.

(The Vichy government is transferring its seat to another city, the German-controlled Vichy radio said. The broadcast, recorded in London by The Associated Press, did not disclose the identity of the new site nor did it mention the whereabouts of Chief of State Marshal Petain. The broadcast said the transfer was being carried out because of the "present military situation."

(Reports have been received from interior France that French patriots virtually have surrounded the puppet capital. There also have been reports that Pierre Laval and other Vichy officials have arrived at Belfort, about 25 miles from Basel, Switzerland, and an equal distance from Germany.)

Uniformed officers of the French Army took possession of the International bridge at Hendaye yesterday evening in the name of the French Committee of National Liberation, thus completing French occupation of the entire Pyrenees frontier.

Meanwhile, three Allied cruisers continued their patrol of the French Bay of Biscay coast from the Spanish frontier to the north.

TORONTO, August 22 —(CP) — Mayor Conboy said yesterday discussions are being carried out between the city and the Toronto Hydro Commission to determine a system of taxing the city's hydro system which would be most acceptable to hydro and provincial authorities. The Mayor was commenting on a proposal of the Toronto Board of Trade that hydro be taxed on the same basis is if privately owned and operated.

Iasi Captured By Red Army

LONDON, Aug. 22.—(AP).—Iasi, fourth largest city of Romania, has been evacuated before a fresh Russian offensive in the south, the Germans announced to-day.

Iasi (population 104,471) lies west of the Prut river and is a meeting point of railways linking eastern Romania and the Soviet-claimed province of Bucovina.

It lies 165 miles northeast of the great Ploesti oil centre and 120 miles north of Galati, strategic city on the lower Danube. A Russian plunge to Galati would make much of the Balkans untenable for German defence.

Moscow has reported no fresh offensive in Northern Romania, which the Red Army invaded during the winter campaign. Germany has been reporting the new offensive for several days.

A Berlin broadcast said the Russians had "succeeded in widening their breaches" at other undisclosed points in dual offensive on both sides of Iasi and on the lower Dnestr river.

Back Of Hun Army Broken

Greatest Battle Of France Believed Ended

WITH BRITISH FORCES ADVANCING TOWARD THE SEINE, Aug. 22—(AP).—A British headquarters officer said today that "one good sledgehammer blow by the Russians, coupled with our efforts in the west, will finish" the war with Germany.

"The days of great battle in France are ended," the officer declared. "The rest of the war for Germany is merely a fight for time—time for Hitler."

Yesterday, Gen. Montgomery declared the "end of the war is in sight."

Intelligence reports said the Germans already had turned guns on the Maginot Line about to face the onrushing Allied armies.

The British officer said that never again can Germany put into the field an army of armor such as the 7th Army which the Allied forces have broken up in the "battle of the Normandy bulge."

"The back of the German army is broken," the officer said. "Any troops Hitler now sends forth to meet us will be only cannon fodder to chew up."

As the British and Canadian armies began to surge eastward to catch up with the spectacular American sweep across the Seine, the Normandy trap was described as cleared except for odd hundreds of Germans, many of whom now are hiding in the hills and forest and making no pretense of fighting.

50,000 Nazis Expected From Trap

Officers Deserted Infantry Units • Hundreds Wounded

By ROSS MUNRO,
Canadian Press War Correspondent.

WITH THE 1st CANADIAN ARMY IN FRANCE, August 22 — (CP Cable) — Thirty thousand German prisoners were taken in the Normandy pocket by Allied forces up to two days ago and with mass surrenders now around Trun, southeast of Falaise, the figure is steadily rising and may easily reach 50,000.

The pocket in which divisions of Field Marshall Von Kluge's 7th Army was caught is practically crushed.

Large numbers of enemy wounded also are in Allied hospitals and are not included in the prisoner count.

Yesterday the Canadian army collected 2,800 prisoners and that is just a preliminary figure. It will be higher.

Prisoners are coming in right and left and one Canadian brigade reported by wireless it had 7,000 prisoners it wanted to get rid of, but that was unconfirmed.

Since the 1st Canadian Army launched its first operation as an army on August 8 down the Falaise highway it has captured 14,400 prisoners to two days ago.

A Crushing Defeat.

The Normandy pocket was no myth. A large German force was caught and annihilated here by the British, Canadian, American and Polish troops and there still is a mass of completely disorganized enemy troops in a small circle near Trun which will be finished off soon.

The problem is not one of fighting any more. It is one of handling prisoners in such vast numbers on the roads. The Germans now are giving up by Platoons. Most of their officers deserted them and tried to get out of the bag alone. It is principally infantry which has been taken during these last few days and what has escaped has been armor.

As the final mop-up goes on in the pocket, new gains are being made along the whole Canadian Army front, stretching north to the Channel, as the eastward drive develops momentum.

Work Together

A Canadian column is in the Vimoutiers Area, 10 miles northeast of Trun, and infantry now dominate the town. Canadian Infantry and Polish armor are mopping up in the Falaise-Chambois-Vimoutiers triangle where most of yesterday's bag of 2,800 prisoners was taken.

To the north of the Canadians, British armor and infantry are one mile from the important road junction of Lisieux, 18 miles south of the channel coast at Honfleur. Heavily-mined roads and some 88-mm. guns slowed progress towards Liseux but the opposition was described by a senior Canadian officer as "nothing really serious." There have been a few scattered rearguard actions.

Other British troops are on the roads leading to Pont L'Eveque, 10 miles north of Lisieux.

On the Channel coast sector the Germans are falling back fast. Belgian troops operating with the Canadian army captured Cabourg and Netherlands forces are in the outskirts of Houlgate. These advances have taken enemy long-range artillery pressure off Caen port, France's seventh largest. It is no secret this port has not been of much use as yet to the Allies.

Obituary

MRS. SANDY MILLAGE.

DOWNEYVILLE, August 22 — (ENS). — The funeral of the late Mrs. Millage was held from her late home on the Boundary to St. John's Church, where service was conducted by her pastor, Rev. Mr. Miller, who in his sermon paid tribute to her life as a neighbor, wife and friend She had been organist of the church for years and only a few months ago gave up the position to a younger person. Mrs. Millage was a faithful member of St. John's Church. She was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Stewart and lived all her life in the community where she died. Owing to the scarcity of help she was assiting her husband drawing in hay. When going through the gate the horses bolted, throwing Mrs. Millage off the load on to the hard ground, from which she sustained severe injuries. She was removed to the Ross Memorial Hospital in Lindsay, but she passed away without regaining consciousness.

The large array of bouquets testified the high esteem in which she was held. A nephew, George Murphy of Lindsay sang her favorite hymn, "Does Jesus Care?"

The remains were laid to rest in the family plot at Bobcaygeon. The pall-bearers were: Lorne Stewart, Orville Burgess, Stanley Millage, M Burgess, Harold Millage, and Oscar White.

Surviving besides her husband, Sandy Millage, are four sisters, Mrs George Ranson, Mrs. Eddie Burgess, Mrs. Joseph Aldred, and Mrs George Melsom. Her only brother, William Stewart, passed away two years ago and her mother one year ago.

Further Remand Given On Theft Charges

COBOURG, Aug. 22.—(ENS). — Evans Jones and Dean Summerville were given a further remand of one week without election or plea, when they appeared in police court Monday. Jones, whose home is in Hilton, and Summerville, who comes from Brighton, are jointly charged with theft of a car on August 5th from C. B. Graham of Trenton, and with assault, causing bodily injury, to Issac Cook of Trenton on the same date. They are said to have stolen a taxi cab after slugging the driber, Isaac Cook, and tossing him out.

Crown Attorney Harry Deyman, in asking for the remand, pointed out that he was awaiting a medical report on Cook's condition.

Also remanded were Harold White and Isabelle Smith, jointly charged with purse snatching in connection with the robbery here last month of Mrs. Adelaide Skinner. The Crown has to bring up witnesses from Montreal and the remand was given pending the arrangement in regard to the witnesses.

mans and the liberation of hundreds of Soviet citizens who escaped their captors and hid in the forests has taken place. Now the population moves westward."

There was no official announcement that the Red Army actually had crossed the East Prussian frontier. (The Red Star dispatch, however, strongly suggested this.)

Excellent flying weather gave Stormovik planes and medium bombers an excellent chance to resume large scale operations against numerous German tanks and artillery massed in defence of Praga. In this sector, Rokossovsky poses a frontal threat to Warsaw, most of which lies on the west side of the broad and swift Vistula.

The enemy's Baltic break-through was announced in the Russian midnight communique. It said that under a hail of German tank and infantry attacks Gen. Ivan C. Bagramian's troops withdrew "to more favorable positions" after abandoning Tukums, where they plunged to the sea 133 miles west of Riga on Aug. 1.

There was no letup, however in Red Army pressure on the enemy's 20 or more imperilled north Baltic divisions, variously estimated at between 200,000 and 300,000 men.

Far up in Estonia west of Lake Peipus Gen. Ivan Maslennikov's 3rd Baltic Army, driving hard for the railway centre of Tartu, captured 30 or more communities. Other Russian gains were reported due east of Riga.

Although shortening his lines by pulling back from Tukums, Gen. Bagramian stood firm against other heavy enemy attacks east and northwest of Jelgava in Latvia, and north and south-west of Siauliai in Central Lithuania.

Close In On Warsaw.

In a battle that may soon decide the fate of Warsaw, Marshal Konstantin K. Rokossovsky's 1st White Russian army yesterday smashed the defences of more than 50 settlements northeast of the Polish capital. The advances freed a 16-mile stretch of the Bialystok-Warsaw railway.

A strong belief was evident in Moscow that Red army troops in this sector now had gained the upper hand over heavy Nazi forces which for a week have been trying to shatter Rokossovsky's grip on the eastern approaches to Warsaw.

While Rokossovsky pressed forward north-east of the Polish capital, Gen. Ivan C. Konev steadily rolled back the enemy's formidable line in a northwesterly direction along the Vistula south of Warsaw.

As Konev deepened his strategic Vistula bridgehead north of Sandomeirz, it was announced that German losses in the pocket, where three German divisions were wiped out over the week-end, amounted to 12,000 dead and 1,550 prisoners. Much equipment also was destroyed or captured.

Moscow official quarters said nothing concerning German announcements that a Russian offensive had been launched in Romania.

Allied Advances Upset German Strategy

By JAMES M. LONG,
Associated Press War Correspondent

ALLIED SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, August 22 — (AP)— The whole German strategy of defence in northwestern France has been upset by the American 3rd Army's thrust across the Seine river 25 miles northwest of Paris, which is twisting the German 15th Army into an off-balance stand and threatening to back it against the sea.

This bridgehead at Mantes also opens a path for an outflanking drive on the German's flying bomb launching sites in the Pas De Calais, the area of France closest to England, the Germans apparently had calculated that the Allied invasion would come head on against their positions there. But the Allies picked the Normandy coast instead.

Deepening of the new wedge at Mantes would force the enemy's patched up 15th Army and any elements of the battered 7th Army which get across the Seine to fight with their backs against the sea all the way from Dieppe to Dunkerque, an airline distance of almost 100 miles.

The Germans' lines of supply or getaway would be cut one after another with every mile of Allied advance.

Even the now-ousted German master strategist, Field Marshal Gen. Karl Rudolf Gerd von Rundstedt, evidently had not counted on that. And his successor, Field Marshal Gen. Guenther von Kluge, had neither the position nor the troop strength to cope with it.

Potentially the Germans' greatest danger is in the triangle with the Mantes bridgehead at the apex and Le Havre and Dieppe, or perhaps Abbeville, as the base.

Nearing Somme

To save German troops in that increasingly dubious cross - Seine haven of forces escaping from Normandy, Von Kluge needs either to conjure up an army strong enough to stop the Allies where they are or withdraw while his men still can get out.

A withdrawal would carry the Germans back to the First Great War Somme line for a last attempt to save the rocket emplacements of the Pas de Calais.

But the second Allied cross-Seine spearhead in the area of Fontainebleau, 35 miles south of Paris, opens positions for a new wave of encirclement which might crumble a Somme line stand as surely as the Mantes bridgehead cracked open the lower Seine defence. This second spearhead now is pointed at the Marne battlefields of the First Great War.

The battle of France has burst into the open, and the Germans seemingly have little hope now of halting the Allied onslaught on any static line short of the German border.

The Germans' rocket bombing of London's twice-tried civilian population in the latest flying bomb attacks has been interpreted by many as a final attempt to force Gen. Eisenhower to risk new landings where the Germans wanted the Allies to land.

Even that last hope—if indeed it played a part in German strategy—now has been invalidated by the same bold stroke which has left the 15th Army manning a defence line pointed the wrong way.

The Vichy regime is "finished," the Basel National Zeitung commented. The Swiss Minister to Vichy is returning home and relations concerning France will henceforth be conducted through Berlin.

Petain was arrested so swiftly he was not given time to shave and taken to an unknown destination.

KA Swiss radio broadcast said Petain "was able to write a short letter of farewell, copies of which are circulating in France." The broadcast, recorded by O.W.I., said its formation came from "most reliable quarters."

Laval at Belfort

Pierre Laval, Vichy "chief of government," whom Petain once discharged for overzealous collaboration with the Germans, was reported installed in Belfort near the German frontier—a city once considered an anchor of the old Maginot Line. Petain reinstated Laval under German pressure in April, 1942, and the former premier swiftly assumed many of Petain's governmental reprogatives.

The German-controlled Vichy radio said the Vichy government had been transferred to another site, which was not identified. French frontier reports said 20,000 to 30,000 German troops were moving northward from southern and central France toward Belfort where it appeared the Nazis were determined to defend a gap leading to the Rhine.

A broadcast by the Swiss radio heard in London said before leaving Petain wrote a short letter of farewell to his friends. Copies were said to be in circulation in France.

Call Off Planes.

The rout of the scattered Nazi forces was so complete in Southern France, however, that the Allied Command called off the planes which had been bombing and strafing available enemy targets and sent them back to their former job of smashing enemy communications in Northern Italy and the Balkans.

Sweeping across the Durance Valley north-east of Aix-en-Provence, forward American forces reached Grambois and Manosque in their westward sweep. They also were reported to have enveloped the town of Valensole, 60 miles inland and approximately a third of the way to Lyon.

Four-miles north-east of Toulon's outskirts the French captured the fortress of Coudon.

The size or equipment of the German force still fighting inside Toulon was not disclosed. It appeared likely the defenders would attempt a prolonged stand.

One correspondent with the naval forces which bombarded Toulon said the toughness of the base's coastal defences was demonstrated when a French batleship scored a direct hit on a heavy gun turret, only to have it bounce back into action.

there, boy!" addressed to the marching prisoners.

Morale Is High.

Canadian officers say the defeat of the 7th Army to which the Canadians contributed by their successful battle of the hinge has been the biggest morale booster since news of the revolt of the German generals. Everybody in the forward Canadian areas is in high spirits and, at least temporarily, a lot of the grimness of the early days in France has disappeared.

It was enough to-day to make everyone forget the gloominess of the weather and the drenching rain that turned fields into mud and made roads slimy and treacherous. Our aircraft were grounded yesterday but that had no effect on the last stages of the destruction of the vaunted 7th Army.

German soldiers from all kinds of formations are being driven into the Canadian army lines by British and American troops pushing behind them. There were fierce battles when the breaks-through were tried and the Germans suffered heavily.

The only Germans who want to fight any longer are tough storm-troopers who refuse to believe their army is finished and the Nazified officers who represent the only element who wants to keep the ordinary infantry fighting.

The prisoner shuttle service has to operate over roads thick withq other traffic, bringing in men in dozens of different get-ups from the light blue of the enemy air force regiment to the dark-jacketted uniforms of the storm troops and Panzer soldiers.

All formations in the 7th Army are represented—S. S. Panzers, infantry divisions, base units, flak units, field punishment units and even bakers units.

The prisoners are soaked and muddy. Hundreds of German wounded have been given medical treatment and placed in ambulances that take them to caualty clearing stations and hospitals. Some of them have the attendance of their own medical officers, dressed in once-natty uniforms.

Complete Disorder.

In the small area of "the bottle" that remains there is complete disorder. Rolling German convoys ignore all military rules of single-line traffic. Soldiers in trucks and automobiles and mounted on carts are terror-stricken and hardly know which way to go. The small stretches of road left to them are littered wth their dead comrades, their dead horses, their exploded and smashed transport.

There is little food. The Germans have eaten the odd tins of food they carried in their pockets and now go into the fields and dig up half-sized potatoes, shake the green apples from the trees and, when they can, shoot the scurrying hens in farmyards.

They look forward to a safe arrival in Allied lines, where their disarmament has left piles of rifles, pistols, binoculars, cameras, map-cases, old letters and heaps of other equipment.

Every Canadian battalion on the receiving end of the wreckage of Von Kluge's army is an arsenal of enemy equipment.

One Ontario infantry position held off four German Tiger tanks which struck in the midst of the prisoner stream today, destroying two of the tanks with 17-pounders and stopping the other with two Piats.

Stream Grows

A Canadian service battalion estimated at one moment that it would have 2,000 prisoners to turn over to the shuttle service as the enemy stream grew and grew. Hundreds of Germans gave themselves up to little groups of 10 Canadians.

Once the shuttle service threatened to clog essential traffic at one busy intersection, so a Canadian lieutenant-colonel from a division headquarters staff joined the military policemen at the corner to help direct the traffic.

On the narrow, muddy roads there was difficulty in moving two lines of traffic in opposite directions and the Canadians knocked stone walls into ditches to make the roads wider.

While the sometimes - awesome scene of collapse of this army is unfolding, the forces of the Canadian Army are getting ready for the next phases of the war in France.

New tanks are being hauled up on giant transporters, guns are being moved about and infantry formations swung around for their part in the developing push to the Seine.

Tented hospitals with their truckloads of equipment are being packed up and moved forward to keep up with the war and make ambulance hauls shorter. Supply dumps are being shifted ahead.

Police Arrest Murder Suspect

LOST RIVER, Que., August 22—(CP). — Louis Jargaille, Deputy Director of the Provincial Police, who led the investigation in the case of Pte. Hugh Miller, 31, shot and killed last Friday in this Laurentian town said today "a suspect is being held and everything is in the bag."

Miller, a Dieppe veteran who still had his leg in a plaster cast, was on his way home to Weir, Que., to visit his wife and 10-year-old daughter. He was on leave from Ste. Anne de Bellevue Military Hospital.

Dr. Jean Marie Roussel of Montreal, medico-legal expert, said last Sunday that Miller had been killed by a shotgun blast, fired less than 50 feet from him while he was speaking to an acquaintance in front of an hotel here.

bridgehead at Mantes 25 miles northwest of Paris. Here it could strike also north of the Seine into the rocket gun Pas de Calais coast.

Platoons Give Up

Germans trapped in the new pocket were surrendering "by platoons," a Canadian officer declared.

Thirty-thousand prisoners had been taken in the Falaise trap, with thousands more throwing up their hands. The dead were yet uncounted. Pocketed Germans had been virtually wiped out.

Front dispatches said Field Marshal von Kluge presumably had pulled out a large part of his forces, but they were by no means saved as yet.

Supreme headquarters gave no news of the bridgehead at Mantes-Gassicourt, or the one southeast of Paris near Fontainebleau, where U.S. forces were 30 miles from the historic Marne.

The Germans lost 30 tanks and 16 planes trying to protect forces fleeing north of the Seine above Mantes, front reports said. The Americans strengthened their trip here, and patrolled southeastward toward Paris. Substantial gains were scored southwest of Paris.

Reports that French patriots were seizing city after city in central and southern France, including Lyon, gave a clear indication the Gestapo-dominated German high command was capable of offering organized resistance to the Allies only in northwestern France.

But it was precisely the Nazi defences in that section of France which the U.S. 3rd Army's Seine bridgeheads northwest and southeast of Paris were threatening, including the flying bomb coast in the Pas de Calais.

Patton Moves On

In the area of Dreux, 45 miles southwest of the heart of Paris, Lt.-Gen. Patton's 3rd Army troops also tightened theri flank positions against the Germans shoving them back toward the sea and the Seine. The Germans had thrown up flank protection and were fighting vigorously along the Avre in that area.

A front dispatch said there are indications the total enemy killed and captured may run much higher than recent estimates, although the number of Germans still in the bag is a matter of guesswork.

The British 2nd Army, the 1st Canadian Army and the American 1st Army were busy wipir out the last Germans in the pocket and there was a prospect that another 24 hours may see the end of the pocket entirely.

The Canadian Army push on a front of about 50 miles from the sea toward Argentan virtually was squeezing out the British 2nd and American 1st Army in present operations.

Belgian troops captured Cabourg, said a field dispatch, and Netherlands forces, also with the Canadian Army, are in the outskirts of Houlgate. Headquarters said Dives-Sur-Mer has been captured. Fall of Dozule also was confirmed.

One Mile To Go

British forces drove to within one mile of the road junction of Lisieux and a Canadian column is operating in the Vimoutiers area, 10 miles northeast of Trun and 15 miles south of Lisieux.

An advance of 10 miles east from Chambois took Gace, 11 miles southeast of Vimoutiers, driving another deep salient in the German rearguards.

In the vicinity of Mantes and Gassicourt, the area of the American bridgehead 25 miles northwest of Paris, American forces clashed with enemy armor trying to protect German units which had made good their crossing and were fleeing north from the river. In these engagements the Americans knocked out 30 enemy tanks and shot down 61 planes, a field dispatch said.

Bad weather cut Allied air operations to their lowest point in many weeks and allowed the Germans time to get equipment and men out of the trap south and west of the Seine on choked roads and over their barge bottleneck on the Seine.

News Flashes

LONDON.—More than half of all France — equivalent to 212,000 square miles—is under control of the Allies or Patriots, it was announced today by French Forces of the Interior, which also reported that their members and German forces are locked in heavy fighting inside Paris, in the Maginot city of Belfort and in Bellegarde in Southern France.

Flier Grounded With Army Injury Rides To France With Flier Pals In D-Day Raid

Unable to take an active part in flying operations due to an arm injury suffered when he had a crack-up on a takeoff during training, F.O. Bruce E. Morgan, 20, now home in Peterborough, hitch-hiked a few rides with fellow airmen who went out on D-Day and in the early phases of invasion operations. His accident occured before completion of his training, and thus F.O. Morgan, though overseas since late October of last year, has not had a chance to face the Hun in the capacity for which he was shooled, that of pilot of a heavy bomber.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Morgan, 599 Bolivar street and was brought up in Warkworth, the family moving into the city four years ago. After receiving his commission as pilot officer and just before going overseas F.O. Morgan was married to the former Mary Murphy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Murphy, 267 King George street.

He is now at home on furlough and expects to be posted to duty in Canada. F.O. Morgan trained at Manning Pool, Windsor and Dunnville. He stated that he has not met up with an Peterborough servicemen in recent months abroad, but did see Sgt. Bdr. Eric Harvey soon after arriving in England last winter.

The Peterborough airman was in London for a week and a half at the end of June, when the robot bombs were sailing over at the peak of their destructive career, and though he was never near enough to one of the missiles to be in danger himself, he saw many of them falling in other parts of the city.

Parents Must Represent Soldiers In Planning Memorial Centre

The dinner at Genelco cafeteria Thursday at 6.30 p.m., as announced in a general invitation published elsewhere in this issue, is extended to everybody, men and women, eager to promote the success of the proposed Memorial and Community Centre.

"This is a citizens' undertaking and responsibility, the Community Centre," J. A. Jebson, committee chairman, said to the Examiner today. "It isn't just a committee meeting. We've had lots of them, but we can do only so much, planning and preparing, and then the citizens themselves have to take hold.

The committee will have a progress report so that the people will know how we are getting along. We expect a speaker from St. Catharines who will tell us how they get along with their sport centre.

Hundreds of the boys and girls who would be at this dinner meeting cant' be here. They are in the armed forces. We'd all like to be able to tell them when they come back that in these last months of the war we have been doing something to realize one of the community things we used to talk and dream about before the war.

Parents Must Do Work.

We'd like to see their parents come to this meeting, the older folks who helped build up Peterborough and who are going to keep on making it one of the best cities in Canada.

Perhaps they really needed us to get things started. That was what the committee was asked to do. Well, now we need them.

That is what the meeting is for, to talk things over and see how we are doing.

But, this is what you have to do. Tell us that you are coming, because the staff at Genelco cafeteria simply have to know how many they will have to provide for.

Phone Plans.

The dinner is Thursday at 6 p.m. Will the men and women who are coming, and we hope hundreds are, please telephone Examiner — 4641 —Wednesday before 6 p.m.

That is Mr. Jebson's appeal on behalf of the committe. Mayor Hamilton conveyed it to members of the council last night and members said they would attend.

The dinner costs only sixty-five cents, and it will be just as successful and enthusiastic as you, and you, make it by being there, and taking part.

2 Large Muskies Caught At Bewdley

Two American visitors from Waynesberg and Canton, Ohio, fishing with Ted Shankle of Bewdley Monday evening at Rice Lake, hooked on to one of the larger maskinonge of the season caught in those waters and brought home also another worthy specimen of the same breed. The larger of the fish, which had not been officially "weighed in" this morning, was estimated to come close to 30 lb. and measure about 50 inches. It required an hour and 45 minutes to bring into the boat; and its companion catch, a 16 lb. muskie, struggled against its fate for some 30 minutes.

The catches were made in the vicinity of Long Island on Rice Lake and according to reports the day was a surprisingly good one for most of the fishermen who ventured forth. Mr. Shenkle said that he had seen several other lunge taken out; and two guides from Bewdley got a number ranging in weight from 10 to 14 lbs.

The Tea Hour Gossip . . . .

We are going to have a little chat today on ways to prepare and serve fish. It does not follow, because a woman is a good meat cook, that she is equally expert at cooking fish, unless she has given some time to the study of it. Fish does not require the slow cooking given to many kinds of meat, as the tissue holding its fibres together is more gelatinous, very tender, and softens at once under application of heat. It tastes much better cooked in one half the time generally used, for when fish is overcooked most of the juices are extracted and dried out. Fish, when it is cooked quickly in a hot oven, should never have any water put in the pan. When water is added the fish steams and the juice runs out to join the water in the pan, leaving a tasteless, insipid fish and a highly flavored juice or gravy. It is well, when purchasing a fish, to know whether it is classed as a dry or oily meated fish, for it makes a big difference in the cooking. Such fish as cod, haddock, pollock, etc., may be termed dry meat, while salmon, shad, mackerel, herring, lake trout and white fish are rich and oily.

Baked Fish Loaf

1 lb. fish steak, 3 cups soft bread crumbs, 1½ cups milk, 2 eggs beaten separately, ¼ cup butter, lemon juice to taste.

The raw fish may either be chopped and pounded to a pulp or put through the food chopper with the finest blade. Soak the bread in the milk, then cook until the mixture leaves the sides of the pan, stirring as it cooks. Combine the bread mixture, the fish pulp, the butter and beaten eggs, then season. This may be shaped into a loaf using finely sifted crumbs on the outside. Put small pieces of butter over the crumbs, place in bread pan and bake in oven (400 degrees) for 45 minutes. This may also be baked in individual ramekins.

Pan Broiled Fillets

2 pounds fillets, 4 tablespoons butter, 1 tablespoon finely minced parsley, juice of one lemon, salt and pepper. Roll fillets in salted flour. Heat some oil in frying pan and fry fillets until cooked a nice brown on each side. Remove to a hot plate. Melt the butter, add the lemon juice and parsley and, when very hot, pour over the fillets and serve at once.

Fish Scallop

Heat one cup tomato, a small minced onion and a bay leaf in water. Season and allow to simmer. Fry bacon and in the fat thus rendered, stir a tablespoon of flour, add to the hot mixture and cook until thick. Remove from the heat and pour one layer n a buttered baking dish. Then alternate with contents of one cup flaked fish and shredded cheese. Cover with buttered crumbs and dot with bits of cheese. Bake until crumbs are brown and serve hot.

45,000 Japs Wiped Out On 3 Islands

Allied Bombing Continues Daily In Pacific Theatre

PEARL HARBOR, Aug. 22—(AP). —Japan's futile defence of Guam, Saipan and Tinian cost her 44,956 troops killed—10 to 1 for American lives lost in this bloodiest campaign of the Pacific war.

Admiral Chester W. Nimitz announced the new total yesterday in reporting new deaths in continued mop-up operations on the three captured Marianas islands.

The U.S. Pacific fleet commander also reported new bomber strikes from the Kurile to the Molucca Islands were without aerial opposition. The raids included record blows at Halmahera and Boeroe Islands in the Moluccas.

In fighting through August 17, a total of 4,470 Americans had fallen in the taking of the captured Marianas Islands. A total of 20,345 American wounded and 721 missing also was reported. Admiral Nimitz said 981 additional Japanese had been killed on the three islands. Clean up operations have continued since August 9.

Strong bomber forces from the southwest Pacific hurled 110 tons of bombs Sunday on Halmahera, 300 miles south of Mindanao. Warehouses were demolished.

Other bombers the previous day hit Namlea airdrome on Boeroe, 200 miles southwest of Halmahera, with 95 tons of bombs. In additional raids in the southwest, nine small Japanese freighters and transports and coastal vessels were sunk or damaged.

On Saturday navy planes bombed and strafed airfields on Paramushiro in the northern Kuriles.

American Tricks Nazis Into Giving Up Town

By HOWARD K. SMITH

BEHIND THE GERMAN LINES IN FRANCE (Via Switzerland), Aug. 22 — (CBS) — At Le Fayet, in the Savoy Mountains, the Partisans had a close shave. Elsewhere the Germans were either annihilated or they capitulated when the situation became hopeless. But at Le Fayet the Germans went on fighting, largely with bullets of wood. I have a handful as souvenirs. They make a big, scaring blast, but they scatter into splinters before they reach you. At Le Fayet the German commander kept enough metal bullets to kill 40 French men and women whom he held as hostages.

When the Maquis issued him an ultimatum to surrender or they would storm the town, the commander answered that if they did he would shoot the 40 hostages. The French troops hesitated to attack.

An American officer who advises the Partisans, had a bright idea. He sent a personal ultimatum to the German commander, saying he had a company of American paratroopers who, as German propaganda said were notoriously disrespectful of French lives, and they would assault and kill every German in the town, regardless of the consequences.

The German commander thereupon reconsidered, and sent a message back saying he would like to negotiate with the American and his staff. He didn't have any staff. Meanwhile, unknown to the German commander, a column of 14 German Nazi lorries with artillery was en route to relieve him at Le Fayet.

As time shortened, the American got another bright idea. He hustled together four Frenchmen, who donned four British uniforms which had been parachuted down recently, and he met the German commander in a forest.

When the Germans saw the five khaki uniforms—the men of the Maquis in France wear mostly grey—he surrendered the town, and the main force of the Maquis was then turned against the advancing German column and destroyed it.

Suicide Pact

In Annecy, we witnessed an almost Shakespearean tragedy. In the Rue Grenette we heard a gun gasp from one of the houses. Gendarmes rushed into the house and up the stairs. Before they reached the door of the room, a second shot rang out. When they opened the door they found the last Gestapo officer whom they had not yet caught lying on the floor with his mistress in a pool of blood. The SS officer, whose name was Kamft, had shot her and himself. At headquarters we learned the woman was a spy.

In St. Julien, the day before the Maquis attacked, the Germans caught a tough little French Communist carrying a revolver. He was taken to the Gestapo jail and beaten with an iron poker. When we met him both his eyes were purple and his clothes red.

After St. Julien was taken the Maquis commander lined the Germans up and told the tortured lad to pick out his man. The boy pointed to the man who had done it.

"I grant you the right to do anything you wish with him," the commander told the boy. "You may even shoot him."

The boy advanced silently. The Gestapo man flinched and his knees buckled. The boy fingered his revolver handle a minute. Then he grinned. He slapped the Gestapo man on the right cheek and then on the left cheek. Then the boy turned to his commander and said: "Thank you, my lieutenant."

I asked him why he did not shoot his torturer. He lit his cigaret and said: "I know I am a donkey; everybody says so. But what could I gain from it."

The same lieutenant then made a little speech to the Germans. He said: "You have tortured our women and children. You have killed thousands of us. Now I can kill you. But I shall show you that we are more human than you have been."

He pointed to the French border and told them: "Go, you are free."

The lieutenant was a Jew. His brother was killed by the Germans a year ago.

LIBERATED FRENCH SMILE ONCE MORE—These members of a French family smile happily as they leave transit camp for their liberated home town of Brecey. They had been forced to evacuate their homes during the fighting between the Germans and Allied forces.

Freight Travel Reaching Peak On Alaska Road

Whether or not controversial opinion regarding the value of the Alaska Highway believes that this monster project, erected to deal with the now diminished threat of Japanese aggression in the Western Hemisphere, will be useful after the war is a point that should not cause Canadians very much worry inasmuch as it hasn't cost them a dime to start with, Lance Rumble, former manager of General Motors Retail Trucking Division, Toronto, and now on loan to the U.S. War Department, told a meeting of Rotarians at the Empress on Monday

However, Mr. Rumble said, the country served by the highway has great possibilities, and already it possesses some of the finest airports in the world. The speaker, who in civilian capacity had a large hand in the routing and establishment of the highway itself, also remarked that the Canol Project, subject of bitter dispute in the U.S. Congress, had proved its value and was now yielding 3,000 barrels of oil for refining every day. The price of gasoline had fallen sharply from the $3.64 a gallon that prevailed back in 1942.

In eight months and six days from the time the United States and Canada arrived at an agreement on the building of a North-west highway, 1,800 miles of road had been constructed, Mr. Rumble said. Along with this vast job, which was divided into sections under the charge of a project manager, who controlled the work of from 10 to 15 prime contractors, went the building of 147 bridges, two of them very expensive, and one—the Peace River Bridge— second largest cantilever bridge on the North American continent.

Freight Travel at Peak.

Mr. Rumble revealed that he had mapped out the way stations which were part of the great plan to get a stupendous amount of freight trucked over the highway each day; and added that freighting had now reached such a peak that one driver was leaving from the base every six minutes.

Mr. Rumble paid tribute to the ability and fine spirit of the American Army troops who came in the thousands to build the road. He said his association with them had been a marvellous experience, and noted that though Americans were never loathe to talk about their country's achievements, they never bragged about any accomplishments of their own.

He referred to the ferrying of the lend-lease planes to Russia by the Soviet pilots, which was only recently made public, and stated that all deliveries of planes under lend-lease had been made in this manner since September, 1942. The visitor to Alaska might see many Russian airmen and occasionally a girl member of the Red Air Force, but as a rule they were not given to much talking, and seldom smiled. No one know, he added, where in Siberia the Red airmen brought down their ships after crossing the Bering Sea.

Bus Station Change To Cut Coburg Trade

COBOURG, Aug. 22.—(ENS). — Cobourg may not be a 20-minute bus stop in the future when the Collacutt Coach Lines establishes its bus station in Port Hope. It was announced over the week-end in Port Hope that the coach lines company had bought the pavilion on Mill street and would convert it into a bus stop with shelter for passengers, restaurant, ticket offices, and garage. Port Hope is the south terminal of the Peterborough line of the coach company. At the present time the buses stop for twenty minutes at Cobourg. Should the buses only stop at Cobourg in the future to discharge and pick up passengers, restaurants will lose the trade of passengers who used to stop for lunch.

Pyrenees Area Dominated By Maquis Units

LONDON, Aug. 22 — While Allied columns concentrated on destroying the reeling Nazi military machine in France, German commentator Ludwing Sertorious today said there was no longer any doubt that the Allies intended to break through into the Rhone Valley, "historic highway of invasion aimed at the Rhineland."

French Forces of the Interior, timing their uprising with the near-climax of the Allies' onward rush, have taken over whole departments of France and the entire Pyrenees frontier was reported in the hands of the Maquis and the partisan forces. Uniformed officers of the French Army are said to have taken possession of the international bridge at Hendaye, completing French occupation of the Pyrenees

"All roads leading to Italy are guarded by the FFI and in the south all roads and railways used by the enemy are now unusable," the communique announced. It said there had been wholesale surrenders of Vichy militia forces and Vichy policemen in dozens of towns were going over to the Maquis.

Highly Organized

When the day of the Normandy invasion arrived there were thousands of Frenchmen living in strickly disciplined, highly organized and finely trained military groups.

On Bastille Day, July 14, several German divisions which might otherwise have been fighting on the Normandy front were tied up in desperate attempts to cope with the FFI.

The Nazi agency Transocean reported "a wild slashing melee of American and German tanks and reconnaissance units in the Paris area."

Transocean's commentator Ludwig Sentorious called the situation in Northwestern France "tense," and said the Allies were trying to herd the German 7th Army north of the Seine and "engulf it on the northern bank of the river in a far-flung encirclement."

In the south, he said, "there is no longer any doubt that the Allies intend to break through into the Rhone Valley, historic highroad of invasions aimed at the Rhineland."

Keynote of Disaster

Reports from the Spanish border said the entire Pyrenees frontier was in the hands of tre FFI, and Gen. Koenig declared one-third of France now was controlled by the Maquis. The Spanish border report that an American motorized column had passed through Angouleme nearly half the distance from the Loire to the Spanish border was indicative of the state of German disorganization.

DNB struck a disaster keynote with: "The number of men and machines which the Allies are launching against us is so crushing that even the most heroic German soldier is staggered."

S.S. 13 Percy Awarded Prize

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 22 (ENS). — Northumberland county schools have taken a keen interest in beautification and for the past several years have had a place in the high four scores in the Province of Ontario. In 1944, S.S. No. 13, Percy township, which was taught by Mr. Clare Wilson, was awarded first prize in Northumberland, and it is now announced that this school was awarded the T. Eaton Company prize for the fourth greatest improvement in Ontario.

Local prizes of $5, $4, $3, $2 and $1 were donated from the junior grant given by the Counties Council of Northumberland and Durham to the care of the agricultural representative, R. C. Banbury. The order of the four schools is as follows: S.S. No. 16, Hamilton township, Planeville School, taught by Mrs. Angus; Haldimand 12, Mill Valley School, taught by Mrs. Iva Nelson; Hamilton 17, taught by Miss Lois McMann, and Hamilton 5, taught by Miss Jameson. It is expected that the Eaton prize will be presented by Inspector Martin at some formal occasion during the fall.

Smiling Face Instead of Snappy Temper

From waking up in the morning heavy-headed and sour, this woman has experienced a "remarkable" change. In her letter she tells how this came about:—

"I am writing to let you know of the truly remarkable difference the 'little daily dose' of Kruschen has made to my life. I used to wake each morning heavy-headed, sour, and the least thing would put me in a snappy temper. At last I thought I would give Kruschen a trial. Within a week there was a marked difference and I became more optimistic. That was a month ago, and now I get up in the morning as fresh as a daisy. The home front needs smiling faces, and now, thanks to that 'little daily dose,' nothing seems too much trouble."

—(Mrs.) L. W. Lock.

Kruschen is a combination of salts which stimulates the whole system and helps cleanse the bloodstream of impurities. As a result you get relief from constipation and liverishness. And with improved bodily health comes an uplifting sensation of optimism and cheerfulness—that "Kruschen feeling."

Kruschen Salts is obtainable of all Drug Stores, 25c and 75c.

Brother, Should You Spend a Dime?

A dime is small change! (10¢) But when a lot of dimes march out of your pocket they soon become dollars that start to fight other dollars, for the new neckties, dresses or furniture left for us to buy. This battle of the dollars is called INFLATION because it starts prices rising! And the higher prices go... the less your dollar is worth! For instance, during the last war, people had to pay (23¢ lb.) for sugar that you get for (8¢ lb.) today. A voile night dress was ($6.95) compared to the ($1.98) you pay now. Your dollar buys more goods, is worth more than the dollar of 1914-18. Price ceilings and other anti-inflationary measures have helped keep it's value high. And remember! Every time you use your money wisely to pay off a debt or to increase your savings when you refuse to hoard goods or patronize black markets... it makes your dollars worth MORE!

Make This Pledge Today!

I promise to give my support to keeping the cost of living down. I will buy only what I need. I will observe the ceiling whether buying or selling goods or services. I will pay off old debts, save for the future, invest in Victory Bonds and War Savings Certificates. And I will support taxes which help lower the cost of living.

Keep Your Dollar Value High!

City Manager Plan

The City Council has announced its intention of passing a by-law authorizing meetings once a week commencing in September. With all the proposed post-war work, the duties of members of the council are necessarily very heavy at the present time. Many committee meetings must be held but their efforts can only be made final by act of the council.

The Examiner is not questioning the necessity of weekly council meetings for we know full well what work has to be accomplished and the need for speed in the planning of this work; but we do put forth the question as whether we have the right municipal plan or not. Would a City-Manager Government not bring about better results? Cities which have tried the city manager system have proved it a vehicle for better government. We pay our mayor an annual honorarium of $1,500, and should the aldermen decide to meet 52 times a year, which we doubt very much that they would, they would cost roughly $2,600 or a total in all of $4,100.

In recent years we have felt that the members of the City Council have been called upon to devote too much of their time to city business, with the result that many men in business refuse to accept positions on the council for they fear their own businesses would suffer. A meeting once a week is not going to improve this condition, but is rather going to hold back the best class of citizen in the future offering their services as aldermen.

According to the allocation of the 1942 "expenditure" dollar, as given in the city auditor's report, the city council looks after 57.16 per cent. of every dollar expended; but from this amount there are general debentures of 8.77 per cent.; administration of justice, 4.25; street lighting, 2.83; water, 2.21; police, 4.53 or 20.33 per cent. This leaves 36.83 per cent. in which is included 5.72 per cent. for health and sanitation, much of which is looked after by the Board of Health.

The educational costs totalled 42.84 per cent., of which the direct operating cost is 36.82 per cent., the remainder being debt charges. Members of the Board of Education and the Separate School Board receive no remuneration for their services and they are often called to meet twice a month. However, much of the educational costs go directly into teachers' salaries and hence as far as the work entailed in looking after the city expenditure, it cannot be compared to that of the City Council.

While we feel the sympathy of the citizens is with the members of the council in their heavy duties, it must also be remembered that much of the success of any civic government depends on the municipal employees and heads of departments. Our council should be able to outline the plan in general to be followed and then the municipal heads should be left to carry out that plan. The tendency often arises in municipal governments where the elected representatives take duties upon themselves which should in ordinary circumstances be left to the municipal heads of departments.

Industrialists and businessmen believe in training highly competent staffs for they find that in such much of the responsibility is given to members of their staffs. So why should the same course not be followed in municipal affairs?

A Closed Book Re-Opened

Since 1940 Europe has been a closed book to us. People who had visited Europe and who cherished memories of what they saw and did there hardly dared to review those memories, so painful had they become: others who knew the countries of Europe from books were almost afraid to read those books again, for they felt that the Europe which they knew at long distance would never rise again. But now, as our advancing armies set the great continent free, names which are familiar to the readers and the travellers appear again in the news, and the closed book is opened once more.

The other day we read that American troops had passed through Chartres. To some of them at least that must have been a geat moment, for it was an American, Henry Adams, who wrote most eloquently and feelingly of the great cathedral of Notre Dame which is the glory of Chartres. Those American soldiers must have had a deep satisfaction in the feeling that they were making that glorious building a world possession once again, after its four years inside the Nazi prison.

In Italy, our troops passed through Lucca on their advance to the north. Everyone who knows anything about William the Conqueror remembers that his most frequent and binding oath was "By the Holy Face of Lucca!" In one of the churches of Lucca there is an image of Our Lord which, according to legend, was carved from life; it is of great antiquity, in any case, for it was old when William knew it. It is no "gentle Jesus, meek and mild", this Holy Face of Lucca, but an austere and terrible face, searching the beholder with glaring eyes. If this is truly the Son of God, it is as he looked when he scourged the money-changers. Had any of our forces a moment to stop and stand beneath the accusing gaze of the Holy Face? If they did so, it will be one of their most awesome recollections of the war.

Good Trades For Good Men

We learn from several sources that a great deal of building will be done in Peterborough as soon as possible after the end of the war, and in particular that several houses of the more expensive sort will be built then. But the question which worries the building trade is this: where are the men coming from who will do this building?

The war has caused a shortage of carpenters, bricklayers, plasterers, stonemasons and all the other men who are needed to build a house, and there are no young men learning these trades. The fine points of the building trades have to be learned by practical instruction and example; an apprentice learns his job by working for a period of years with a man who knows it thoroughly, and in time he learns the best way of doing things, the shortcuts which are good and those which are not so good, the nature of the materials he works with, the proper use of tools, and those fine points which can best be described as "the tricks of the trade". A man who lacks this training is never a first-class workman.

But if a man is too old to go to work as a boy apprentice, he can still learn a trade, and learn it throughly if he wants to do so. After the war there will be many men who want jobs, and the building trade will have opportunities for them. A man who is thoroughly proficient in any of the building trades need have little worry about unemployment; the demand for good workmen is constant enough to provide him with jobs as long as he wants them.

There are many trades which depend on a tradition of apprenticeship and word-of-mouth teaching which have been seriously disrupted by the war. These trades are the good ones, which are well worth a man's trouble to acquire.

NOTE AND COMMENT

There is absolutely no reward for finding fault.

Dorothy Dix tells girls about to marry that an even disposition is very important. And that doesn't mean mad all the time.

Hitler insists that every hen in Germany must lay at least 60 eggs a year to assist the efforts of the Reich. Still bossing a bunch of clucks, eh Adolf?

Cancelled order: Hitler according to a dispatch from Stockholm has cancelled an order he gave more than four years ago for hundreds of tons of blocks of Swedish granite with which he proposed to erect a monument to the victory of Nazi Germany.

The Ottawa Journal puts it this way: "The fact that more than 500 German submarines have been destroyed in this war illustrates two things—the magnitude of our victory in the Battle of the Atlantic, and the imminence of the perils we have escaped".

To keep the record straight here is what Prime Minister Mackenzie King said at the time of his 25th anniversary: "I will not allow this Parliament to outrun the time fixed by constitution, though I will not, if I can avoid it, bring on an election while the war is on". From this we take the war must end before April 17, 1945—or Mr. King must change his plans.

"Milch Cow" Theory Is Exploded

From WINNIPEG FREE PRESS

THE Prairie Provinces will not be misled by the Ontario Premier's attack on Quebec in the matter of the Dominion Family Allowances Act. It cannot be directed against Quebec for, as figures appearing elsewhere on this page prove to the hilt, Quebec is paying its own due share. The attack of Mr. Drew can be directed only against the so-called "weaker" provinces, that is to say, weaker financially. These are Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island.

For obvious and unworthy political reasons, Mr. Drew has done his best to dress up his policy of provincial autonomy in a costume designed to attract the violent anti-Quebec minority in Ontario—that minority whose mouthpieces are the Toronto Globe and Mail and Telegram. But, as Premier Garson so ably demonstrated yesterday, his case breaks down before the facts. The attack cannot be directed against Quebec. It is directed against the West. It is in the light of this truth that we quote the following extract from Mr. Drew's recent broadcast:

"Many millions of dollars from the pockets of the people of Ontario would go to the Province of Quebec under this measure. But I assure you that the Government of Ontario intends to do everything within its power to make sure that this iniquitous bill does not go into effect. IT IS NOT THIS BILL ALONE BUT THE WHOLE PRINCIPLE INVOLVED WHICH WE INTEND TO RESIST. (Emphasis ours.)

"We are informed that the initial annual expenditure under this bill amounts to $200,000,000. As the people of this province contribute nearly 50 cents of every tax dollar collected in Canada, the people of Ontario would be called upon to pay out nearly $100,000,000 of that $200,000,000 of that $200,000,000.... Now if the people of Ontario are going to be called upon to contribute $100,000,000 in the form of taxes, let us see what could be done if that same money were handled by the provincial government...."

THE fundamental flaw in Mr. Drew's argument is in his statement that "millions of dollars will go from the pockets of "the people of Ontario." It is true that half the money will be paid by Ontario residents and by companies with head offices in Ontario. But this money does not come "out of the pockets of the people of Ontario." It comes from all the people of Canada. The Canadian economy has concentrated the control of Canadian wealth in Ontario, but this wealth is produced to a great extent outside that province. The taxes paid by Ontario business, Ontario industry and Ontario finance are in substantial part the taxes on profits earned by their operations in Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta, British Columbia, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island. This fact of Canadian economic life has been nailed down and clinched for all time by the Rowell-Sirois report. It was the drain of the wealth of the nation into the Ontario taxing area which demanded, and still demands, a re-allocation of national and provincial revenues and responsibilities.

It was to prevent this happening, to safeguard Ontarios taxing power over the wealth of the rest of the country, that impelled Premier Hepburn to torpedo the Rowell-Sirois commission in 1941. Mr. Drew is thus following in the footsteps of Mr. Hepburn, though he is trying to accomplish the same ends by a diversionary attack on Quebec.

THE argument that Ontario contributes 50 cents of every Canadian tax dollar, is the Hepburn argument. On Oct. 7, 1938, Mr. Hepburn said:

National unity can be obtained "only when Ontario is no longer the milch cow for the rest of the country." He criticized the Government's wheat price policy with these words: "If they are going to adopt crazy policies like that, let them apply to all the country. As it is, Ontario must pay to keep the western farmer."

On Oct. 26, 1938, Mr. Hepburn said:

"The federal Government has already loaned the western provinces in excess of $150,000,000, not a dollar of which is recoverable." The guaranteed wheat price to the West would cost Ontario millions. The Hudson Bay Railway was built with capital from the East, and freight rate concession had been granted to western coal."

On Dec. 11, 1938, Mr. Hepburn said Ontario had paid its fair share by way of contribution toward Confederation and should not be asked to pay more.

"It does not necessarily follow that we should be the goats of everybody, and I think I would be derelict in my duty as your premier if I did not put Ontario's case fairly and squarely before the Rowell Commission."

He attacked grain freight rates because they were too low; he opposed the St. Lawrence waterway on the grounds it would force railways to further reduce rates. On Feb. 3, 1942, he accused the Dominion Government of speculating in wheat to appease the West, and losing $80,000,000; of bonusing the West to grow wheat, and then bonusing the West not to grow wheat.

In pursuing his Ontario-first-last-and-always line, Mr. Hepburn at least had the merit of frankness. He knew that Quebec paid a substantial share of federal taxes, and said so on several occasions. It did so, of course, for the same reason which Ontario did, because it was the head office of innumerable great Canadian corporations which drained the wealth from the other provinces into the taxing jurisdiction of Quebec. Mr. Drew, however, does not find it politic at the moment to use Mr. Hepburn's explosive candor. His line is inevitably the same, but he hopes to prevent the rest of Canada from realizing this by his whirlwind attack on Quebec, hoping to draw general emotional support from the knowledge that, at other points, Quebec and a large part of Canada do not see eye to eye. But nobody will be taken in by this transparent manoeuvre. Mr. Drew's attack is concentrated on the West.

TEST FOR CITIZENSHIP

There is no justification for granting votes to those who have not acquired a knowledge of public affairs. These persons become an easy prey to demagogues, and their votes offset those of native-born Canadians who have intelligently studied the duties of citizenship all their lives. No one can be a true citizen of Canada who has not the ability to follow the course of events through reading of newspapers and other matter published for the information and guidance of the public.

To insist on ability to read and speak English before naturalization papers are granted, would be one of the best ways of making good Canadians out of settlers from foreign lands.—Brantford Expositor.

"EVENING IN PARIS"

Ontario Pays?

(LETHBRIDGE HERALD)

THE other day Premier Drew of Ontario condemned the children's allowances measure because, he said, it would cost Ontario $100,000,000 a year.

The whole cost of the proposal, it has been estimated, is $200,000,000 a year. Mr. Drew says Ontario will pay half of that amount, and will not get nearly that amount in return. In making this statement he is reiterating the jibe of ex-Premier Mitchell Hepburn that Ontario is just "the milch cow" for the West, which he gave as his chief reason for scuttling the Dominion-provincial conference on the Rowell-Sirois report.

The Windsor Daily Star twits Premier Drew for his parochial attitude on this matter. Where, asks the Star, does Ontario get the money with which to pay such taxes? The answer, of course, is "from the rest of Canada." Says the Star:

If some persons must insist on calling the measure a "bribe" let them term it a "bribe" to Ontario. They still would be incorrect, but at least would be giving recognition to the economic advantages which go with the bill.

Premier Drew is conceded the right to be intensely loyal to Ontario, but when he laments that his province will have to pay $100,000,000 a year as its tax share of the allowances his vision becomes parochial.

Perhaps Ontario will pay $100,000,000 a year, or half the cost of the allowances. But neither Premier Drew nor anyone else should overlook the fact that a large part of Ontario's taxpaying power comes from the contribution other provinces make day in and day out to its growth and development....

The situation is not peculiar to Ontario. New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan and Illinois probably pay half the United States' taxes, but they seem to have a broader national vision than some of the people of Ontario. At least, they are not perpetually claiming that they are being squeezed by the other 43 states.

One can only wonder if Mr. John Bracken, Progressive Conservative leader and a westerner, subscribes to Premier Drew's suggestion that our tax system exploits Ontario. It may be doubted that he does, but it is a point on which he can best speak for himself.

If the Progressive Conservatives adopt Premier Drew's views on this matter as part of their policy, they will reduce themselves to the dimensions of an Ontario party. And as an Ontario party they will have no right to hold Federal power and, for that matter, very little chance to win it.

Premier Drew's outburst on this matter puts on display one of the grave problems of this Dominion. He emphasizes one of the main causes of disunity. He tells us in a very few words why people lose faith in political leaders. And we rather suspect that Mr. Drew would be one of the first to insist that the rest of Canada should buy its manufactured articles from Ontario factories rather than from sources in other countries in trade for Canadian primary products.

Why Soldiers Will Not Talk

By JOHN STEINBECK in NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE

DURING the years between the last war and this one, I was always puzzled by the reticence of ex-soldiers about their experiences in battle. If they had been reticent men, it would have been different, but some of them were talkers and even boasters. They would discuss their experiences right up to the time of battle and then suddenly they wouldn't talk any more.

This was considered heroic in them. It was thought that what they had seen or done was so horrible that they didn't want it to haunt either them or their listeners. But because many of these men were otherwise inconsiderate, this problem bothered me.

Only recently have I found what seems to be a reasonable explanation. They did not and do not remember—and the worse the battle was, the more they forgot.

In all kinds of combat the whole body is battered by emotions. The ductless gland fluids enable the system to stand up to the great demand made upon it. Fear and ferocity are products of the same fluid. Fatigue toxins poison the system; hunger followed by wolfed food distorts the metabolic pattern, already distorted by adrenalin and fatigue. The body and mind are really ill and fevered. But in addition to these ills, which come from the inside of a man so that he can temporarily withstand pressure beyond his ordinary ability, there is the further stress of explosion.

Under extended bombardment or bombing, the nerve ends are literally beaten. The eardrums are tortured by blasts and the eyes ache from the constant hammering.

Your skin feels thick and insensitive. Your mouth tastes salty and a hard, painful knot of indigestion is in your stomach. Your sight is obscured; sharp outlines are slightly blurred. You seem to walk on air and there is a floaty feeling all over your body. Even the time seems to be changed. Normally-moving men seem to take forever to pass a given point. And when you move you appear to be very much slowed down, although actually you are probably moving more hurriedly than usual.

Under the blast your eyeballs are so beaten that the earth and the air seems to shudder. At first your eyes hurt, but then they become dull, too. Some men, of course, cannot protect themselves this way and they break; they are probably the ones which we call shell-shock cases.

In the dullness even the instinct for self-preservation is less acute so that a man may do seemingly heroic things when actually his whole fabric of reaction is changed. He laughs at funny things and becomes enraged at trifles. During this time a kind man is capable of great cruelties, a timid man of great bravery, and nearly all men of resistance to stresses beyond their ordinary ability.

Then sleep can come without warning, like a drug. Gradually your whole body seems to be packed in cotton. All the main nerve trunks are deadened, and out of the battered cortex curious dream-like thoughts emerge, sometimes causing men to see visions. The eyes fasten on a cloud and the tired brain makes a face of it, or an angel or a demon. And out of the hammered brain strange memories of forgotten scenes and people are jolted loose from the back of the mind. These may not be important, but they come back with startling clarity into the awareness that is turning away from reality, becoming almost visions.

And then it is over. There is a rushing sound in your deafened ears. You crave sleep, but when you do sleep you are dream-ridden, your mind is uneasy and crowded with figures. The anesthesia with which your body protected you is beginning to wear off, and, as with most anesthesia, it is a little painful.

And when you wake up, the things that happened, are already becoming dreamlike. Then it is not unusual that you are frightened and ill. You can't quite remember what it was like. The outlines of your memory are vague. The next day the memory slips farther, and a dream slips away almost entirely, like a woman is said to feel after childbirth.

And fever leaves this same kind of vagueness on the mind. Perhaps all experience which is beyond bearing is that way. The system provides the shield and then removes the memory, so that a woman can have another child and a man can go into combat again.

It slips away so fast. Unless you made notes on the spot, you could not remember how you felt or the way things looked. Men in prolonged battle are not normal men. And when afterward they seem to be reticent—perhaps they don't remember very well.

TAKE IT EASIER

It is of very little use at this junction to postulate the condition, to assert that Canada's national income will be $8,000,000,000 or better after the war. Nobody knows, and that form of thinking, if it is such, is the most wishful of all. We do not fear for Canada. We believe that her national income will be commensurate with her opportunities energy and goodwill. But perhaps we had all better wait to see what the national income will be before we go too far in arranging to spend it. A national government with thousands of millions of dollars to hand out in the peace may be a very pretty picture. We feel, however, that it is merely that, as time in its hard way may prove.—Victoria Colonist.

A Bible Message

In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God.... And the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us, (and we beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father,) full of grace and truth. John bare witness of him, and cried, saying, This was he of whom I spake, He that cometh after me is preferred before me: for he was before me. And of his fulness have all we received, and grace for grace. For the law was given by Moses, but grace and truth came by Jesus Christ.

No man hath seen God at any time; the only begotten Son, which is in the bosom of the Father, he hath declared him.....

The next day John seeth Jesus coming unto him, and saith, Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world.... And John bare record, saying, I saw the Spirit descending from heaven like a dove, and it abode upon him. And I knew him not: but he that sent me to baptize with water, the same said unto me, Upon whom thou shalt see the Spirit descending, and remaining on him, the same is he which baptizeth with Holy Ghost.

And I saw, and bare record that this is the Son of God. (John 1: 1, 14-18, 29, 32-34.)

'E'en in Our Ashes!'

In many clubs, hotels, and offices people who mention bombs are now made to place a silver fine in the collecting box. Yet this incredible but absolutely true episode deserves recording, if only as a tribute to a classical education. A friend of mine had his home badly blitzed. His first thought, on pulling himself together, was of his neighbours, a very elderly ex-diplomat and his French wife. He found their front door smashed, windows gone, ceilings down, but the elderly ex-diplomat greeted him cheerfully in the disordered hall. In answer to the question whether they were all right, the elderly ex-diplomat mentioned that his wife was pinned under a wardrobe upstairs. With my friend's assistance the lady was released, not much worse for her adventure. But her husband triumphantly waved a scrap of paper at the rescuer, exclaiming, "Whilst I was waiting for help, I looked up my Horace in the library trying to find a classical quotation to fit the occasion. Here it is—Impavidum ruinae feri-ent!" Incidentally I have that scrap of paper. Can the monstrous regiments of "stinks" enthusiasts, who deride the classics, produce anything equal to that example of sang froid—London Bureau.

She-Help in Rehabilitation

An interesting approach to the problems of rehabilitation in Europe appears in a medical mission formed by the Netherlands Government-in-Exile. This mission, which will go to the Netherlands as soon as the Nazi occupation is ended, has as its object the reorganization of the medical resources already in that country and their application to rehabilitation needs.

The conception of this mission originated with Dr. Herman de JoJng of Duke University, formerly of the University of Amsterdam. He discussed his idea with the Netherlands Government and received its complete approval. Largely under his initiative, a corps of nine Dutch-speaking and English-speaking doctors, specialists in all the main branches of medicine, have been recruited from Duke University, Johns Hopkins University and the Rockefeller Institute.

The work of these men will not be concerned with the direct assistance of the Dutch people so much as with assistance to the Dutch medical profession. They will give refresher courses in medicine at the Dutch universities, which have been seriously disorganized under the Nazi r... They will bring knowledge of medical discoveries and improved techniques. Not least, because of the looting of Dutch medical school and hospital equipment, these doctors will take with them all material and instruments needed for laboratory and demonstration purposes.

The significance of this mission is that it is based on the belief that the Netherlands, with initial outside help, will gradually be in a position to undertake a large measure of national restoration along medical lines. It emphasizes the principle of self-help in the rehabilitation process. Though, in this case, the application is specifically to medicine, it is a principle which will no doubt be found the soundest and the most efficient in approaching the general rehabilitation problem.

Balanced Meals Needed For Good Health

Although the month of August will soon be over, there is still quite a bit of warm weather ahead, and the problem of tempting appetites and still providing nourishing meals remains the same. The difficulty in planning summer meals is that enough nourishment must be provided in a light, tempting form, and the danger is that some of the protective foods, essential to good health, may be skipped.

Fall is an important time of the year, since it marks the beginning of a radical change in weather. Many people fall ill in this season because they have not eaten nourishing foods during the heat of the summer, and haven't had time to build up resistance in their bodies before a cold spell comes along. One thing to remember, which may help to balance diets, is that it is not how much, but what is eaten, that is most important. A balanced diet with sufficient vitamins and minerals and oher food essenials assures resistance against the cold weather.

Leafy green and yellow vegetables are mentioned particularly among the vegetables which should be eaten every day, since they contain important Vitamin A that promotes growth, increases resistance to infection, and keeps the eyes and skin healthy. Dairy products, liver and tomatoes, also suply this vital vitamin.

Spinach, kale, chard, parsley, carrots broccoli and sweet potatoes are particularly rich in Vitamin A. Here is an idea of the quantities needed to give sufficient Vitamin A for one day: One serving of leafy green or yellow vegetable, plus any one of the following: one serving of liver, two ounces of cheese, three glasses of milk, three one-inch cubes of butter, or one serving of tomatoes.

Salads Wholesome

While the warm weather is still here, don't forget the value of nutritious salads, and include a medley of various raw fruits and vegetables in the next family dinner. A green salad can become the main dish at dinner on a hot day if strips of cold meat and cheese, or sliced hard-cooked eggs are added. This combination not only provides the necessary protein content for health, but will please the family appetite too.

Another attractive item, ham sandwiches, has long been a favorite on everybody's list for lunches, snacks, picnics, and picnic suppers on the front porch. Hot or cold sliced ham, with mustard-flavored butter on plain or toasted bread is always popular, and ground ham, horseradish, and salad dressing is another sure-fire hit.

Here's another idea for something "different" on a warm day. As a change from fried fish, try stuffing and baking it instead, or bake fish filets in milk. Fish steaks, broiled, and basted once or twice with melted margarine to which lemon juice and a little minced onion have been added, will also draw approving nods from the family as they "dig in."

Loretta J. Condon Weds Sailor

Rt. Rev. Monsignor F. J. O'Sullican officiated at the ceremony in Immaculate Conception Church, when Loretta Irene Condon, daughter of Mrs. John Condon and the late John Condon, 650 Rogers street, became the bride of Gordon William McCartney, R.C.N.V.R., son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McCartney, George street. The church was decorated with gladioli and fern. Mrs. J. A. MacDonald was at the organ, and Mrs. D. Campanero was soloist.

Given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Emmett Condon, the bride was charming in floor-length white sheer over satin, made on long torso lines, with lace inserts in the full skirt shirred at the waist. The fitted bodice was made with a scalloped neckline, finished at the back from neck to waistline with tiny self-covered buttons, and long sleeves, coming to a point over each wrist. Her veil and train of white net fell from a matching halo, and she carried a bouquet of red roses, with white streamers tied with roses.

Miss Jean Marleau, cousin of the bride, was her only attendant in floor-length light blue rayon silk cutwork, made on similar lines to the bride's, and trimmed with pink. She wore a Sweetheart halo of pink net, with blue shoulder-length veil, and carried a bouquet of pink roses. Pte. Leo Shine was best man, and OD. Jack Sullivan and Stewart Gerald Fitzgerald, both of the R.C.N.V.R., were ushers.

At the reception, held following the ceremony at Hooper's Palm Rooms, the bride's mother received the guests in a black crepe gown, trimmed with white, a black and white felt hat, and a corsage of sweet peas.

For a wedding trip to Hamilton, the bride chose an Old Rose crepe dress, with black accessories, and carried a sand gabardine coat.

AGE HAS ITS COMPENATION

It Brings Serenity, Trust in Life That Youth Doesn't Have

Practically all of us look forward to age as a time of dread when we will be an affliction to ourselves and our families; when our mental joints will crack in unison with our knee joints and there will be no health in us and no fun in living. That is why we hang on to youth with our teeth and toe nails and lie about our birthdays and go through all manner of torture and deprivations trying to gambol around like Spring lambs long after we are stiff old sheep.

Don't Borrow Trouble

Strangely enough, we seldom realize that age has its many compensations. One is that it brings us serenity. We no longer exist, as the young do, in a state of jittery apprehension about calamities that may possibly befall us. After we have lived seventy years we cease to borrow trouble because we have seen that so many of the things that we feared would happen to us didn't happen at all. So many of the problems we laid awake at night worrying over solved themselves when the time came. So many of the catastrophes we dreaded turned into blessings that we have learned to trust life, instead of being terrorized by it.

Another of the compensations of age is that the old can do business on half the stock of charms and virtues that the young can. Any old man and woman who are gay and amusing talkers instead of being tiresome repeaters, are celebrated as marvellous conversationalists And if Grandma and Grandpa would only keep their fingers out of their children's pies, they would be worshipped by their progeny.

Still another of the compensations of age is that it enables one to do what one wants to do and to leave undone those things which one doesn't want to do. The old have an ever-ready alibi at hand. They don't have to go to tiresome parties where they play games or to dull dinners where the food is bad or to suffer bores. They can weed out their friends and keep only the ones they enjoy. And, having heard all the good music and read the classics, they can turn on the jazz and devour detective stories.

To women, who are more afraid of growing old than men, age is especially kind, little as they think it. Time chisels many a homely girl's face into a beauty and turns away many a gawky debutante into a poised woman of the world. Youth is popularly supposed to be a woman's happiest time of life. In fact, it is her most miserable, because it is torn with so many anxieties about her looks her clothes, her dates and whether she will get a good husband or not.

It is only after she passes sixty and doesn't care who knows it, and lets out her corset strings and quits counting her calories that a woman is really happy. Blessed be age.

Trenton Meet Plazas Here Tomorrow Night

The first game in the O.A.S.A. Intermediate A playoffs will be played tomorrow night at Riverside Park when Plazas, local winners will meet Trenton. The game should prove one of the top attractions of the present season as Trenton have a strong club and the Plazas are a well-balanced outfit.

With three pitchers ready to start no announcement has been made who will receive the hurling assignment, but all three, Frank Stokoe, Terry Woods and Dave Wilson, are ready. This trio dropped only two games in the semi-final and final series.

After a slow start in the regular season Plazas found themselves during the local playoffs and came through brilliantly, both in hitting and fielding, and they should give a good account of themselves as the local representatives in the Ontario playdowns.

Trenton have one of the strongest teams to enter the playoffs from that city in years and with the big air training centre to draw from will undoubtedly field a classy outfit. The game is billed for 6:15 o'clock at Riverside Park and should attract one of the largest crowds of the year.

PERFECT GAME — Southpaw little Miss Annabelle Lee of North Hollywood, Cal., reserved a corner all her own in the All-American girls' professional ball league's "hall of fame" when she pitched the only perfect game—no run, no hit, not a player reached first base. They won from the Kenosha, Wis., Comets 18-0. Annabelle has just brought out a trick knuckle ball pitch which she is showing here to the Minneapolis manager, Claude "Bubber" Jonnard, who in his pro-ball days was the pitching end of the New York Giants twin-brother battery.

Brintons Drub Marines Winning 5 to 3

Brintons came out from behind to take the second game of the Intermediate Play-offs from Outboard Marines, Monday evening at Ashburnham Bowl, as they scored three times in the eighth frame to build up a 2-run lead, and wind up the game with a 5 to 3 count. The play-offs, a four-game-out-of-seven setup, will continue Friday evening when the Marines and Brintons clash again.

In Monday evening's game, the Marines were leading right up to the eighth inning, when the Brinton girls let loose a barrage of hard hitting, and aided by a few errors on the Marine's part, effected the win.

The Marines scored twice in the second inning, when Bertha Phillips and Edna Smith, who were both walked, scored on a helftily-tossed ball, meant for the second baseman, that flew away overhead. Brintons came back with one run in their section of the frame, when Jean Vass scored on a hit-into centre-right field by Marg. Thompson.

Another run turned in by the Brinton girls in the third inning, tied the game 2-all. Thelma Batley came down the home stretch on a hit into left field by Marjorie Walling.

The two teams remained on even terms until the fifth inning, when a Marine run registered by Ollie Smith on a hit by Maxine Monson broke the tie and shot the Marines out ahead by one counter. The Marines, who lost the first game of the play-offs, kept their slim edge until the eighth, when three Brinton runs, ruined the fixture for them. In the eighth, Marjorie Walling, Brinton singled into left field, Norma Blackwell walked, and Doris Walker popped to Vera Mitchell at first base Jean Vass donated an infield fly, and after, Marjorie Walling scored. A single into left field by Gertrude Lawson brought home Norma Blackwell, and when Marg. Thompson shot an easy one near the short stop post, and no one was there to apprehend it Gertrude Lawson came home.

Brinton used 3 pitchers against the Marines, beginning with Phyllis Corrigan, Thelma Batley was next, and finally Doris Walker took over the post. The Brinton hurling efforts fanned four Marines, walking 2, and allowing 11 blows. The Marine's hurler was Maxine Monson, who pitched steady ball throughout, fanning 5, walking 2 and allowing 10 hits. Brintons left 7 players on bases; Marines left 8.

The teams:

Brinton: Thelma Batley 3b, Betty Hambin, rf; Marjorie Walling, lf; Norma Blackwell, cf; Doris Walker, p; Jean Vass, c; Gertrude Lawson, ss; Margaret Thompson, 2b; Elsie MacKenzie, 1b.

Outboard Marines: Eileen Young, lf; Ollie Smith, 2b; Vera Mitchell, 1b; Maxine Monson, p; Marjorie Smith, 3b; Teddy Mills, c; Betty Smith, rf; Bertha Phillips, ss; Edna Smith, cf.

NEW YORK, Aug. 22 (AP)—Overseas sports roundup:

The Sandstorm League.

Here's how they play army baseball in the Middle East, as related by Larry Leonard: "Our baseball team was engaging a quartermaster unit when all of a sudden the Q.M. boys voiced protest against the umpiring. Finally they tossed out the umpire. They put in another umpire (tell Durocher to try it some time) and this new ump was one of our better players who had just come out of the hospital. Well, things worked beautifully until the 10th when with the score tied our team, realizing the hitting ability of the kid we had umpiring, tried to take him out as ump and use him as a pinch-hitter.... The other team protested so strongly they finally walked off the field and the game has to be played over."

From "Perpetual" Private Doc Goldstein: "A few days ago a local Army all-star baseball team thumped some Navy all stars. I sat alongside a high ranking navy officer who commented on the army shortstop thus: 'That shortstop has potentialities. In a few years he'll be ripe for the big leagues.'....The guy was G.I. Doerr Leading Batting List

NEW YORK, Aug. 22 (AP)—Bobby Doerr of Boston held tight to the American League batting lead today despite a new challenge from Lou Boudreau of Cleveland but Stan Musial of St. Louis squeezed past the ailing Dixie Walker of Brooklyn in the National's red hot chase.

According to averages through Sunday's games, Doerr was hitting .324 and enjoying a slim four-point edge on Boudreau who advanced from fourth to second, passing Dick Siebert of Philadelphia and Pete Fox of Boston.

Milt Byrnes of St. Louis grabbed seventh place among the American's top ten and Stan Spence of Washington took ninth with Wally Moses of Chicago and Vern Stephens of St. Louis dropping out of the select circle.

Musial topped Walker by one point at .355 but the Brooklyn favorite returned to the lineup on a full-time basis Sunday after 10 days of pinch hitting chores due to ankle injury. Johnny Hopp of St. Louis at .346 and Joe Medwick of New York at .340 stepped into the title picture with healthy gains.

Dan Gutteridge Cracks Out Homer Of Year

By JACK HAND
Associated Press Sport Writer.

Mr. Pepper Pot of the St. Louis Browns, alias Don Gutteridge, won't be in the front row when they count the most valuable player ballots in November, but he was the No. 1 man on the ticket to-day in St. Louis.

The little second baseman waited until last night at Washington to get his annual home run and picked the right spot—in the 12th inning of a 3-3 ball game with Frank Mancuso on base. Gutteridge hit one homer last year and one the year before.

When the ex-Cardinal gave the league-leaders a 5-3 victory over the Nats' Mickey Haefner, he gave them a shot in the arm that may shake them out of their troubles. Luke Sewell's men had dropped four in a row.

The 5-3 overtime win that Sig Jakucki earned over Washington boosted the Browns' lead to 4½ games as Boston fell before Cleveland, 7-6, in 13 innings because of another home run, hit by Mickey Rocco of the Tribe.

Detroit, next port of call for St. Louis after they finish their Washington visit to-night, was dropped by New York, 5-1, as Walt Dubiel scattered eight hits effectively for his ninth win.

Philadelphia took a 3-2 decision over Chicago in 10 innings with Don Black getting the verdict over Bill Dietrich on Frankie Hayes' bases-loaded single.

Pittsburg's latest win streak mounted to five and 16 of their last 17 as they trimmed Brooklyn 7-6 in 10 innings after finishing up a suspended game hanging over from July 9 with a 9-7 triumph.

Ernie Lombardi drove in all four Giant runs with two homers and a single in New York's 4-3 margin over Chicago.

Orioles Wobbly Lose To Syracuse Chiefs

By The Associated Press

The heat of the International League pennant race seems to have had a telling effect on the Baltimore Orioles.

The Birds had an even game going into the last of the ninth last night against Syracuse, but blew up in that frame and the Chiefs came out on top 3-2. Rollie VanSlate, who had relieved Bobo Palica in the eighth, walked Dutch Mele to start the ninth. VanSlate then threw the ball into centre field trying to break up an attempted sacrifice.

The flock really came apart at the seams when Third Baseman Frank Skaff threw wild past second to permit Mele to sail home with the clincher. The Orioles, now two games behind Newkark, surrendered the lead Sunday.

The Orioles were forced to make their two runs from only six hits as Bob Malloy chalked up his 12th victory.

In the only other action in the league, Buffalo and Rochester staged a slugging bee with the Wings blasting their way to a 9-7 decision. In all there were 29 hits made, 16 of them Buffalos'.

Junior Rugbyists Invited To Practice

For any boys 18 and under wishing to join a junior rugby team, there will be a practice at King Edward Park at 6:30 to-night. Under the direction of Coach Richard Jackson, of the C. G. E., 15 boys turned out for practice last week, the first held this year.

With two games planned with Trinity College in Port Hope in October, it is important that practices be started immediately and all boys interested in this favorite autumn sport should come out.

A determined effort is being made to revive rugby in this district, and the city council has shown its complete interest in this scheme by donating a substantial amount to accelerate the Peterborough's boy's interest in the game. Practically all of the senior Peterborough team of a few years back, are now in the armed forces; some have been wounded overseas, others are still there.

Army Partially Rescinds Sports Edict

OTTAWA, Aug. 22.— (CP).— An armed forces sports order issued today permits servicemen to play on service teams in amateur leagues that include civilian teams but prohibits them playing on civilian teams or in games leading to group, provincial or Dominion championships.

Army and air force boxers and wrestlers can not compete in other than authorized public shows.

In other words, Cpl. Johnny Canuck can play for a service team in the Ottawa City League against civilians, but he mustn't play for one of the civilian entries and he can play only until his team reaches the play-offs when he and his team must drop out. Johnny also is restricted "except in special cases" to playing within the boundaries of his command area.

No service official would be quoted, but it was learned reliably that if service teams entered the Quebec Senior Hockey League, for instance, they would be considered as "special cases." One service officer said it would be largely up to district commanding officers to administer and interpret the order to meet the needs of thier own areas.

Lifts January Ban.

To-day's order lifts a January ban which restricted service teams and players to participating in local garrison leagues only and which dealt a severe blow to much of Canada's organized amateur sport—especially hockey.

The order re-emphasizes that permission for sports participation will be given only where such activities do not interfere with other phases of training.

Here is the official service summary in part of the points in the order:

"1. Every possible encouragement to be given teams to participate in sports within the services, already approved by sports councils at Defence Headquarters.

"2. Garrison leagues may be entered by service personnel, as well as non-professional leagues which include civilian teams, on approval by their command or district officer.

3. Individaul service personnel may only play with or against a civilian team for practice purposes, for exercise, by permission of the commanding officer. They may not play in scheduled leagues or exhibition games as players on teams which have civilian players.

"4. Teams may not play in exhibtion games outside the boundaries of their areas of command, except in special cases where full particulars are submitted to Defence Headquarters.

"5. Teams from all services may enter leagues with civilian team, not professional, by permission of the commandinng officer, but may not take part in any games leading to group, provincial or dominion championships.

"6. Participation by army and air force personnel in public boxing or wrestling performnces, other than those organized by services is forbidden."

FOOTBALL SEASON APPROACHES—College football will soon come around again across the line. In Ohio State, football hopes boomed with the news that Les Horvath, above, star halfback of the 1942 Big Ten and national championship Buckeye team, will almost certainly be available for the Bucks this autumn. Horvath is a member of the A.S.T.P. Dental Corps which the War Department has ordered abandoned. Horvath is expected to get his honorable discharge at least by September 4.

TORONTO, August 22 — (CP).— Taking note of the much-muddled situation on the senior Canadian front, Mike Rodden of the Kingston Whig-Standard suggests that Kingston should get into the swim this year. With Toronto Navy succumbing to the blandishments of the Service League, the O.R.F.U. might be able to use the Kingstonites as a fifth cog for the loop.

Some classy footballers sojourning at Kingston as outlined by Mike are: Ken Preston, Regina Rough Riders backfielder; Yip Radley, a former Rough Rider; Bob Elliott of Queen's University squads, who enjoys some little reputation as coach.

Entry of a new element from Kingston would do much to rejuvenate the groggy football world and create new interest. Always provided, of course, the other cities would accept a new rival.

Chin talk:

Detroit Red Wings talent scout Freddie Cox says the three Chinese Chin boys from Lucknow, Ont., are going to surprise everyone this winter. Cox says the three—George Albert and William, 15, 16 and 17 respectively—have much more than mere box-office appeal. They'll be seasoned at Galt or Woodstock a winter or two, but Cox is confident they will be ready for the big-time before too long.

Incidentally:

The storm is over for a time in the West Coast lacrosse loop, but wait until the play-off time rolls around. Nobody knows whether any of the service teams will be allowed to leave the province of they win the league, but the three civilian teams want to travel East. So it looks as though it might turn into another of those double play-off fixtures, with everybody groggy including the fans.... At last we've found the unassuming soul who desires no glory. It's reported that Harry Taylor, smooth centre for the Manitoba junior champion St. James Canadians last winter, has turned down an offer to join the perennially-healthy Oshawa Generals.... Billy Gooden of last year's New York Rangers, has been sold to the American League's Hershey Bears, he tells Maurice (Winnipeg Free Press) Smith.

Third Playoff Set For Tonight

An interesting battle in the Girls' Softball loop is coming up tonight, when Aircraft and Westclox, the two rival contenders for the Senior Ladies' League championship, clash at Ashburnham Bowl in the third game of the play-off series.

At the present standing, Westclox is two games up on the swing-skirted Aircrafters, and have only two games to win to take the championship. Aircraft has come out from behind to score some fast wins in the past, which should make the remaining games at the Bowl worth seeing.

Fine ball playing has caused much more interest in the Senior Girls' League, and a big crowd is expected for the third game of the play-offs, at the Bowl tonight.

CHICAGO, August 22 —(AP) — Gerald Driscoll, 19-year-old skipper from San Diego Bay (Calif.), won the opening race of the 1944 International star class regatta yesterday, sailing the 10-mile course in 3:04.58.

Amateur Hits Five Under Par In All-American Golf Circus

CHICAGO, Aug. 22.—(AP).—They hoisted the curtain on the mob-scene first act of the seven-day Tam o' Shanter $42,500 three-ring all-American golf circus Monday.

It was amateur day, and 280 simon pure devotees from 16 States, Hawaii and Canada hacked their way around in the first division of an 18-hole qualifier.

He Was a Hot Number.

Ed Furgol, a 24-year-old Birmingham, Mich., public links star, furnished the fireworks as he ripped the course apart with a 32-35—67, five under par, to lead the way by three strokes. The lanky auto plant employee muffed par on only one hole, the 445-yard 14th, where he lost a stroke by pitching over the green. He made up for it with six birdies, four on the first nine.

To-day another 134 of the play-for-fun brigade, who couldn't find room to swing a club in yesterday's dawn-to-dusk canter, will share the layout with some 40 women. They're due off the tee at 6 a.m., just as they were yesterday when darkness held up the early starters.

The 24 low scorers in the amateur and feminine contingents will stay in there and swing through the 72-hole medal play title tests which wind up next Sunday. The professional field of 215, augmented by the golf-for-gold gang arriving from the P.G.A. tournament at Spokane, will have the course to itself this afternoon for a few practice swings.

The pro's go into their qualifier Wednesday morning with 80 low-scorers emerging for the 72-hole chase after the top prize of some $13,000 in war bonds—the richest prize ever handed a mashie swinger. Riding in second place after yesterday's session with sub-par 70's were Ken Heilemann of St. Louis, Mo., 28-year-old chemist and former Chicago district junior king. Frank Kovack of Chicago, semi-finalist in the amateur Tam o'Shanter last year when it was on a match-play basis.

Wisnock Soars to 76.

Deadlocked at 71 were Wilford Wehrle of Racine, Wis., low amateur in the 1940 United States Open; Tom Frainey, 46-year-old Chicagoan, and George Dawson of Chicago, who 18 years ago was a semi-finalist in the National Amateur.

Nick Wisnock of Hamilton, Ont., turned in a 36-40 for an 18-hole total of 76.

Scores ranged from Furgol's scintillating 67 to a boisterous 106 turned in by Raymond Gruwald of Chicago.

Qualifiers will not be named until after to-day's jaunt, but indications were that scores within two or three strokes of par would be necessary to stay in the amateur scrap.

German Losses 350,000 Across France

NEW YORK, Aug. 22 (CP)—Total German casualties in the great Wehrmacht debacle in Northern France topped the 350,000 mark tonight as Allied Headquarters in England said that the American 3rd Army in its sweep to Paris had captured, killed or wounded a total of 109,575 Nazis, and thousands more were taken by British, Canadian and American forces in the Normandy bulge battle.

It was revealed that 49,650 Germans had been captured, 11,025 killed and 48,900 wounded in the American 3rd Army drive. And in the battle around the Falaise-Argentan gap an estimated 25,000 Germans had been captured by 12.45 p.m., E.D.T.

British, Canadian, Polish and American troops between them captured a total of about 10,000 Germans in the Normandy bulge during the day. Lt.-Gen. Dempsey's British 2nd Army alone took 2,000 up to noon, boosting its personal total to 10,000 in the pocket.

Prisoners taken by 1st Canadian Army yesterday numbered at least 2,300, to bring their bag taken since Falaise fell four days ago to between 4,000 and 5,000. No figures were immediately available on the proportion of today's 10,000 taken by the Canadians.

On Aug. 16 the total of German casualties in Northern France since the opening of the campaign approached the 300,000 mark. In a little over two weeks the United States 3rd Army was responsible for 100,000 of these—39,000 prisoners, 46,000 wounded, and 11,000 killed.

The estimate of Aug. 9 was a total of 190,000 Nazi casualties.

The 3rd United States Army has inflicted nearly 110,000 casualties on the Germans since Aug. 1, it was announced tonight. Gen. Patton's force has taken 49,650 prisoners killed 11,025 and wounded 46,900, a total of 109,575.

Schools Will Open September 5 Across Ontario

TORONTO, Aug. 22.— All elementary and secondary schools of Ontario will re-open Sept. 5, except when school boards, under authorization provided last April by the Ontario Department of Education, close any secondary school or grade for a period not exceeding four weeks to permit students to aid in harvesting, processing, preserving and canning food. Ontario Premier and Minister of Education George Drew said in a statement issued last night.

"In view of the fact that we continue to receive requests from some localities that all secondary schools in the Province remain closed during September to provide additional help on farms, I think it advisable that I should leave no doubt about the situation in regard to the opening of our secondary schools," he said.

"On April 4 last, a notice was sent to every secondary school board in the Province urging that pupils be impressed with the need for help on the farms. We made arrangements to permit pupils in secondary schools to leave before termination of the school year so they could do this work.

"At the same time, it was very clearly stated that the responsibility for keeping any of the schools closed during September rested with local school boards. They were given authority to close secondary schools under their control for any period up to four weeks after Sept. 5 which they thought advisable under local conditions.

"So that there may be no confusion, it should be defintely understood that the schools will reopen on Sept. 5, except where the local boards have taken action. There are a number of areas in Ontario where students are required. There are more where they are not required because of different agricultural conditions. The nation's food supply is a matter of utmost importance and the arrangements which have been made afford the opportunity to provide local help where it is needed. The education of our children is also of utmost importance, and there would be good reason for resentment if schools were again closed in areas where pupils are not needed."

The notice sent out April 4 to all secondary school boards and principals also stated that pupils enrolled in schools and grades which will not be closed during September, and who were employed in essential work connected wtih the food supply during their summer holidays could, if their services were required, remain at their food supply help work during September. Principals and teachers of such pupils are expected to make special provisions for them on their return to school, to enable them to overtake school work they have missed.

Rev. R. Williams Guest Preacher

MILLBROOK, August 22 —(ENS) —Large congregations worshipped in the Presbyterian churches of Centreville and Millbrook on Sunday, morning and evening, when the guest minister was Rev. Richard Williams, B. A., who has been in the West for the past few years, and who was a Millbrook resident up to the time he completed his High School course. In expressing his pleasure in again occupying the pulpit of Grace Church on Sunday evening, Mr. Williams mentioned the fact that he is to be inducted into the charge of the First Presbyterian Church, Seaforth, on the first Sunday in September, and would welcome any local friends who happened to be in that town to visit his home and congregation.

A duet, "The Church by the Side of the Road," was sung by Misses Ethelda Hubbeard and Mary Blair, Mrs. Hubbeard presiding at the organ.

Speaking from the words: "Ye call Me Master and Lord, and ye do well, for so I am," the minister made a strong plea for acknowledgment of Christ as Master of the individual life, straying from this decision having led to "the world being out of kilter because men are not willing to allow Him the mastership of their lives, and disregard His words. None of us has really grasped what Christianity actually means, and we will never know the fulness of life until we are willing to come completely under His control. Obedience is an essential of this in daily living, and also 'to let go, and let God.' We may well echo the words of the poem, 'Make me a captive, Lord, that I may be free."

Rev. H. R. Williams, who is holidaying in this vicinity, took his son's work at Keene on Sunday. He is now located at Alvinston, about one hundred miles from Seaforth where Rev. Richard Williams will be pastor.

French Women Killing Huns

By HAL BOYLE.

WITH AMERICAN TROOPS IN BRITTANY, August 7 (Delayed by Censorship) (AP) —French mademoiselles armed with enemy Luger pistols and carrying potato-masher grenades in their belts have joined French resistance leaders in Brittanys' greatest outdoor sport— capturing Germans.

Some of the women lug rifles on their shoulders and speed down secondary roads searching out isolated pockets of Germans.

"I met two of these French gals yesterday packing Luger pistols," said Lieut. Leonard Hughes of Fond du Lac, Wis., supply officer. "We have been trying to get our hands on some of those Lugers ever since we landed— and here were these gals packing a pair of 'em. We tried to trade them cirgarets for their pistols, but they wouldn't do it. They wanted to keep them to kill Germans.

Those women are amazing. They fix up old trucks and go out Boche hunting the way our girls back home set out for the movies. They get out in front and lead our supply trucks for hours, checking roads ahead to see if they are clear.

"You've got to hand it to these Free French. They're doing a wonderful job. They just go in with grenades and clean out those Germans whenever they find them."

No Extra Paper For Victory Editions

WASHINGTON, August 22—(AP) —American newspapers planning Armistice Day and special editions will have to save the necessary newsprint tonnage from current consumption quotas, Carroll Handon of the War Production Board, said to-day.

No extra newsprint can be allocated for armistice editions, or special editions of any kind because of continuing paper shortages, said Hanson, chief of the newspaper section of the board's printing and publishing division.

Hanson said it may be many months after the surrender before any substantial imports of newsprint can be obtained from sources outside North America.

However, he added that Canada principal source of newsprint for U.S publisrers, is fulfilling present commitments to supply 200,000 tons of standard 32-pound newsprint monthly. July delivery was 209,000 tons.

AB. Bill Cuppy Home On Woodstock

After some interesting work on H.M.C.S. Woodstock during the invasion, Able Seaman Bill Cuppy, is home visiting his aunt, Mrs. P. Jarvis, 94 Bennett street. He is the second Peterborough boy serving on this ship, L-S. "Ike Cleary" being the other.

Reticent about his experiences, the young sailor said that the men had to sleep on the upper deck with their clothes on so they could reach their stations in a hurry. When they were on duty, they were brought "Kai," a special brand of Navy chocolate, every two hours.

As for rations, they were canned, he declared. There was wartime bread and butter and practically no green vegetables. He said he hadn't had milk since last September, and the men were allowed one egg a week or powdered egg, if they could eat it, and he couldn't. In spite of this, he said, they managed fine on their rations and had no kick.

Trained on radio work, AB Cuppy has been on ships mainly concerned with convoy work since he enlisted in August, 1942. He served on a minesweeper and a destroyer before he joined the crew of H.M.C.S. Woodstock. According to newspaper stories, he and his comrades were working with American forces. By the time they reached the French coast, big Royal Navy guns had beaten down most of the resistance and only a few salvos were fired. At different times he has been on a ship attacked by planes, but has never been subjected to U-boat attacks.

Missed the Boat

One member of the crew failed to make the invasion run. The sailors' mascot, named "E Boat," and described as "just plain dog," was a popular member of the crew, but they were afraid he'd be too much trouble, so the men had to ditch him, before getting underway.

At different times, when the ship was in port and the men remained on board they put on plays and broadcasts. Members of the cast performed in one of the messes and the public address system carried the programs to the men in other parts of the ship. One of the more popular numbers included a take-off on the captain and officers of the ship.

Before and after the invasion, AB Cuppy met several Peterborough men. Shortly before the S.D. and G. Highlanders left for France he met several boys from that unit. He met Jerry O'Donoghue, Chum Gillespie of the Qu-Appelle and Pat Shaughnessy. All of them were fine and still on duty.

This sailor collaberated the newspaper account that one of the exciting moments during the invasion came when a bomb or mine was exploded some distance from the ship, rocking it about slightly. He also stated that they ran into a few rough crossings.

Liked Scotland

Like many other Canadians, he found he much preferred Scotland to England, mostly because the people are more friendly. He spent one week-end at Loch Lomond and another in London. Prior to enlisting he worked part time at the Centre Smoke shop.

Following his fudlough, AB Cuppy reports to St. Hyacinthe for a course, following which he will be reposted. He mentioned that he and his chums often used to tune into German propaganda broadcasts, designed especially for Allied soldiers, just to hear the most-up-to-date North American recordings, which were far in advance of what English bands were featuring.

"Where they got them, I don't know, but they surely sounded good," he declared.

Huns Lay Waste City Of Warsaw

LONDON, August 22 — (CP).—The Germans are laying waste large sections of Warsaw with artillery and planes, trying to smash underground forces battling Nazi troops within the city, Polish quarters here said yesterday. Much of the old city has been almost wiped out and the famous 15th century cathedral has been almost pulverized, the informants said.

A communique relayed from the underground said German infantry and tanks had penetrated into the old city, where patriot fighters are concentrated, after a terrific artillery and plane bombardment.

The Polish Telegraph Agency said the Gemans have seized 70,000 Poles in Warsaw in the last few days and herded them into a concentration camp in an effort to break the revolt.

Quoting the Polish underground radio in Warsaw, the news agency said the Germans were "systematically burning down the city Street after street has been set on fire."

Will Exchange Prisoners In September

OTTAWA, Aug. 22 (CP)—An exchange of seriously ill and wounded prisoners and surplus protected personnel between Germany and the Allied countries will take place early in September at Goteborg, Sweden, the External Affairs Department announced last night.

There will be an exchange of British and German civilians at Goteborg on the same day.

German prisoners from Canada and the United States will leave New York this week on the exchange ship Gripsholm.

No information is available on the number of Canadian prisoners of war and civilians who may be repatriated, and it is not expected lists will be received until the repatriates reach Goteborg.

The department said next of kin of repatriates belonging to the armed forces will be notified as soon as the nominal roll is received. The External Affairs Department will notify next of kin of civilian repatriates.

The exchange ship for civilian repatriates will be the Drottningholm.

The exchange will be the third of its kind since the start of the war. The first took place at Goteborg in October, 1943, and the second when a number of Canadians came out of Germany, took place at Barcelona early this year.

RECTAL SORENESS AND PILE TORTURE
QUICKLY RELIEVED

If you are troubled with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not delay treatment and run the risk of letting this condition become chronic. Any itching or soreness or painful passage of stool is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once.

For this purpose get a package of Hem-Roid from McDermid & Jury or any I.D.A or other drug store and use as directed. This formula which is used internally is a small, easy to take tablet, will quickly relieve the itching and soreness and aid in healing the sore, tender spots. Hem-Roid is pleasant to use is highly recommended, and it seems the height of folly for any one to risk a painful and chronic pile condition when such a fine remedy may be had at such a small cost.

If you try Hem-Roid, and are not entirely pleased with the results, your druggist will gladly return your money. —(Advt.)

AN ADVENTURER.

Hard on the heels of a news item telling of a youngster joyfully sipping genuine beer, a little boy, scarcely more than 5 years old, was seen coming over the Hunter street bridge Monday evening, with a cigarette between his lips. Calmly puffing on the fag before horrified onlookers, the tot, it was evident, was beginning to feel ill, but nevertheless, he continued to take drags on the cigarette. Whether it was just in line with "keeping upa front," or whether the child really enjoyed the thing, was something to keep one guessing.

Sgt. K. Robinson Sees Half World In Travels To Fighting Fronts

A story of a trip half-way around the world in the service of his country and a desire to get back into action as soon as possible is that brought by Sgt. Kenneth E. Robinson, 239 George street, who arrived home from overseas for the first time in four years Sunday evening. He was on escort duty with German prisoners of war.

"I sure am hoping to be able to get back into action before the war ends, but the way things are going for the Nazis now I'll probably just get in England and hostilities will cease," he said this morning at his home, where his wife and four children have awaited him for four years.

The son of Mrs. James Sullivan, 125 James street, Sgt. Robinson will be home for a thirty-day furlough before leaving for a new posting. He enlisted with the First Canadian Survey Unit in 1940, and went overseas during the same year.

"At first there were several Peterborough boys in the Survey outfit, but later the unit was split up and I was the only one left in this section," he said.

The Survey unit, Sgt. Robinson said, had a busy time in action; its duties are to find ranges for the big guns, and they do this by several methods. If the weather is good they can map out an enemy gun position by flash-spotting, that is by the sight of the flashes made by the guns. However, if the weather is poor, the main method is by sound. Included in the unit is a meteorological division and a counter-motor section.

Wounded In England

Sgt. Robinson arrived in England in 1940, and was wounded by an Allied land mine there some time after. "I thought I was dead when it happened," he said, "and when I regained consciousness four days later, I found that I banged myself up rather badly. I had my leg broken, injuries to my wrist and stomach." He spent five months in the hospital after this and sailed for Africa in June, 1943.

"There are no words to describe the dirtiness and filthiness of Algiers," he said, "although some sections are quite interesting. Yes, I've heard of the Casbah in Algiers, although it is out of bounds for soldiers. Generally speaking, I'd put Algiers down as being the toughest

Car Theft Hearing Adjourned

Magistrate Langley this morning adjourned until Wednesday the preliminary hearing of three Quebec men charged with theft of an automobile from in front of 340 Rubidge street in the early morning of August 16.

The trio are: Albert Marcoux of Chandler, Gaspe; Leonard Gingras, St. Denis street, Montreal and George Houde of St. Prosper.

Owned by W. E. Leonard of Noranda, Quebec, who was visiting in Peterborough, the car was recovered and returned to Peterborough. It was intercepted in flight by Provincial Police about 4 a.m. last Wednesday near Dale, south of Bewdley. Police found in it nine tires, fourteen tubes, several suits of clothes, a car rug, two automobile radios and two fog lights.

Brought to Peterborough

The three men were arrested in the vicinity of Port Hope early on Wednesday August 16, and were held in the united counties jail at Cobourg until last night, when they were brought to Peterborough. Police at Port Hope last week said the prisoners were suspected of being members of a gang of tire thieves operating in this district.

Provincial police were patrolling the highway north of Bewdley about 4 a.m. as two cars aproached. When their drivers saw the white patrol car, they put on speed in a race that ended for one of them near Dale. Gingras and Houde were catured, but a third man escaped. Marcoux was rounded up near Baltimore, north of Cobourg, Monday.

The second car in the dash from Bewdley, roared into Port Hope at something like 90 miles an hour, and was finally abandoned near the fish shanties down Mill street. Both cars had Quebec licenses, but only one of them was reported stolen from Peterborough.

Police are makng enquiries through Quebec channels about a fourth member of this group.

Parks Subject Of Talk To Lions Club

Expounding a program of utility coupled with beautification, A. W. Butcher, parks commissioner for the city of Peterborough, addressed the Lions Club Monday evening and outlined the possibilities which exist in Peterborough for outdoor recreation in the parks of the city.

Mr. Butcher gave statistics on the parks of Detroit, a place he visited while attending the recent Parks convention at Windsor, and told what the heads of that city hoped to do in the way of post-war development on parks and playgrounds.

Lauding Mayor Hamilton and members of the City Council, particularly Alderman Curtis, chairman of the Parks Committee, for the cooperation and encouragement he had received, Mr. Butcher stated that no city in Ontario was so generously endowed by nature with facilities for playgrounds as Peterborough.

He added that while Peterborough had plenty of parks, they were not used to the extent that was possible and he said he would endeavor to educate the people to know that the parks were there for their benefit. and would strive to make them attractive, and above all, places where youngsters could find healthful recreation.

Outdoor Life

Surveying the parks along the river, Inverlea, Nicholls Oval, Riverside and Point St. Charles. Mr. Butcher said Nicholls Park should be kept as a picnic ground, but also provided a natural amphitheatre should a large stage be built just inside the gate at the east end of the Inverlea bridge. He mentioned the possibility of using the shoreline on the east side south of the bridge as a bathing beach, and having dressing rooms under the outdoor stage.

Paying tribute to the Lions Club for their splendid work in converting the tourist camp into a playground, and building the swimming pool, he said the future might see complete development of that area into a mammoth outdoor sports area, with Riverside Park modernized and rustic bridges linking the islands behind Engleburn avenue.,

He expressed regret that there were no places in the west-end of the city for the children, and stated plans were underway to develop something along such lines north of Bonnaccord street adjacent to Jackson Park.

He said that in other cities, inter-playground sports were arranged with teams from each park area, competing in baseball, softball, horseshoes and other sports.

Touching on recreational facilities in the winter time, he said existing arrangements made it necessary for the small boy to leave the rinks at 5.30 to make way for the hockey players until 8 o'clock at which time the smaller boys should be home. He stated that additional room on the rinks would make it possible for the smaller boys to skate until 8 o'clock and yet not interfere with the hockey players.

In his summary of arrangements at Detroit, Mr. Butcher pointed out that there were upwards of 500 specially constructed stoves in the parks, and these were popular with people who would bring spare-ribs and weiners to the parks on a week-end or holiday afternoon and grill them.

Mr. Butcher was introduced by Hurrell Dodds, playgrounds committee chairman, and the thanks o the club was voiced by Bruce Sargent. Arnold Deyell was chairman in the absence o J. E. Armitage, and guests included Al. Lewis, Kinsmen Club president, Charles Carter of Bowmanville and Bill Willis of Ottawa.

SEES THE WORLD—Sgt. Kenneth Robinson, whose wife and children live at 239 George street, has returned home from overseas, after four years. In spite of an injury received from a land mine, he fought in Sicily and Italy.

Ice House Burns At Golf Club

The Peterborough Golf and Country Club was the scene of a fire Monday afternoon that destroyed the small ice house adjacent to the clubhouse. A Fire Department truck was sent out to extinguish the blaze, which was said to have originated when grass caught fire as a result of a carelessly dropped burning match or lighted cigarette butt. Chief Gimblett this morning said the damage was not considerable.

While firemen were still on the job out at the Golf Club, where the alarm was given at 4:19 p.m., two other calls came in in rapid succession at 4:36 and 4:39 p.m., resulting in three separate squads of firemen being away from the Fire Hall in response to alarms at one and the same time. Overheated pipes brought an alarm from 96 Stewart street, residence of Mrs. A. Blackwell; and a burning match tossed out of the door at 271 Reid street, J. W. Maynord, caused a few articles of clothing hanging on a line to dry to be burned.

Two other grass fires also claimed the attention of firemen yesterday afternoon, one at 3:14 p.m. along the railway at Auburn street near the old Dominion Woollens building, and a later one along the C.N.R. right of way back of Nicholls Oval. This was at 5:57 p.m.

HUGE CUCUMBER

A cucumber weighing 2 lb. and 13 oz. has grown in the garden of Mrs. G. S. Lathangue, 495 Mark St., and it was so heavy it was pulling the vine off the trellis. It was the largest cucumber ever grown in her garden, Mrs. Lathangue stated.

Robot Victims To Get Aid By Bowling Club

Personal enjoyment of any type is always made sweeter when it can be made to give enjoyment to others, and particularly is this so if the happiness that is thus spread to a much wider field, happens to be for the purpose of rendering aid to people in distress.

The Peterborough Lawn Bowling Club has annually seen to it for the past four seasons that their activities have included at least one event on behalf of the victims from air raid attacks over Britain, through the city and districts own fund operating for that purpose, and now they plan a further event to assist in the increased need of the amount ocassioned by the almost daily devastating attacks made by robot or flying bombs.

This Friday night commencing at 7 o'clock, a mixed tournament is to be held with rinks formed on the draw system, for which the entrance fee is to be $1.00 per person, for which prizes have been donated by Knox Jewellers; Grafton and Co., Ltd., R. Fair & Co., Ltd. Trebilcock's Store, Ed. Riley, Warnes Jewelers, Payne's Drug Storee, Schneiders Jewellery Store and J. W. Steinkrauss, which enables the full proceeds to come to the fund.

Thee committe in charge is headed by G. Gimblett, and they hope to go even better than a similar event held last year for the same purpose when the sum of $63.00 was realized and handed over to the fund.

Neill's Office Girls $100.

The office girls in the Robert Neill Ltd. Shoe Store comprise a very few persons who have constantly kept the needs of the sufferers from air raid attacks before them. This is perhaps all the more emphasized by the fact that to-day this group is represented for the 20th time in this column on behalf of the fund.

Right at the outset they set a standard of $5 a donation, and this they have carried steadily forward, until now they have reacheed the three figure mark of $100.00, which is a most creditable record indeed, their average standing at over $14 per person, which on a similar city-wide basis would have meant a total of four times what it actually stands at now.

Another penny box collection is recorded to-day from the In and Out shop, the amount of $2.90 giving the total from this activity a boost up to the sum of $2,325.08 that it has now reached to date.

Council Suggests City Donation Be Open Gift To Health Centre

Amplifying their resolution of a week ago, endorsing the Peterborough Memorial and Community Centre in its plans and progress, the council Monday night amended and advanced their previous declaration with the recommendation to the people that their proposed contribution be made on the same basis as the other gifts to the fund for this arena and health and recreational building.

Financial appeals for Memorial and Community Centre have been made or are being made to Peterborough industries at present and during the last week, and some pledges for large amounts have already been received. These are to be outright gifts to the fund for the Centre, and Alderman Glover stated last night that his understanding has been from the beginning of this project that the city would participate in the financing by an outright gift to the fund as a means of assuring its success.

The amount that will be proposed to the citizens as their part of the funding has not yet been decided, but it has been proposed in the $50,000-$75,000 brackets.

"I never had any other idea that we were going to make a gift, and that it would come from the community as a whole," Alderman Glover said. "And on that basis I am convinced that the appeal that is being made to our industries will exceed all our expectations.

"I think that J. A. Jebson as chairman, and the members of his committee, who are working closely with him have done a mighty fine job. They have already earned the appreciation of everybody. They started out from scratch, undertaking this work that was assigned to them. They have made their enquiries and have a great deal of information to help us. They have left no stone unturned to obtain and prepare such information as will make it possible to put this project clearly before the council, the citizens and our heads of industry."

Want Open Gift

Mayor Hamilton received the following letter from John E. Keyes, chairman of the finance committee of the Memorial and Community Fund committee:—

"At a recent meeting the Council of the City of Peterborough passed the following resolution: —"That this Council go on record as favoring the submission, if required, of a money bylaw to the ratepayers to secure their approval of the issuing of debentures or $50,000 to $75,000 to assist in financing the erection of the proposed municipal Memorial health and recreational centre.

"In contacting local manufacturers in connection with a canvass to raise funds for a Peterborough Memorial and Community Centre, we have found that it is their intention to contribute generously to this project. However, they, as well as others, have indicated strongly that in their opinion assistance from the City should be in the form of a gift similar to their own.

"It is the hope that this proposed Memorial and Community Centre will start off with no liability by way of fixed charges such as interest and a sinking fund to liquidate outstanding debentures, and that the entire assets be turned over to the city free of encumbrance.

"May I assure you that the Committee which has been set up to raise the necessary funds is doing everything possible to make the Peterborough Memorial and Community Centre a reality; and we respectfully request you to place this matter before the council for further consideration. We also sincerely hope that the members will accede to the request as expressed to us and amend the resolution accordingly."

Real Benefit

The council's conviction that it was recommending to the citizens something for the future benefit of the city and its people was expressed by some of the members, especially Aldermen Bradburn, Glover, Dutton and Sullivan, and the resolution affirmed that all the members are whole-heartedly behind this community enterprise. Its aspect of Memorial to the men of this city and district who contributed to the defeat of the German menace was emphasized with other important features of health and recreation and advertisement of Peterborough.

"And we want the Jebson committee to feel that we appreciate all they have already accomplished," Alderman Sullivan said.

Few Interested In New City Hall

"I don't think there are more than 25 or 50 people taking any interest in the plans for the city hall," Mayor Hamilton said at Monday night's council meeting, extending an observation by Alderman Dutton that the seeming indifference of the public was a great disappointment. Apparently the people were not giving it any serious thought.

"Just name a site and see," Alderman Glover remarked.

Alderman Dutton also mentioned some thinly veiled insinuation in a local weekly to the effect that no private interests should enter into the consideraton of a city hall site.

The members of the council had shown a most disinterested and dispassionate attitude toward this question, Alderman Dutton said, and had impressed him by their desire to make the best possible choice of location.

"Anybody who writes stuff like that has a helluva small mind," Alderman Swanston declared.

"Be careful now," Mayor Hamilton laughingly counselled his associate.

"I am saying it and I'm stticking to it," Alderman Swanston said. "Members of the council who are giving so much of their time to the affairs of the city are bound to feel that nothing hurts more than things like that.

Values Asked On 4 Sites For City Hall

BY HARRY THEOBALD

The City Council bludgeoned on Monday night the Charlotte-Aylmer site of the new city hall with a rough estimate of $200,000 for the block of property, and with the ritual gesture of washing hands, and a hard smile, decisive and dismissive, they seemed to say "Well, that's that; let's get along to something sensible".

But yesterday that corner might have stood against anything else in the city except of course the municipally owned, back-street location at Water and Simcoe streets. Graced by Walter Blackwell's proposed adornment it seemed the most desirable background for both civic and federal buildings, having regard also to a central position of service to the public, not only in these present times, but at least for the next century.

Just who swung the knobkerry doesn't matter much. Several lent eager hands. One of them was Alderman Clover. Mayor Hamilton was an abettor. Alderman Ovens was likewise a confederate; and Alderman Sullivan's contribution was a paraphrase of pooch-poop.

Routine business had finished early last night, first of the weekly Monday night meetings, and casting about for more grist for the mill Mayor Hamilton made some enquiry about that recommendation of the Charlotte-Aylmer location, proposed for the new city hall by the special town planning committee. The ensuing conversation was reminiscent of recent discussions of the same subject.

"How about getting an idea of the value of that block (Louis, King, Aylmer, Charlotte) from the assessment figures?" Alderman Swanston suggested.

And that was the cue for the onslaught, starting from the corner, one of the city's numerous bright spots, plenty of glass and white paint. Some one estimated its probably buying cost at "——" (don't publish that; they'll get inflated ideas of their spot), and in the next breath or two the aggregate stood at $200,000.

With $200,000, said Alderman Glover, —well, we could do a lot with that amount of money without spending it all on a city hall spite. That was the keynote of the comments that left the Charlotte street location prostrate in the alley.

Ideas drifted along up town, over a well beaten path, to the "long established" customary and otherwise familiar centre of all things municipal, the property at Simcoe and Water Streets,—a necessarily longitudional building, fronting on Water street which impinged as an idea upon Alderman Dutton's imagination as something along the lines of a glorified shooting-gallery.

Pressing his request for some substantial advance, Alderman Swanston moved seconded by Alderman Dutton that the assessmnt department be requested to supply the council with thir valuation of four prospective sites: Charlotte-Aylmer; George-Charlotte(market block up to Beatty Washer office; the Water, Hunter, Queen, Simcoe block including the Examiner building; and the block on Murray Street between Water and George Street, south of the Public Library.

The second trophy as the Oshawa Gladiolus and Dahlia Society cup for the best gladiolus spike in the show, also first for the best three spikes of the Blotch variety and First for the best spike in the Amateur Class

The show was felt to be a decided success and Dr. Sisson of Bowmanville won the Gladiolus Society cup for the highest number of points and H. Goss of Oshawa was the runner-up.

RETURNS TO CANADA—Flt.-Lieut. John H. Clarke of Havelock returned home Monday morning after fighting with the R.C.A.F. on the Normandy front. He has had 200 operational hours over occupied France.

RCAF Pilot Back From Normandy

HAVELOCK, August 22—(ENS). —Flt.-Lieut. John H. Clarke of the R.C.A.F., arrived here on Monday morning from England, and will be stationed in Canada for the duration. After two weeks' furlough he joins the ferrying service.

Flt.-Lieut. Clarke joined the Air Force in July, 1941, training in St. Hubert, Valcartier, Victoriaville, Que., Oshawa and Hagerville, Ont., receiving his wings at the latter place in April, 1942. He was a reconnaissance pilot at Charlottetown, P.E.I., and from there went to Debert, N.S, and then to another post where he was connected with the fighter operational training unit. He is a veteran of the Aleutian campaign, where he served from February, 1943, to October, 1943, and while there his squadron was known as the R.C.A.F. Thunderbird Fighter Squadron. They were presented with a totem pole by the West Coast Saanich Indian tribe of Alaska, who adopted them as fighter brothers.

He received the Asiatic Pacific Campaign ribbon from the U.S. Government for services rendered in this theatre. Next he was stationed in Western Canada, going to England in January, 1944, where he has had 200 operational hours over occupied France, including one flight over Germany. He took part in the invasion on D-Day, and was among the first airmen to land in France.

Lacrosse Club Calls Practice

A call to teen-age boys interested in reviving lacrosse in the city has been issued by the Peterborough Lacrosse Club, which is having an open-air gathering at the Lacrosse Bowl beside the George street wharf tonight at 6:30 p.m. A sport which has languished during nearly five years of war is thus to be brought back into the community's athletic life; and any boys who desire to learn about the game are requested to turn out this evening, when they will receive instruction from former senior players.

The local lacrosse club has been spurred on by a grant of $100 made by the City Council last month; and the Ontario Lacrosse Association has given the club sticks at half price.

SYMBOLIC CIGARS.

Recently elevated to the dignity of fatherhood, by the arrival of a baby daughter in his home, Alderman Sands passed out cigars to the smoking members of the council last night. Possibly he had been laying up a stock, for the symbolic sharing with his friends a new increment of domestic felicity. At any rate he had a pocketful, and even non-smokers know that cigars are exceedingly scarce these days.

Sgt. K. Robinson

spot on earth. The Arabs hold their bazaars on the street, it's noisy, and if a criminal escaped to that city there wouldn't be much chance of catching up with him," he said.

"The Arab women wear veils over their face, and often they'd stop and stare at us. But if we stop and look at them it's supposed to be an insult, and all soldiers that come to Africa are given instructions how to get along with the natives."

After spending some time in Algiers, Sgt. Robinson was moved to a place not far from the ancient capital, where for the first time his unit learned they were to join the famed British Eighth Army.

"It was a surprise and an honor for us to join the Eighth," he said, "and soon I saw my first action in Sicily during the first hours of the invasion of that island." Rocky, mountainous terrain in Sicily made the battle there a difficult one, but it was taken and in not so long a time either.

Hard To Stop

After Sicily Sgt. Robinson was sent back to England; it was thought he needed further medical attention due to the wounds received from the mine in England before. They couldn't keep him down though, and it wasn't more than a few months that the soldier was on his way back to action, on a ship sailing through the Mediterranean.

This time Sgt. Robinson, who had already completed considerable travelling, was sent into Italy, and went into action during the first fierce days of Ortona where Canadian troops made history.

"The first big fight was at a cross-roads outside of Ortona where stubborn Nazi resistance made things difficult for some time. Then, when we finally entered Ortona, it took 19 days of hard house-to-house fighting before we could call the place ours," Sgt. Robinson said.

World-famed Cassino was the next spot on his journey, and he was sent there to fight with the American Fifth Army, after the fall of Ortona.

Tells Of Cassino

Sgt. Robinson said Cassino was a natural defence place for the Germans, explaining the town as being down in a valley-type gorge, and the Benedictine Monastery immediately above, guarding the approaches. In the walls of the cliffs and under the monastery were miles and miles of cleverly-built tunnels where men and supplies were comparatively safe from bombardment. Wishing to save the monastery, a cultural spot that dates back for centuries, Sgt. Robinson said that the Allies were forced to ruin the building in order to take Cassino. "But when the place finally was shelled," he said, "it is thought most of the troops in it escaped into the tunnels, but after a time they couldn't hold out any longer."

Prisoners Arrogant

Then came word that he was about to leave Italy, and Sgt. Robinson said everyone thought they'd be going direct to Canada for leave. Such wasn't the case, however, and the next port of call for the sergeant was Normandy. There they gathered up a large number of Nazi prisoners, most of whom were just as boastful and arrogant as expected, and brought them to the New World, where they will remain until the war is over.

Coming over Sgt. Robinson said he held an interesting conversation with a young German soldier. "We will be in America in a year," the Nazi exclaimed, to which the Canadian replied: "If we're going where we think we are, you'll be there much sooner!" Another German soldier, not more than 14 years old, said when the Nazis conquered Canada they would make the Canadians cut timber for them. Somebody replied the only way they'd be in Canada would be behind bars! Sgt. Robinson reported the young Germans to be the worse; older Germans know the war is lost for them.

"You know, before the war I read quite often of people going to Italy, but some of the parts we were in I wouldn't go there again for anything. Of course, other parts are beautiful, and Amalfi, Revello, Corsica and Sardinia were places I spent enjoyable times. The Mediterranean is marvellous, too, and I can believe the cruises on the sea were interesting before the war."

He said, although he has spent much more time on the water than many people, he has never been seasick. "I've seen lots of guys who are though, and I can only say I'm glad that I'm immune to it."

Saw "Doodle-Bugs"

In England the German buzz-bomb became a personal matter after one landed not far from him and rocked him considerably, but not injuring him.

"There is nothing that will panic the English, and even though the doodlebugs are horrible things, the English are expecting something even worse and more destructive . . . yet still they are calm," Sgt. Robinson said. "There is a certain spot in England where many of the buzz-bombs come over, and one night, or morning rather, about 5:30, a friend of mine was on tire watch, so I stayed up to see if I could see one of the bombs. I saw lots of them, believe me, and they certainly are a most grotesque sight. With dive bombing you usually have a good idea where the explosive is going to land; not so with robobombs; they dart here and there like a kite on the loose, and you're lucky if you can avoid them. To see a robobomb at first reminds you of a small fighter plane, such as a Spitfire; then the light goes out and the missile begins to drop."

An audience with Pope Pius is also an experience that is worth remembering, he said. The Pope surprised him by speaking in perfect English, and also by looking exactly like his pictures.

In conclusion, Sgt. Robinson said the Canadian Legion is doing a wonderful work. He was employed at the Western Clock Company for 19 years before enlisting.

Lot Frontage Worries Council

Thirty feet frontage does not provide the realty elbowroom of Peterborough standards, it was said at Monday night's council meeting, in a brief reference to subdivisions in part of North Monaghan that is coming into the city January 1.

Alderman Swanston said City Assessor W. J. Henry had told him his department could no do anything about it."

"We could say the city will not issue a permit for a house to be built on a thirty foot lot," Alderman Swanston remarked, "before they go too far in the present transfer of lots that are reported."

"The parts of the township are not yet in the city, and it is not for us to go too far," Mayor Hamilton said.

The reference to the thirty-foot lots was chiefly in a feeling of uneasiness that suburban subdivisions had not been required in the first place, at least a frontage of forty feet. The large ten acre sections were cut up into thirty-foot sites during the period preceding the legislation giving urban municipalities some voice of approval and restriction in rural subdivisions.

"Even as far as Chemong," Mayor Hamilton said.

Council Suggests

day night was: "That the resolution passed by the City Council on August 14, regarding the submission of a money bylaw to the ratepayers to raise funds to assist in the erection of a municipal memorial and recreation centre be amended by adding the following words: 'and that such funds be a contribution from the city, and that in [illegible] the making of the gift the Council feels that the Memorial and Community Centre will prove a direct benefit to the community and its welfare, and that it will serve as a fitting memorial to those Peterborough men and women who have served Canada in the armed forces.'"

Flood Threat Reviewed By City Council

City Council revived another "problem" Monday night in a proposal to divert in the neighborhood of the Peterborough-Port Hope Highway near Dr. Preston's house the creek that meanders southeasterly across Western avenue and High streets, under the C. P. R. at Managhan road and Romaine streets, continuing past the Johnson Motors and De Laval plants into the Park street drain.

The watershed of this creek reaches back into Smith Township in the vicinity west of Jackson park and in its spring freshets rolls over an arbitrary course down New Chamberlain street, west of High street, flooding the houses, and in its peak volume sometimes taking full control of the roadway to a depth of several feet.

City Engineer Parsons recalled that the city had obtained a survey of that entire area "that cost us $1,000.00," but as the land was entirely in the township nothing further was attempted. It is now on the way to becoming part of the city and the flood problem is visualised as a probably subject of grievance next spring.

Would Help Factories

Diversion would not only be a direct benefit to quite a number of residents in the area between Western avenue and Monaghan road, but would also remove a threat to three industries, Outboard Marine and Manufacturing, Peterborough Lumber and the DeLaval Company.

The main suggestion at present is that negotiations be considered with property owners south of No. 2 highway for diversion of this creek to the west to join with the creek that crosses the highway about one quarter of a mile to the west, and flows under No. 7-A (cut off) Highway through the old Harper property, continuing under the C. P. R. and finally coming out near the C. G. E. west of Crawford's Grove.

Alderman Dutton undertook Monday night to arrange for the council to drive out some day and look over the area for the information of those members not familiar with its topography.

With The Armed Forces

The editor of this column will welcome extracts from letters from boys serving or any other information concerning them.

By JEAN STENTON

WREN JUNE WHITE

Canadian men and women in the armed forces who spend leaves in the United States return with enthusiastic reports of the wonderful care and entertainment they receive from U.S.O. and other centres, operating for the benefit of soldiers of all Allied countries.

Wren June White, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. G. White, 292 McGill street, recently spent a leave in New York and after her visit at a centre operated by the Jewish Welfare Board, her people received a letter and several photographs of their daughter.

A post card bore the message that they had had the pleasure of entertaining Wren White and thought her parents would like to know she was in good health and fine spirits. The letter explained that club was happy to provide this service for men and women in the forces and that the club was manned by volunteers, who too, are separated from their dear ones in the armed forces of their country. Their aim, the letter continued, is to make the Club "a home from home," for guests from all parts of the world.

Nazi Nest Troublesome

Fighting with a group of comrades to clean out a German nest in France, Cpl. Orville Wainman was wounded in the left leg and thigh by flying shrapnel and a bullet, according to a letter received by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Wainman, 72 King street, Lindsay.

The letter to his parents was written from a military hospital in England, where he says that he is receiving the best of attenton. He hopes to be sufficiently well in a few weeks to enter a convalescent hos[illegible]l, from which he will eventual[illegible] rejoin his unit, the Highland Li[illegible] Infantry. His chief worry is th[illegible] will be unable to jitterbug for a long time.

GNR. WILLIAM BABB

Serving in the Army has developed the cooking skill of Gnr. William Babb, Gore's Landing, who is serving with the R.C.A. in Italy. He is acting as cook in his company and according to Gnr. Leslie Adams, another cook, he is doing a good job.

In a recent letter to Mrs. Melville Harris, Gnr. Babb described part of his day's work. He had just made 18 raisin pies and 20 chocolate pies, the latter made out of chocolate bars because they cannot obtain cocoa in Italy. He said that they were getting all kinds of fresh fruit, melons, apricots, peaches and lemons. His friends feel he will be a decided asset around the kitchen after the war.

All In A Day's Work

Aircraft trouble during a bombing raid is all in a day's work for airmen, according to a recent letter from Pilot Officer Sydney Atkinson, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Atkinson, R.R. 1, Roseneath.

"We did another trip yesterday which brings my score up to 29, and only one more to do. Paris looked pretty nice in daylight but they gave us rather a hot reception. We got hit by flak but no one was hurt. A gas line was holed and we lost a lot of fuel—just had enough to get back to base here and land immediately."

A recent leave spent in Scotland made quite an impression on the 21-year-old flier, and he was fortunate enough to visit people who had lived in Toronto, for many years.

Wonderful Hospitality

"Aberdeen is certainly the place to enjoy a leave. We all went to church Sunday morning and some people who lived in Toronto for six years invited us in for supper. They were typical Scotch folks—so hospitable—and gave us a herring supper. We couldn't eat enough. All they talked about was Canada and how they want to go back again.

"We spent two days at a Laird's mansion—he is wealthy and owns a lot of farms with people working them. Didn't feel too much at home—just wasn't our style, but we climbed the Benyhe, the highest hill around those parts, and picked some purple heather. The other night I had ice cream, the first I've had since leaving Canada in March, 1943.

"Had feed of fried onions, a meat product, and toast last night. I really fixed those onions when I was peeling them. No more tears for me from now on. I put my gas mask on and it didn't bother me a bit."

Pick Their Times

Between heavy artillery and tanks, a man just doesn't have a chance to enjoy himself in Normandy, so writes Capt. A. Clark, Y.M.C.A. supervisor of Auxiliary Services who describes some of the soldiers' woes in a letter to his wife at 27 Prince street.

"A group of the boys have just broken up from behind our truck. We have a radio there and they gathered around after dinner waiting for the 12 o'clock news. The first announcement came over and the group gathered closer (our radio is not very large or very strong). The news started and almost simultaneously a battery of heavy artillery started and kept blasting away until the news had moved from France to the Pacific. With a few muttered imprecations, the boys broke it up—between guns and tanks life has been really noisy.

"This morning I was over at the Light Aid Department, where the boys repair cars and guns. They were having a spot of tea and one of them took a pan, stepped out the door, and proceeded to get some milk from a goat. The goat has been running around loose and they have tied it up, fed it, and plan to take it with them when they move from here. This is a very friendly goat and likes to have its ears rubbed, just like a dog.

Rabbit Pals Too

"Many of the French farmers have kept rabbits and when the people left they opened the rabbit hutches and left the rabbits to fend for themselves. There is a cute wee mite around here. He squats over an apple and munches away, but if you get too close, he bolts back into his hutch.

"I have seen some of the results of heavy bombing and it is absolutely devastating. How Germany can face another winter of such as she had last year is beyond me. I cannot imagine how any country can win a war without mastery of the air. We certainly have that here and I think Germany's chances are getting worse every day.

"The Americans have certainly made marvellous gains. They broke through and then capitalized in the most daring fashion. The Germans have now counter-attacked the Americans' greatly extended lines, but have not been successful in making a break-through. With modern transport distance can be annihilated very quickly and even a temporary lapse in defence may cause a complete breakdown.

"If I had enough water I should have a bath or do a washing, but water is scarce just now so I can be dirty and feel virtuous at the same time. A Y.M.C.A. shower room and swimming pool would certainly look marvellous to the men right now."

Always interested in musical work, Sgt. Leslie Abraham, brother of Ernest Abraham, Brown street, is having the time of his life in Italy, where he is touring with the concert party, "The Forage Caps." At a recent performance he was seen by Lieut. N-S Clara Morris, Peterborough, and she wrote the following letter home to her aunt, Mrs. W. R. Morris, Homewood avenue.

"We went to see 'Forage Caps' an All-Canadian show put on by a group of men. The Sergeant who directs them, takes seven parts in it and also plays in the orchestra is Les Abraham from Peterborough. It was splendid, far better than the other Canadian Concert Party. Some of the girls even liked it better than 'This is the Army.' I spoke to him afterwards and said I would write home and say what a good job they are doing."

Sgt. Abraham enlisted in 1940 and went overseas that same year with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, later transferring. He has been in Italy since November, 1943, and was originally with the Tin Hats Review. His family say that he was always playing in some orchestra around Peterborough and now he is having an opportunity to get some valuable training.

The soldier is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. J. Abraham, who lived on Douglas avenue. He has one brother, Lt. Col. Reginald Abraham, serving overseas.

Gnr. Lloyd Abraham, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. Abraham, Brown street, and nephew of Sgt. Abraham, is serving in Italy. He has met his uncle there several times.

SURG. LT. J. W. CLARK

After serving with the Royal Navy for more than a year, Surgeon Lt. John W. Clark, R.C.N.V.R., of Bethany, went into action on D-Day. A graduate of Queen's University, he joined the Navy in May, 1942 He was loaned to the Royal Navy more than a year ago.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

FAVOR THE BEST CHANCE

WHEN YOU are up against a take-a-chance question and must choose one risk as against another, sound bridge dictates that you should select the one which gives you the best chance for gain. In many situations, you find players not taking that into account and attempting one method when another would have been more in their favor. The average player seems to prefer trying for an even break of the hidden six cards of a suit than trying an unmarked finesse, though the odds against the first are about 3 to 2, whereas the second is about 50-50.

Talk about rotten bidding. South's hand was far too powerful for a pre-emptive bid, and he was lucky he didn't miss a slam contract by it. He should have called 1-Spade, and the grand slam then should have been easily reachable by good bidders using any sound slam convention, or even good natural bidding plus cue-bids. There are fifteen consecutive tricks available at either diamonds or No Trumps.

Maybe South was properly punished for his bad bidding, for he failed to make the small slam in spades which was there for him. The heart 10 lead was won by dummy's A, knocking out the only entry at the start. South then decided to stake all on discarding losing hearts on the diamonds. The A and K accounted for two of his hearts, but when he led the diamond Q, East ruffed with the spade 9. South was beaten now. He over-ruffed and took out the rest of the trumps, but then had to lead clubs from his own hand, so lost a club and a heart, going down one.

After discarding two hearts on diamonds, South's sound play was to lead the club J, prepared to finesse. That would have worked, preventing any club losers, and he would have lost only a heart at the finish. But he favored a losing chance over an even one.

Churchill Plans Meeting With Roosevelt

By C. R. BLACKBURN,
Canadian Press Staff Writer.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22—(CP) — A conference between President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill is in the planning stage, the time and place depending upon the fortunes of war.

Because of the forthcoming Presidental elections Mr. Roosevelt probably would like to delay his projected visit to the European fronts until after the voting.

But if the situation requires that he meet Mr. Churchill before that time (November 7) it is believed the conference would be held at some point where the president would not come in contact with large numbers of American forces.

A year ago this month Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill held their historic meeting in Quebec. Some observers here foresee the possibility of another meeting in Canada.

For the President to go to Europe now would provoke great criticism from his political opponents. And if he did go to Britain it is virtually certain he would go into France if not to Italy, to visit the American troops.

Political opponents would claim that gave him an advantage over the Republican nominee, Thomas E. Dewey, in relation to the overseas soldier vote.

There is, however, th possibility that Mr. Dewey also would like to visit the forces in action and would be willing to have Mr. Roosevelt make such a trip if the same facilities were accorded the Republican candidate.

At Quebec a year ago this month Mr. Churchill said that his meetings with Mr. Roosevelt were so valuable they should never be separated by more than three months. Three months later they were meeting again in Cairo and Teheran, but they have not been together since. Illnesses of both leaders, coupled with other mementous circumstances such as the invasion of France, have contributed to delay a conference this year.

WITH ENGINEERS IN FRANCE —Spr. C. S. Winsor, only son of Mr. and Mrs. S. Winsor, Lakefield, writes that he is well in France, where he is serving with the Royal Canadian Engineers. He enlisted at 17 in August, 1940, and went overseas in 1941. Spr. Winsor is a mechanic with his unit.

EX-MAYOR HOUDE RETURNS TO MONTREAL — Ten thousand Montrealers welcomed ex-Mayor Camillien Houde back to Montreal, after his internment. While in internment camp, he says, he learned two new languages. He is pictured here addressing fellow citizens.

German Leaflet Tells Allies Caught Like Foxes In A Trap

Leaflets telling the Allied soldiers that they were caught like foxes in a trap in Normandy were dropped over the Beachhead by the Germans after the invasion. One of the leaflets, produced below, was sent to Mrs. D. Wishart, 657 George street, whose husband, Sgt. Donald Wishart, is serving in France.

On one side of the leaflet was the appeal to the Allied soldiers to quit fighting for "a lost cause" while on the reverse side there were extracts from news sources telling of the robot bombing of Britain.

CAUGHT LIKE FOXES IN A TRAP

English and American soldiers!

Why has Jerry waited ten days after the landings to use his so called secret weapon behind your back? Doesn't that strike you as queer?

It looks very much as though after waiting for you to cross the Channel, he had set a TRAP for you.

You're fighting at present on a very narrow strip of coast, the extent of which has been so far regulated by the Germans.

You are using up an enormous number of men and huge quantities of material.

Meanwhile the Robot-planes, flying low, scatter over London and Southern England explosives, the power and incendiary efficiency of which are without precedent. They spread death and destruction in the towns and harbours, which should be sending you much needed supplies.

They Are Cutting The Bridge To Your Bases

In addition to the destruction and panic at home, traffic is disorganised, ships, even hospital ships, are held up.

How long can you keep up this foolish "invasion" in those circumstances?

It's up to you to think of the best way to get out of the TRAP in which you are CAUGHT.

Time is precious. Tomorrow may be too late.

Balkan Scheme Well Advanced

CAIRO, Aug. 22.—(CP-Reuter.)—Allied plans for South-eastern Europe in the post-war world are confidently believed in the Middle East to be taking shape as the Bulgarian State pauses on the threshold of total collapse.

Count Carlo Sforza's statement in Rome yesterday that Italy would understand if the Dodecanese wished to re-unite with Greece confirms opinion here on this issue.

Significance is attached to the fact that the statement was made at a time when Allied leaders were in Rome and that it followed the recent declaration by M. Dragoumis, Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affaiars in the Greek government in Cairo, that "there can be no question regarding the Dodcanese.

Most observers believe, though there is no official confirmation of this, that a scheme is being considered whereby a wider Yugoslav federation will emerge from the war.

Public Affairs Conference Gets Underway

LAKE COUCHICHING, Ont., Aug. 22 —(CP)—J. King Gordon managing editor of the Nation, told delegations to the annual gathering of the Canadian Institute of Public Affaiars here Soturday night that even though the "old guard" is in control in both major American political parties, the United States is too defintely committed to post-war co-operation to make possible any return to pre-war isolationism.

Other speakers at week-end sessions of the week-long conference were Corwin D. Edwards, of the State Department at Washington, D.C.; John Deutsch, External Affaiars Department at Ottawa; and Pro. V. W. Bladen of the University of Toronto.

Mr. Gordon, a Winnipeg-born clergymon and former professor, warned that the "great weaknesc" of the United States is that "it has no plan for economic re-organization." He said he saw the United States facing as acute a problem of economic re-organization at the close of war as it faced in 1933.

Must Meet Needs.

Editor of a weekly magazine noted for its liberal political and economic views, Mr. Gordon saw the progressive forces in the U.S. forging to the fore in post-war years. He said that the mass of Americans would not accept political leadership that fails to meet the basic needs of the people.

A round-table discussion on cartels was opened by Mr. Edwards who told the delegates that the cartel system was a threat to democratic countries because cartels were capable of being used to throttle industrial developments.

Four lines of government policies were suggested by Mr. Edwards to counteract the ill effects of cartels. They were acceptable and regulation of international cartels; substitution of inter-governmental agreements for private cartels; unilateral action to prevent restrictive arrangements; and agreements with other nations to eliminate objectionable activities.

Prof. Bladen said he believed cartels of some types were justifiable under circumstances where they help business and did no injury or were not unjust by unfairly keeping prices high.

Blame 2 Men For Bush Fires

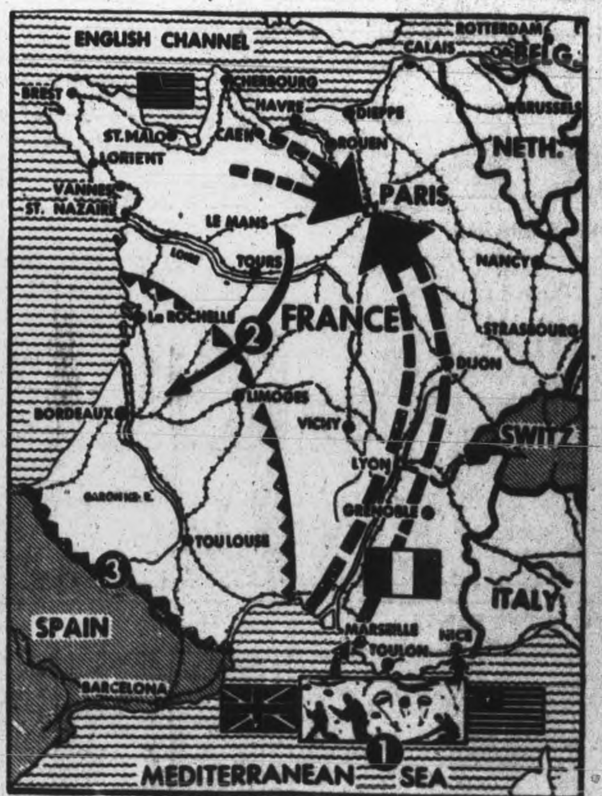
FREDERICTON, Aug. 22 — (CP) — A long-awaited rain falling steadily brought hopes to hundreds of fire-fighters throughout New Brunswick that forest and bush fires which have devastated acres upon acres of timberland and threatened a few populated centres would be squelched shortly.

Improvement in the situation was reported from most points where the blazes have been the most devastating and threatening since early last week, after censorship permitted last night to disclose that two men were arraigned here Saturday on charges of arson.

The men, Wilfred Sullivan, a Fredericton taxi driver, and Gerald Gill of neighboring North Devon were remanded until Thursday.

They were arrested Friday and charged with setting fire in the countryside at Cody's, Queen's county, and Kierstead Mountain and Plumsweep, King's County, following outbreaks in those localities. Fires at those points were put out before they had a chance to spread.

Censorship banned publication of the news on "security" grounds, it was learned here while an investigation was going on to find out whether the accused had any accomplices.



BIG SQUEEZE IS ON IN FRANCE—The great vise that will squeeze the Germans in France into surrender or death has now begun to close. The large arrows on the map show where the jaws of the pincers may meet on Paris which is all but in Allied hands. The new invasion front in the south of France (1) shows two Allied columns executing a pincers manoeuvre against Toulon which is expected to fall shortly. Reports say the Germans are pulling away from the Spanish frontier (3) and may possibly set up a defence line across southwest France at (2).

ERASING THE MARKS OF WAR—Frenchmen working under Allied supervision repair the market at Isigny, France, as rehabilitation gets under way in the Normandy town damaged in the fight which dislodged the Nazis in this area.

Churchill Sees Canadian Units

By LYNN HEINZERLING
Associated Press War Correspondent

WITH THE 8TH ARMY NEAR FLORENCE, Aug. 22 — (AP) — Prime Minister Churchill told a brigade of bronzed Canadian tankmen Sunday that the great battle raging in Normandy promises to bring the end of the war much nearer.

"I cannot predict an early end to the war, but I could not guarantee against it ending sooner than we have allowed ourselves to hope," said the Prime Minister as he faced a great circle of fighting men backed by their Sherman tanks not far from the front lines.

Touring the 8th Army front with Gen. Sir Harold Alexander, the Prime Minister visited ground where the Allies fought more than a week to push the Germans back on Florence. He wore the uniform of a Colonel, an honorary rank.

Mr. Churchill nimbly dismounted from Genenral Alexander's car to face the Canadian tank forces which played an extremely vital part in smashing through the Gustav and Hitler line in the Liri valley. About 100 men before him had partcipated in the raid on Dieppe in France.

"I am pleased to see you on the grounds which your exertions have conquered and to assure you how closely the actions and deeds of the Canadians in Italy are watched by everyone in the mother country and, of course, in your beautiful homeland," Mr. Churchill said.

After mentioning his visit to Canada a year ago, he said:

"The strength of will of everybody and of all parties there was never more strongly resolved to continue this righteous war to a victorious conclusion.

"The enemy is still active and strong and the German army still fights with the relics of its old efficiency. But behind the lines, weakness and division are spreading and everywhere, there are signs of internal decay and dull apathy overtaking the weak.

Dissension Exists.

"The dissension is such that when a general does to Berlin, he doesn't know whether he is to be promoted or hanged."

He spoke for about five minutes.

"If the battle now proceeding in Northern France turns out to be the biggest of the whole war," he said, "One of the great hopes is that conclusion of our toil may be much nearer."

He said the Canadians "have displayed the qualities of integrity, determination, elasticity and the unity of the Commonwealth and Empire," and added:

"Whether here or on the fields of Normandy, they are showing that genius in combat on which the road to victory is built. God bless you."

The massed troops cheered loudly.
